T. 177^e. Friend, enter through the door into the sheepfold, that is, into the Church.

380. 'To enter into the sheepfold' (John x. 1)=into the Church, and also into Heaven.

E. 433⁶. See SHEEP.

A. 2959. 'Shekel'=price, or estimation. —⁵, ill.

—⁵. 'Shekel of holiness,' because the price or estimation regards truth and good from Him. Ill.

—⁷. 'The shekel was twenty gerahs'=the estimation of the good of remains.

— . Therefore the shekel was also a weight according to which the price of gold and silver was estimated.

3104. 'Shekel'=the price or estimation of good and truth.

— . 'Half a shekel'=the determination of its quantity.

9082. 'Thirty shekels of silver' (Ex. xxi. 32)=restitution of the injury to the full through truth.

10218. 'Shekel of holiness'=the truth which is of the Lord alone.

10221. 'The half of a shekel in the shekel of holiness' (Ex. xxx. 13)=all things of truth from good; 'a half'=all; and 'a shekel'=truth from good; because a shekel was a weight of silver and also of gold; and the shekel, regarded in itself as a weight, denotes the quantity; and when it is said 'the shekel of holiness,' it denotes the quantity of truth and good; for these are holy.

10222. 'Twenty oboli a shekel' (id.)=all things of good; for 'twenty'=all things, the remains of good, and what is holy. . . Hence it is evident why the shekel was of twenty gerahs or oboli, and why it is called 'the shekel of holiness.' Ill.

—^e. That the shekel was a weight of both silver and gold. Ill.

10260. 'In the shekel of holiness' (ver. 24)=the estimation of truth and good as to its quantity and quality.

A. 616. 'Noah begat three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth' (Gen. vi. 10)=three kinds of doctrines. 617. 600. 1065.

765^e. 'Shem, Ham, and Japheth,' when named, =the man of the Church; but when called 'sons'=truths of faith, (or doctrinals). 768, Ex. 769.

773. All these Churches, called 'Shem, Ham, and Japheth,' together constitute the Ancient Church.

975. (In the Ancient Church) 'Shem' = internal worship. 1140.

[A.] 1062. 'Shem'=the internal Church. Ex. . . In every Church there are internal men . . . who make charity the principal. . . These, in the Ancient Church, were called 'Shem.' 1083, Ex.

1082. 'Shem and Japheth took a garment . . .' (Gen. ix.23)=that the internal Church, and the corresponding external one, interpreted for good. Ex.

1091. Shem is named first (because) charity is the first of the Church.

1096. 'Blessed be Jehovah the God of Shem' (ver.26) =all good for those who worship the Lord from internal things.

—². 'Shem'=the internal Church, which is so called from charity, in which the Lord is present.

1098. 'Shem'=the man of the internal Church. Des. 1100^e.

1102. 'He shall dwell in the tents of Shem' (ver.27) =that the internals of worship be in the externals.

— . 'Shem'=the internal Church, or internal worship.

1127. When I spoke with those called 'Shem,' they inflowed softly through the region of the head into the region of the breast towards the heart, but not to the heart. D.4106.

1136. On internal worship, which is 'Shem,' and its extension even to the second Ancient Church. Tr.

1141^e. Those called 'sons of Shem' were internal men, and worshipped the Lord, and loved the neighbour. Their Church was almost such as is our true Christian Church.

1146. 'Shem'=true internal worship.

1218. 'Shem' (Gen.x.21)=the Ancient Church in general, because he here regards Eber. 1221.

4764. Joseph's brethren, being shepherds, =those who teach from faith.

5201. 'Fed in the sedge' (Gen.xli.2)=instruction.

—². That 'to feed'=to be instructed. Ill.

—³. Hence it is customary to speak of feeding in relation to preaching, or instruction from doctrine or the Word; but comparatively, and not significantly as in the Word. . . . When there is discourse (there) about instruction . . . meadows with flocks are represented.

5495. Fodder is the food with which asses are fed.

5670. 'To give fodder,' which is to feed, = to instruct.

5913^e. Those in internal goods of charity are called 'a flock,' and he who leads them 'a shepherd.'

6044. 'The men are shepherds of the flock' (Gen. xlv. 32) = that they lead to good; for 'a shepherd' = one who teaches and leads; but in the internal sense are meant the truths which lead to good. Ex. 6074.

6048. Their 'works' were to feed flocks, thus to act as shepherds: these works = goods; in special, goods from truths. Ex.

6049². 'To feed' (Is. xxx. 23) = to be instructed in truths and about goods.

6052. 'Every shepherd . . . is an abomination to the Egyptians' (Gen. xlv. 34) = (that) perverted scientifics are opposed to the scientifics of the Church. . . . 'A shepherd of the flock' = one who leads to good; [and it is] the Scientific which confirms good to which the perverted Scientific is opposed. 6074.

6277. 'God who fed - parvens - me' (Gen. xlviii. 15) = that Divine vivifying . . . 'To feed' = to instruct.

6779. 'The shepherds came and drove them away' (Ex. ii. 17) = that those who teach, being in evils, opposed themselves. 'Shepherds,' here, = those who teach, but, being in evils, do not lead to the good of charity.

6827. 'Moses was feeding the flock of Jethro' (Ex. iii. 1) = that the law from the Divine instructed those in the truth of simple good.

7679^e. 'To feed on wind' (Hos. xii. 1) = to 'multiply a lie.' (= to imbue falsity. E. 654⁵⁸.)

10061⁴. 'The worthless shepherd who deserteth the flock' (Zech. xi. 17) = one who teaches and leads to evil. (See E. 600¹⁷.)

R. 406². 'Ships'= Knowledges of good and truth. Ill.

463. A magnificent dock in which were vessels great and small, seen. Ex. T.462.

—⁶. A vessel with seven sails seen flying in the air. Des. and Ex. T.462⁶.

786². 'Ships'=spiritual merchandize, which is the Knowledges of truth and good; here (Rev.xviii.16) natural merchandize . . . 789.

T. 32^e. Lest the tempest . . . submerge the ship . . .

342^e. Like those who weave a little ship=naviculum of reeds.

378. Like a ship laden with wares of greatest value, storm driven . . .

381³. Like a little ship which can sail with the wind or against it.

434^e. Carried away like ships . . . while hypocrites steer.

D. 243. (A dream of crossing a tumultuous sea in a vessel.)

2240. (A dream of a ship.)

5941^e. They then represent a ship.

E. 242¹⁷. 'Ships of Tarshish'=general Knowledges of truth and good in which are many things in particular. 304²⁷. Compare 406¹⁰. 410³. 514⁵-514⁹.

355²¹. 'Ships'=scientific and doctrinal things in both senses. Ill.

406¹⁰. 'Ships'= Knowledges of truth and good from the Word.

447³. 'Ships'=doctrinal things and Knowledges of all kinds.

513¹⁶. 'To cast the net on the right side of the ship=navigii' (John xxi.6)=that all things [be done] from the good of love and of charity. 600⁷.

514. 'Ships'=Knowledges of good and truth, also doctrinals, because they carry wealth over the sea for trading. . . In a restricted sense, in which the containant is meant, 'ships'=the Word, and doctrine from it, because these contain Knowledges of truth and good, as ships contain wealth; and to trade, which is especially done by means of ships, =to procure Knowledges and communicate them to others. But when the contents are understood, 'ships'=Knowledges from the Word, and from doctrine from the Word. Ill.

—¹⁰. 'A ship of oar' (Is.xxxiii.21)=intelligence from proprium, because propelled by men; 'a magnificent ship'=wisdom from proprium . . . For 'a ship'=intelligence and wisdom when it goes to sea and passes across; for so it is in its course, carrying wealth.

—¹². 'They that go down to the sea in ships, doing work in many waters'=those who intently study the doctrine of truth from the Word.

—¹⁴. 'Ships'=falsities and falsifications of truth of every kind.

—¹⁸. 'Ships from the coast of Chittim' (Num.xxiv.24)=Knowledges of truth and good possessed by the Ancient Church.

—¹⁹. 'Why shall Dan fear ships?' (Judg.v.17)=why did he not repel falsities and doctrinals of falsity?

—²⁰. The Lord taught from a ship=navigio=because a ship=navis=to teach from doctrine. Ill.

538¹⁰. 'The ships' of Tyre=the Knowledges of good and truth, or the truths of the natural man, which they acquire and which they vend; here, Falsities. 1146³.

[E.] 1170. 'Those employed upon ships' (Rev. xviii. 17) = those in intelligence.

1176. 'To have ships in the sea' (ver. 19) = to confirm these things by reasonings from the natural man.

Inv. 18. Like water with a wrecked ship below.

40. Like a wrecked ship of which only the top of the mast protrudes.

6018². When naked, I communicated with the Celestial Kingdom; when I lay in a shirt, with the Spiritual Kingdom.

6036. Like those buried in shrouds—indusiis feralibus.

Shittim. Schittim.

Shittah. Schittah.

A. 9472. 'Shittim woods' (Ex. xxv. 5) = the goods of merit which are from the Lord, thus of the Lord alone. Ex.

—. Shittim wood was the wood of the most excellent cedar, (see CEDAR); as is evident from 'I will place in the wilderness the cedar of Shittah' (Is. xli. 19); where 'the cedar of Shittah' = spiritual good.

9486. 'Of Shittim woods' (ver. 10) = righteousness; for 'Shittim wood' = the good of merit which is of the Lord alone; thus also righteousness, which is the good of merit. Ex. 9715, Ex.

—². As by the ark is signified Heaven where the Lord is, Shittim wood was employed for its construction . . .

9491. For within there was Shittim wood . . . and by Shittim wood is signified the good itself proceeding from His Divine Human.

9496. 'Shittim woods' = the good of merit which is of the Lord alone. 9528. 9662. 9674. 9689.

9634. Hence the boards were of Shittim wood, by which is signified the good which supports Heaven.

9635. 'With Shittim woods' (Ex. xxvi. 15) = the good of merit from His Divine Human . . . This good is the only good which reigns in Heaven, and supports it.

10178. 'With Shittim woods thou shalt make it' (Ex.

xxx. 1) = from love Divine. 'Shittim wood' = the good of merit and of righteousness which is of the Lord alone. The reason it also = love, is that when the Lord was in the world He fought from Divine love against all the Hells . . . and thus saved the human race, and hence alone has merit, and has become righteousness; and therefore the Lord's good of merit is His Divine love. That 'Shittim wood' is of such and so great a signification. Ex.

10193. 'Staves with Shittim woods' (ver. 5) = power from the good of love of the Lord.

Ad. 3/1298. The wood called 'Shittim,' which was a tree on mount Sinai, or at its base, signifies a most noble cedar. It is a mountain tree, excellent before other trees from its aromatic oil, thus from its odour, and purity.

E. 294². 'The cedar of shittah' = genuine truth. (=rational truths. 730²⁴.)

391²². That 'shittim wood' = the good of righteousness or of merit of the Lord. Refs.

D. 3757. Others know how to make shoes. (But) if the brutes had had need of shoes—calceamentis—they would have made them much better than man.

5814^e. They can serve as ultimates in His Kingdom, which correspond to the shoes of the feet; for a shoe appeared which touched their faces.

D. Min. 4720^e. He was called a shoemaker, because he was in the outermost natural things, which are signified by shoes—calceamenta.

E. 240³. 'To put the shoe from off the foot' (Is. xx. 2), that is, to unshoe—discalcare—the soles of the feet, = to reveal the filthy things of nature. . . 'Naked and barefoot—discalceatum' (id.) = deprived of all truth and of all good. 532³. 655¹¹. 805⁵.

279⁶. 'Put shoes on his feet' (Luke xv. 22) = the same in the external man.

375²⁷. 'I shod thee with badger' (Ezek. xvi. 10) = to instruct in the Knowledges of truth and good from the sense of the letter.

438⁵. That the ultimate of the Word is natural truth and good, is signified by 'thy shoe iron and brass' (Deut. xxxiii. 25).

D. Love xiv. (With such) God is the shoe. But with those who love us . . . they themselves are the soles beautifully shod.

Silver Age. Saeculum Argenteum.

See under AGE-saeculum.

A. 4326³. The Ancients, whose Age was called Silvern, because they were in a state of Truth, and thence in charity . . .

5658². They called those times Silvern when there was no longer innocence, but still a species of integrity, which did not consist in the fact that they did good from good, but that they did truth from truth.

10355³. As the man of the Church was then in spiritual good, which good in its essence is truth, they called those times the Silver Age; for silver = such good.

H. 115. Those succeeded who did not think from the correspondences themselves, but from the knowledge of correspondences; and there was conjunction of Heaven with man then also, but not so intimate. Their time is what is called the Silver Age.

M. 76. (The people who had lived in the Silver Age, visited and fully des.)

—³. All those who lived in the Silver Age—Argenteo Aevo—were possessed of intelligence from spiritual and thence natural Truths. The like is signified by silver.

E. 70. They called the second Age Silvern, because there then reigned truth from that good, or spiritual good, and thence intelligence.

Simeon. Schimcon.

A. 340^e. 'Simeon' means that [his mother] was less dear.

342. 'Simeon' = faith in act.

1574^e. 'Simeon' represents the Lord as to spiritual things thence.

3759. Exercise according to this truth (of faith) (being the second degree of the ascent) is signified by (the second son of Jacob by Leah), namely, Simeon.

3861^e. Simeon named from 'He hath heard.' 3869^e, Ex.

3862³. 'Simeon' = faith of the will which is from the Lord.

—¹. Progress is made thence to will truth, which is 'Simeon.'

3863³. Faith in the will is that which is signified by 'Simeon.' 3869².

3869. See HEAR.

3870². Will and affection contrary to charity are described by 'Simeon and Levi' (Gen. xlix. 3, 4).

4515. 'Simeon' = faith; in the opposite, falsity . . . here, therefore (Gen. xxxiv. 30) what is representative of spiritual things.

4606. See JUDAH.

—¹. In the supreme sense, 'Simeon' = Providence; in the internal, faith in the will; in the external, obedience.

5354¹². Manasseh accepted instead of Simeon. Ex.

—¹. For 'Simeon' = faith in act, or the obedience and will of doing truth, from which and through which is charity; thus the truth in act which is the good of the new Voluntary.

5461. 'Let one of your brethren (Simeon) be bound' (Gen.xlii.19)=that faith in the will shall be separated. (For) when faith in the will, or the will of doing the truth of faith, is separated from those who are in the truths of the Church, the connection with the Divine is (extremely) slight. Ex. 5482, Ex. 5526. 5538.

5472^e. Faith in life and will is the faith represented by 'Simeon.'

5626. 'Simeon' (Gen.xliii.13,14)=faith in the will, thus the good of faith; for when the truth of faith passes into the will, it becomes the good of faith; for the truth then passes into the man's life; and, when it is there, it is regarded not as what is to be known, but as what is to be done; from which it changes its essence, and becomes actual, and is no longer called truth, but good. 5630.

5665. 'He brought Simeon out to them' (ver.23)=that he adjoined willing to truths. For 'Simeon'=faith in the will, or the will of doing the truth which is of faith.

6024². 'The sons of Simeon'=faith in the will and its doctrinal things in general.

6238. 'As Reuben and Simeon they shall be mine' (Gen.xlviii.5)=that they shall be truth and the good of truth. . . 'Simeon'=faith in the will, thus truth in act, which is the good of faith, or the good of truth; thus, in general, the good which is of the new Voluntary.

—^e. When Manasseh was accepted instead of Simeon, there remained with Simeon the representative of faith in the will.

6352^e. 'Simeon' (Gen.xlix.5)=falsity in the will.

7184. 'Reuben,' 'Simeon,' and their families (Ex.vi.) represent the things of faith.

9093³. 'Simeon and Levi' here represent those in faith separated from charity.

9642⁸. 'The tribe of Simeon'=the truth of faith in the life thence.

R. 356. 'Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed 12,000' (Rev.vii.7)=spiritual love, which is love towards the neighbour, or charity, with those who will be of the Lord's New Heaven and New Church. (=obedience, and that all in it are in Heaven. E.443.)

—'. 'Simeon,' in the supreme sense, = Providence; in the spiritual, love towards the neighbour, or charity; and in the natural, obedience and hearing.

—'. Those in the Spiritual Kingdom are here treated of, whose love is called spiritual love, which is . . . charity. Simeon and his tribe represented this love, and signify it in the Word, because he was born after Reuben, and next before Levi; and Reuben, Simeon, and Levi=truth in the understanding, or faith; truth in the will, or charity; and truth in act, or good work: the same as Peter, James, and John.

—'. As Simeon and his tribe represented truth in the will, which is both charity and obedience, he was named from 'hearing.'

E. 443. Those in and who come into the First Heaven, are signified by 'Simeon,' etc. These are all in the obedience of doing truths and goods, which are the precepts in the Word, or in the doctrine of the Church into which they have been born, or are from a master or leader. Des.

—³. The reason Simeon and his tribe=those in obedience, is that Simeon was named from 'to hear.'

—'. As 'Simeon'=obedience, he also=faith; for faith is faith with man when he obeys the commandments . . . This faith which is obedience is signified also by Peter, when he is named 'Simon.' (See SIMON.)

—⁶. In the opposite, Simeon and his tribe, =no obedience, and falsity in the will; and thence faith separated from the will, which is not faith. Ill.

—⁸. But although Simeon and Levi were such, elsewhere they=the faith of charity, and charity . . . and therefore 'the tribe of Simeon,' here and elsewhere, =obedience, the faith of charity, the affection of truth; and, in general, truth from good.

555¹⁰. 'Simeon' (Zech.xii.13)=truth and good as to perception and obedience.

1844^e. The true members of the Church are regarded as simple . . .

1910^e. There is nothing, however simple it appears, which is not composite.

1911⁶. Intellectual truth is first manifest when man believes from a simple heart that it is true because so said by the Lord.

2094. They who believe this simply have no need to know how it was done.

—². They who believe the Word simply have no need to know all these things, because they are in the end.

2525. That it was so thought from innocence and simple good. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Rectitude' in the Hebrew is expressed by a word which means also integrity and perfection, likewise simplicity.

2526². From innocence (good) becomes simple good.

2588⁷. Composite things cannot enter into simple ones; thus not those of the body into those of the spirit; but the reverse.

2591. Among Gentiles, as among Christians, there are wise and simple. H. 322.

2594. At this day most Gentiles are simple in heart. H. 324.

2699². Some . . . of simple faith appear to themselves in white and shining garments . . .

2759. A volume rose up . . . They were rusties and other simple ones . . . They had lived in conjugal love simply.

2760, Pref.². Peter was a very simple man.

2796². These things revealed in the internal sense . . . are in some degree intelligible to a man who lives in simple good.

3242³. 'Midian'=those in the truth of simple good, and thus allow themselves to be easily persuaded.

3263³. 'Ishmael'=those of the Spiritual Church, who as to life are in simple good, and therefore as to doctrine are in natural truth.

—^e. 'Ear-rings of gold'=the things which are of simple good.

3268⁷. 'The inhabitants of the land of Tema'=those in simple good, such as the upright gentiles are in.

— . 'Kedar'=those in simple truth.

—⁸. 'The isles of Chittim'=the gentiles who are in simple good, and thence in natural truth.

3318⁴. After (temptations) man becomes mild, humble, simple . . .

3322⁵. 'Edom'=those in simple good, which is such good as is with those who constitute the Lord's External Church. In like manner 'Moab,' and 'the sons of Ammon.'

3428³. When yet the simple, who are in good, and whom they despise, can perceive in a moment . . . that the thing is, and its quality.

3436². One in simple good, who believes the Word simply, according to its literal sense, is gifted with the faculty of perceiving truths when instructed (there); and in the mean time the few truths he has are vivified by charity and innocence; and (then) the falsities which have infused themselves . . . are not hurtful. Ex.

3482^e. Of the learned much fewer (believe there is a Heaven) than of the simple.

3660². However much natural good and truth may appear to man as one simple thing . . .

3747. The learned know less about these things than the simple.

3820². Those in such simple zeal are subject to the greatest infestations by the cunning.

—^e. Those in external truths and at the same time in simple good, in the other life receive internal truths, and thence wisdom; for from simple good they are in the state and faculty for receiving them.

3839. For there are few in affections of spiritual and celestial love, and those few are mostly simple persons, who cannot reflect upon their affections.

3900². By which the simple suffer themselves to be seduced.

3982³. (The Word in the letter adapted to the simple.) 6839. S.40. 51.

3986⁵. Such good (as is not genuine) is wont to be with the simple within the Church, who know few truths, but live in charity . . . Through such good, genuine truths and goods can be introduced . . .

3995². It is not of such great importance for the simple to know (these distinctions), provided they live in charity; for charity is the life of faith.

4067³. The good in man appears to him as something simple . . . but is so multiple . . .

4225². If (the evil) enter Heaven in any way . . . they are admitted only to the first entrance, that is, to those who are still simple . . . but they can stay scarcely any moments, because the life of love to the Lord and towards the neighbour is there.

4227. Calling the counsels of the upright simple and bad.

4269^e. Yet those in simple good from simple faith are in the faculty of knowing the things (of angelic wisdom) . . .

4302⁶. Thus, on account of the discordance and dissuasion of the natural man, it is better to be in simple good, although in the denial of truth. Sig.

4654. Thus they had been in simple obedience. Ex.

4720³. Every Church, at first, knows nothing but the generals of doctrine; for it is then in its simplicity.

4754. Those in simple good acknowledge that the Lord's Human is Divine, and that works of charity are to be done for man to be saved. Those in faith separated know this, and therefore insist on this faith . . . scarcely at all before those in simple good . . . for if they denied such things those in simple good would say they were fools; for they know what love is and works of love; but not what faith separated from these is. Argumentations in favour of faith against works, and about the distinction between the Human and the Divine of the Lord, they would call sophisms; and therefore they willingly concede that [these truths] and what is from them, should be accepted. Sig.

4760⁴. It is known that the learned believe in the life after death less than the simple; and that, in general, they see Divine truths less than the simple. Ex.

—e. Hence it was that the simple believed in the Lord; but not the scribes and Pharisees.

—e. 'Babes' = the simple.

4783. (Thus) the sense of the letter is of service to the simple for initiation into the internal sense.

4788². For those in the truth of simple good mostly suffer themselves to be led away by the fallacies of the senses, thus by the scientifics which are from them. Sig.

4951². They can make others weep, and can also strike fear, (from) having been with the sick and simple, for the sake of obtaining wealth . . .

5058. (A deceitful man) was admitted into a Society where are the simple good, who are in front above the head . . . and the good there, who were simple, began to lament that he was taking from them the perception of good and truth . . .

5084⁴. A fallacy of sense that there are simple substances, which are monads and atoms.

5433². Saying at heart that these truths are for the simple.

5759. Those who . . . from ignorance or simplicity, attribute truth and good to themselves, are not condemned; but are freed by a method of vastation.

—e. Not so those who do this not from ignorance and simplicity . . . but still, as they do what is good, the Lord . . . reserves with them something of ignorance and simplicity.

6053^e. For the simple . . . believe that they will live after death, in which simple faith, unknown to them, is latent [the idea] that they will live there as men . . .

6071⁵. The simple and infants ought to believe (that God rewards the good, and punishes the evil). Ex.

6167. This (arcanum) is among the things best known even to simple Spirits.

6316. When these (learned) are promoted to honours, they live more sensuously than the simple; and then believe it to be of simplicity to attribute anything to the Divine.

6391³. They call those in a different state simple.

6774^e. Those in the truths of simple good care for no sense but the literal.

6779^e. These are they who set themselves in opposition to the doctrine of charity, consequently to those who are in the truth of simple good. Sig.

6828. After those in the truth of simple good had undergone temptations. Sig. and Ex.

[A.] 6914³. They were kept in external bonds . . . and then simple good Spirits were adjoined to them ; as is also done with men in the world, who, although interiorly devils, are kept in external bonds . . . and, in order (to this) Spirits who are in simple good are adjoined to them . . . Evil Spirits, who are in like love . . . lead them, and to these are adjoined simple good Spirits.

—⁴. After the Lord's advent . . . those simple good Spirits were adjoined to those who are of the Spiritual Church (in Heaven ; and thus) were enriched with the truths and goods previously possessed by the evil Genii and Spirits.

6997². A most general truth for the simple.

7015. What is continuous of life in simple good. Sig.

— . The good of the Church which is in the truth of simple good [is the] good [which] is meant by simple good.

7137. Those who most nearly receive and communicate (the infestation) are simple upright Spirits, who serve especially for such a use. Sig. and Ex.

7263. The names ('poor,' etc.) are in the Word . . . that the simple may understand and do the Word simply, and the wise wisely ; and also that by the externals of charity the simple may be initiated into its internals.

7291^e. Internals are relatively purer and simple.

7332². (They are permitted to falsify truths) lest they should seduce the simple upright Spirits with whom they have communication through truths.

7655. That all who harass those simple ones are cast into Hell. Sig. . . Those of the Spiritual Church are here called those simple ones ; for the evil call all those simple who are of the Church and live according to its truths and goods.

7663^e. 'Children' = simplicities.

8478^e. They call those simple who do not attribute all things to self or nature.

8546. They said that it is more simple to say (that they can do good of themselves) ; and the Lord leaves it to those to say so who live in simplicity and innocence.

8588⁶. Their external worship communicated with angelic Spirits who are simple and do not reflect on internals . . . Such correspond to the cuticles.

8705. Every simple person has such an idea about intercession and mediation from the sense of the letter.

—². The sense of the letter is according to the apprehension of simple men, so that they may be introduced into interior truths. Ex.

8870³. By externals (hypocrites) would communicate with Heaven, namely, with those in the circuits, and are simple, who correspond to the cuticles . . .

9025². The literal sense is for the simple, etc.

9033^e. Being an apparent truth, it must not be . . . extinguished ; for so would be extinguished the faith in the Word which [exists] with the simple.

9278³. However much they may call those simple who are in good of life from truths of doctrine . . . the simplicity of these is wisdom before the Angels.

9410^e. Let the simple remain in their doctrine that they are saved by the blood of the Lord, provided they live according to His Divine truth . . .

9696. (The Spirits of the First Earth) are modest, somewhat simple . . .

9938². All the wise at heart see this appearance, but not so the simple ; but still the gifts and presents of the latter are grateful, in so far as they are made from ignorance in which is innocence.

9942¹⁰. To deprive of their spiritual truths those who live in simple good. Sig.

10185^e. The simple apprehend this ; but not the wise of the world.

10492⁴. The internal is closed with more of the intelligent than of the simple, because the intelligent . . . are more in the loves of self and the world than the simple ; and are also in the faculty of confirming evils and falsities . . . by the scientifics in which they are more than the simple.

10737^e. This interior perception has perished in the Christian world, and remains only with the simple who are in faith.

H. 1⁴. Lest this Negative should infect and corrupt also the simple in heart and the simple in faith, it has been granted me to be together with the Angels . . . 312⁴.

18. In love there is every faculty of receiving the truths which agree with itself ; (thus) those who had been simple in the world come into angelic wisdom and happiness when they come among the Angels. Ex.

50. (The best of the Angels live outside the Societies, but are ordained in the same way) the wiser being in the middle, and the more simple in the boundaries.

74³. The simple in faith and heart . . . have the idea that Angels are the men of Heaven, because they have not extinguished by erudition their implanted [perception] which is from Heaven . . .

82. The simple see God in thought as the Ancient One, in brightness.

86². Those they call simple know all these things in their way. They have an idea of their God that He is the Divine in a human form ; of an Angel that he is a heavenly man ; of their own soul which will live after death that it is like an Angel ; and of the life of Heaven with man that it is to live according to the Divine commandments. These, therefore, the Angels call intelligent, and fitted for Heaven.

183². Such (spiritual) ignorance reigns more with the intelligent within the Church than with those whom they call the simple.

244. The speech of the simple (in Heaven) is still more exterior. Ex.

268^e. Certain simple ones, when taken up into Heaven, have come into angelic wisdom. Des.

278². (Those in a state of innocence) for the most part appear simple in the external form, but are wise and prudent in the internal. These are meant by: 'Be ye prudent as serpents, and simple as doves.'

280². (The Angels of the Third Heaven) appear simple in the external form . . . and like those who are not very wise . . . W.427³.

310. (The Word despised) on account of its simple style.

313. (Many of the learned there confess) that the simple in faith had thought much more wisely (about the life after death) than they.

346. On the wise and simple in Heaven. Chapter.

350. Those who have loved truth and good little are those called simple. . . The simple (in Heaven) are in less light (than the wise) . . .

351^e. The simple of this kind are those whose interiors have been opened, but not so cultivated by spiritual, moral, civil, and natural truths. These perceive truths when they hear them, but do not see them in themselves.

356^e. The simple there are those who have acknowledged the Divine, loved the Word, and lived a spiritual moral life; but have not cultivated so much their interiors which are of the mind by means of knowledges.

391. Some Societies . . . teach the simple good from the Christian world, and lead them into the way to Heaven.

469. Those who have been in any truth from simple good are (there) imbued with Knowledges.

479⁵. Some simple good Spirits have wanted to instruct the evil in truths and goods . . .

506^e. By appearances of what is good, etc. they would seduce the simple in heart and faith.

531. Believes that holy things serve only as a bond for the simple crowd.

540^e. (If the Lord did not preserve the equilibrium) falsities from evils would . . . affect the simple good who are in the ultimates of Heaven, who can be perverted more easily than the Angels.

588². A simple idea concerning each evil (is not correct).

602. Some of the simple common people . . . were brought into the state in which they had been here (and were examined as to their ideas about the future life, which are fully stated). The intelligent wondered that the simple had such a faith, while they had it not. (Thus) with every man who is in conjunction with Heaven there is an implanted [perception] about the life after death. Ex.

J. 37. (Rareness of faith at this day, with both learned and simple.)

56³. (The Papists there) allure to themselves simple good Spirits . . . and thus, through the simple good, conjoin themselves with Heaven . . . For the simple good, who are in the ultimates of Heaven, look no further than to a holy external . . . Hence is the greatest safeguard (the Papists) have.

70. Such (imaginary) Heavens were tolerated because they were conjoined with the simple good in the Ultimate Heaven and World of Spirits . . . (who) look especially to externals . . .

L. 55². Therefore, Christians, who at the beginning were simple . . . distinguished the Divinity into three Persons, which was permitted on account of their simplicity.

S. 24. The science of correspondences was not disclosed (then), because the Christians in the primitive Church were very simple . . .

72. The Word in the Heavens is so written that the simple understand it simply, and the wise wisely. Ex.

W. 204. It appears as if . . . simple things must be less perfect than composite ones; yet the simples out of which composites are formed are more perfect; for prior or simpler things are more naked, and less covered over with substances . . . devoid of life; and are as it were more Divine, and are therefore nearer the spiritual Sun . . . All that is simple, the more simple it is, being more perfect, the more free it is from injury.

207. Inmostly in these (fibres, etc.) are the most simple things which are the most perfect . . .

—^e. These are successive compositions . . . from simples, which are their first substances.

229. It is held by some that there is a substance so simple that it is not a form from lesser forms . . . But such most simple substances have no existence. Ex. P. 6.

— . There are innumerable things in the most simple substance of all.

243. Simple Spirits fully understood the arcana of angelic wisdom; but only when they heard them. Ex.

312. The first production from earths, while they were . . . in their simplicity, was seeds.

361³. The simple see more clearly what is good and true . . .

P. 6. The simpler a thing is, the fuller it is.

R. 287. Truths are multiple, but goods simple.

294. Man has no double speech (there), but a simple one: he speaks as he thinks.

812². Before His Human is acknowledged to be Divine, there is a marriage of the Lord with the Church; but only with those who approach the Lord and think of His Divine . . . So do the simple in faith and heart, and rarely the learned.

878. 'The sea' = the external of Heaven and the Church, in which are the simple, who have thought naturally and very little spiritually about the things of the Church.

M. 115². Only those who had been in simple faith from charity, or in some truth from good (could see the Angel).

207⁴. Among the Angels there are simple and wise; and the wise have to judge, when the simple, from their simplicity and ignorance, are in doubt about what is just, or depart from it.

252. Extreme simplicity, so that there is no perception of what is good and true (a cause of lawful separation).

329. This (insect) appeared to them as a simple substance; but I said, There are innumerable things within it. It is so with every object which appears simple and least, whether in the actions, or the affections and thoughts. . . Everything divided is more and more multiple, and not more and more simple, because it approaches nearer and nearer to the infinite.

[M]. 480. Simple adultery. Def.

I. 17². (Such) terminate their ideas in the atoms of Epicurus, the monads of Leibnitz, or the simple substances of Wolff, and thus close up their understanding . . .

T. 72². (Stupefaction of some who were simple in faith and right at heart at the reasonings about imputation and predestination, and their indignant denunciation of them.)

90². Like the simple substance of Wolff . . .

131. (These) comparisons are for the sake of the simple, who see better from comparisons than deductions from the Word and reason.

147. Those whose external thinks, speaks, wills, and acts from the internal, are meant by the 'simple,' in the Word. III.

354³. A Spirit who appeared simple, because he acknowledged the Lord alone, was taken up into Heaven, and was as wise as the wiser Angels. Des.

366. God's sameness is not simple, but infinite.

403². 'If thine eye be simple,' that is, good.

426². By giving to beggars, etc., children, servants, and, in general, all the simple, are initiated into charity.

443². Those who will well and think rationally, and thence act well and speak rationally, are meant in the Word by 'the simple in spirit.' They are called 'simple' because they are not double.

527. Some cannot examine themselves, as . . . the simple, who have no reflection.

580. The simple and the learned are regenerated differently.

624². Most (of the Angels in the Ultimate Heaven) are simple, because they have not cultivated the understanding with interior truths, but only with exterior ones from the sense of the letter, according to which they have lived. Hence their spiritual mind, although it has not indeed been closed, has not been opened as with those who have received interior truths in doctrine and life. Hence as to spiritual things they have become simple, and are called upright.

— . But the wicked, who have lived exteriorly as Christians . . . although in internal form they were devils . . . are for the most part consociated with the upright, that is, with the simple good who are in the Ultimate Heaven; for exteriors consociate, and the simple good are such that they believe that to be good which in external form appears good. The separation of these. 669.

627⁶. Divine truth in the sense of the letter . . . for the most simple who are sensuous.

825. From these (this heretical dogma) is derived to the simple; but these do not confirm it . . . and retain it only in the memory.

828³. Why (the celestial Angels) appear simple.

834. The simple (in the Ultimate Heaven) believe that every man is the neighbour . . .

886^e. The simple who receive the faith signified by 'the beast' acknowledge it as the truth of the Church.

1067³. Before a worldly man, the Word appears so simple . . . 1079².

1114^e. These ideas of God are not so much those of the simple . . .

J. (Post.) 263. Concerning the simple substance, Leibnitz said . . .

275. They spurn those in the south and east (of London) as simple ones.

D. Love xi. Those in the ultimates of Heaven . . . are in the shade of wisdom, and are simple.

xiv^e. Believe themselves wise, and all others simple.

De Just. 63. Calvin was an upright man, but simple.

C. 52. The simple say that every man is equally the neighbour . . . and that God looks to his character . . . but this is not to love the neighbour.

53. In the other life such simple ones are withdrawn and separated; for if they come among diabolical

Spirits, they are allured to benefit them, and to do evil to the good. . . This is the greatest strength which the evil acquire . . .

1983⁴. A kind of simultaneous [rush] of reasonings . . .

3035^e. From successives is that which is together.

3720^e. In the ultimate all interior things are terminated and are together; and, as they are together there, and thus innumerable things are viewed together as a one, there is relative obscurity there.

4009^e. As, in the Sensuous . . . prior things are together . . .

4618^e. If the ultimate corresponds with the prior things, these are together in it.

5897. Where inmosts and interiors are together.

6451². (Thus) interiors are together in the ultimate. Ex.

— . Simultaneous order arises from successive; for everything simultaneous arises from what is successive; and, when it has arisen, it comes forth such.

—³. As all things are together in the ultimate, there is the appearance as if life were in the ultimate . . .

6465^e. That all interiors are together in exteriors. Ex.

8630. Being of a different native quality, they cannot be together.

8700⁴. Thus it is not possible for the evil and good to be together.

9824². (As to) successive and simultaneous things, successives which proceed in their order, present themselves together in ultimates. Examp.

9836³. (As to) the successive and derivative simultaneous things in nature, the successives at last form what is simultaneous in the ultimates, in which they are in a like order collaterally. And therefore the simultaneous things serve the successive as corresponding fulera . . .

9866. For the derivative Simultaneous . . . corresponds to the successives . . .

S. 37. The two prior senses . . . are together in the natural sense.

38. In simultaneous order one thing is next another, from inmosts to outmosts. . . Simultaneous order is like a work coherent with its circumferences from centre to surface.

— . How successive order becomes, in the ultimate, simultaneous order. The highest things of successive order become the inmost ones of simultaneous order, and the lowest things of successive order become the outmost ones of simultaneous order. Examp.

—². Thus what is simultaneous is formed from what is successive, and this in each and all things of the natural world, and in each and all things of the Spiritual World . . .

— . As to the Word, the Celestial, Spiritual, and Natural proceed from the Lord in successive order, and in the ultimate are in simultaneous order; and thus the celestial and spiritual senses are together in the natural sense.

49^e. The reason the power of Divine truth is in the sense of the letter, is that . . . the Angels of both Kingdoms, and men, are in it together.

W. 205. See ORDER. —³. 206. 207. Ath. 112.

P. 12. In effecting these two appear distinct, because the Simultaneous then makes the Successive.

220³. In the extremes or ultimates all interior or higher things are together . . . and therefore all the Lord's operation is from primes and ultimates together, thus in fulness.

296⁷. Man cannot be in both (good and evil) together.

R. 678². With everyone all the interiors of the mind are in successive order and in simultaneous order. . . They are in simultaneous order in the ultimate or last things . . . (Thus) all the concupiscences are in simultaneous order within the evil itself which the man perceives in himself.

M. 183². In the genital region all the derivatives from the first origin are together . . .

T. 377. Charity and faith together (produce good works). Ex.

Ad. 633. Hence is called simultaneous order.

D. 3423. On account of the simultaneous speaking of many Spirits.

4462. They can let themselves together into interior nature, and this simultaneously.

—^e. They do such simultaneous things until they at last become altogether profane.

E. 595². When higher and lower things are together, that is, form what is simultaneous, as in man's head, they coexist in that order. Ex.

666⁴. All interior or higher things coexist in the ultimate, as in their Simultaneous.

726⁵. The reason all power is in ultimates, is that the prior things are in them together; for they coexist there in an order which is called simultaneous order.

S22⁴. The reason the works contain all things of the mind, is that all the successives . . . form in the ultimates what is simultaneous, in which all higher or prior things coexist.

1086⁴. Simultaneous order comes forth in lower things, and fully in the lowest ones; for the higher things let themselves down and place themselves in an order which is called simultaneous, in which the pure and perfect things, which had been higher, are in the middle or centre, and the less pure and perfect things, which had been lower, are in the circumferences. Hence it is that in the ultimates all things are together in their order which had come forth in successive order. (This applied to the Word.)

De Verbo 11. All these degrees of wisdom are in the Word which is in the world, but in simultaneous order; for successive order in its descent becomes simultaneous; and hence what is simultaneous becomes the complex of all its successives; for what is highest in successive order becomes what is inmost in simultaneous order . . . Such a simultaneous is the Word in the world. Des.

A. 313. Everyone who commits actual sin, thereby induces a nature upon himself, and the evil therefrom is implanted in his children . . .

364. 'If thou doest not well, sin coucheth at the door' (Gen.iv.7)=if thou dost not will well, there is no charity, but evil.

— . Sin in general is meant by the devil.

952. He said he was a sinner. Des.

1846². It is not meant that He took sins upon Himself.

2045³. From (the love of self) are all things called sins, etc.

2235⁶. 'Sin' (John xvi.8)=all infidelity.

2240. 'Sin' (Gen.xviii.20)=evil.

2547. 'Thou hast brought on me . . . a great sin' (Gen.xx.9)=the doctrine of faith . . . in danger.

2661². That those of the Spiritual Church could not be saved unless the Lord had come, is meant by, 'I came not to call the just, but sinners to repentance' (Matt.ix.13).

2776⁴. If they only think . . . that He took away their sins . . .

3400. 'Guilt'=the blame or imputation of sin.

—². 'Guilt'=all sin, which remains.

3993¹⁰. If anyone believes himself pure from sins . . . when he has once performed repentance . . . or after confession . . . or after the Holy Supper; if he lives a new life, this falsity can be mingled with good.

4007². To be purified from sins through the reception and putting on of the Lord's righteousness. Sig.

4165. 'What is my sin?' (Gen.xxxi.36)=that it was not of evil. 'Sin'=evil.

4997. 'How shall I do this great evil, and sin to God' (Gen.xxxix.9)=thus disjunction and no conjunction. 'Evil,' and also 'sin,'=disjunction and no conjunction. . . . Evil, regarded in itself, and also sin, is nothing else than disjunction from good. Ex.

—^e. If you want to know what evil, and consequently what sin is, study to know what the love of self and the world is.

5076. 'They sinned' (Gen.xl.1)=inverted order; for 'to sin'=to act against Divine order. Whatever is against this, is sin . . . Those are against this order who are not in truth from good . . . Nothing else is signified by 'sin.'

5229. 'I remember my sins this day' (Gen.xli.9)=concerning the state of disjunction; for 'sins'=the things which are of inverted order; thus 'to remember sins'=to be conjoined with the things of inverted order, consequently to be disjoined from the Natural represented by Pharaoh.

5280². Man is born into sin . . . Every man is born into so many hereditary evils . . . and hence is nothing but sin; and therefore, unless he is regenerated, he remains wholly in sin.

5398. They believe that sins are remitted in an instant; and some that they are wiped away like dirt . . . For they do not know what sin is. . . Sins cannot be wiped away, but they are separated, or rejected to the sides . . . when the man is kept in good by the Lord; which cannot be done unless evil is continually cast out . . . —².

—². They are told that the Lord remits the sins of everyone who from his heart longs for it, but still they are not separated from the diabolical crew . . . They afterwards learn that to be separated from the Hells is to be separated from sins . . . Man is so evil that he cannot be fully delivered from even one sin to eternity; but only by the Lord's mercy, if he has received it, can he be withheld from sin.

5474. 'Sin not against the child' (Gen.xlii.22)=lest they be disjoined, namely, the external from the internal. 'To sin'=disjunction; for all sin disjoins.

5612. 'I shall sin to thee all the days' (Gen.xliii.9)=that the good of the Church will be no longer. 'To sin'=disjunction, thus that it will not be; for what is disjoined from anyone is no more with him. 5841.

5726. As death is from no other source than sin, and sin is all that which is against Divine order, evil closes the smallest vessels . . .

5841. 'To sin' (Gen.xliv.32)=a turning away.

6279². When by 'sin' is meant evil dominant (it=Hell) as in Gen.iv.7.

6563. 'Forgive the transgression of thy brethren and their sin' (Gen.l.17)=supplication and repentance. . . 'Transgression'=evil against truth; and 'sin,' evil against good, which is greater. Ill.

7147. 'Thy people have sinned' (Ex.v.16)=that they have guilt in that they have done evil. 'To sin'=to become guilty of evil . . .

7589. 'I have sinned this time' (Ex.ix.27)=separation from truth and good; for 'to sin'=disjunction and turning away from the Divine, thus from truth and good; consequently also separation (from them).

7614. 'He added to sin' (ver.34)=recession still further. 'To sin'=disjunction, recession, and separation, from truth and good.

7696. 'I have sinned to Jehovah your God and to you' (Ex.x.16)=confession that they have not obeyed the Divine and the truth. 'To sin'=to do [what is] against Divine order, and to avert and separate one's self from it, and thus from good and truth; thus also not to obey the Divine and the truth; for he who does not obey, averts himself.

8364³. All disease is thence, because it is from sin.

—⁵. That diseases=sins. Ill.

8387. He who wants to be saved must confess his sins, and perform repentance.

8388. See CONFESS. 8390.

8393. Sins are remitted (only) by repentance of the life. Sins are continually being remitted . . . but the sins adhere to the man . . . and are not removed from him except by a life according to the precepts . . .

8394. After man . . . has acknowledged his sins . . . he must remain constant . . .

8925. 'That ye sin not' (Ex.xx.20)=the conservation of spiritual life; for spiritual life is preserved by not sinning.

— . To sin is to do and think what is evil and false intentionally—studio—and from the will; for the things (so done) are such as go forth from the heart, and render the man unclean, consequently which destroy spiritual life in him.

9013⁸. See REMIT. 9333², et seq.

524. The sins retained in an impenitent man (and their destructive effects). Shown by comparisons.

525. The knowledge of sin, and the exploration of some sin in one's self, begins repentance. Gen.art. 528, Gen.art. (Compare also 535.)

535. A more easy kind of repentance (is to say), I think, and intend this ; but as it is a sin I will not do it . . . Everyone can . . . say to another, Do not do that, because it is a sin . . . yet few were found able to practise this . . .

539. There is no need of an enumeration of sins before the Lord . . .

—^e. Still, there is no harm in enumerating one's sins before a minister . . .

D. 1559. That everything from man is sin, even when he tries to do good. Fully ex. 1560. 1561. 1628, Ex.

3178. What comes into thought, but not into will, is not sin. If it enters the will, or what is like the will, and he thinks that it is a sin . . . and it is thus shaken off, this cannot be sin, but temptation. Whereas if anything comes into thought, and into will, so that he desires to effect it provided external bonds do not hinder : this is sin. Ill.

4228. Therefore he who believes (this) is free, then, from committing sin ; and whatever evil he seems to himself to commit, believing at the time that . . . there are evil Spirits, who were [present], and who persuaded him—the evil is not appropriated to him. (This belief, however, is possible with those only who are in the faith of charity.)

4480. On the reasoning of some that sins are wiped away in the other life. Ex.

4542. (Many are led by the doctrine of sudden justification to believe that they can sin with impunity.)

4754. (On those who pray for forgiveness of their sins, and still go on committing them.)

5534. They had never thought, This is a sin ; but had abstained only for external reasons.

—². Men may know whether they (can be with the Societies of Heaven, or not) solely from this : whether they have thought in themselves, This is a sin . . .

609⁸. This bishop said that there is no [such thing as] sin ; that adultery is not a sin . . . So said many others . . . because the Lord has borne them . . .

610². He said that it is a sin against the neighbour ; but not against God . . .

E. 32⁸. His having borne the sins of all = that when tempted He admitted into Himself all the Hells ; for thence ascend all sins or evils . . . And His having taken away sins = that He subjugated the Hells, so that . . .

391⁸. 'Iniquity' is said of the life of falsity ; 'sin,' of the life of evil . . . 475¹⁴.

409⁹. 'Everyone doing sin is the servant of sin' (John viii. 34). 'Sin' = Hell, because from Hell.

475⁵. For sins are not washed away like dirt with water ; but they are washed away, that is, removed, by truths and a life according to them.

483¹¹. 'For sin and uncleanness' (Zech. xiii. 1) = the removal of evils and falsities through truths.

617²². The gentiles, meant by 'publicans and sinner.'

624²⁰. 'To consummate transgression, and to seal up sins' (Dan. ix. 24) = when all are in falsities of doctrine and in evils as to life.

710¹⁸. 'Iniquity' = falsity ; 'sin' (Hos. xiii. 12) = the evil of falsity.

768²⁴. 'Sinful nation' (Is. i. 4) = those in evils.

781¹⁸. 'Our transgressions are multiplied before Thee, and our sins answer against us' (Is. lix. 12) = on account of falsities from evil.

802⁶. (They argue that) the evils done by a man justified by faith are not sins, but infirmities of his nature. Ex.

iii. The sins from which man must desist, and which he must shun and be averse to, are especially adulteries, frauds, unlawful gains, hatreds, revenges, lies, revilings, elations of mind.

iv. For the Lord enters, and with Him Heaven, as sins are removed.

— . But if he desists from doing these evils from any other cause than that they are sins . . . he has no conjunction with Heaven. Ex. 825⁴.

v. Then, in proportion as man detests these sins, good affections enter. Enum.

805⁵. To transfer the sins of others to Himself . . . is contrary to the nature of the abolition of sins ; for sins are not abolished except through the repentance of life of him who has sinned . . .

837⁷. He must then learn what evils are sins, first from the decalogue, and afterwards from the Word everywhere ; and he must think that they are sins against God . . . Hence it is that the first of reformation is to desist from sins, to shun them, and at last to be averse to them. But (to do this) he must supplicate the Lord for aid ; and he must shun and be averse to them because they are contrary to the Word . . . and because they are in themselves infernal. (Continued under FLEE, SHUN.)

936². Such a man knows not what sin is.

—⁴. Every man who commences spiritual life because he wants to be saved, is afraid of sins on account of the penalties of Hell ; afterwards, on account of the sin itself, because it is in itself nefarious ; and, finally, on account of truth and good, which he loves . . .

C. 3. So far as anyone does not Know sins . . . he does not see but that he is without sins. Ex. 205.

4. So far as anyone Knows sins . . . he can see them in himself . . . Ex. 206.

203. Evils are called sins from the fact that they are contrary to the Word, and to religion.

205. I have heard some saying that they are sinner . . .

Coro. 35³. I will open the true spring of sins. Every evil is conceived of the devil as a father, and is born of atheistical faith as a mother.

Sin. Sin.

A. 839⁸. 'The wilderness of Sin' (Ex. xvi. 1) = another state of temptation. . . 'Sin' = the quality of that state. From the temptation signified by the murmuring on account of the defect of bread and flesh, and the consolation signified by the manna and quails, it is evident that 'Sin' = the good which is from truth. Hence 'Sin,' which was a city of Egypt from which the wilderness of Sin took its name, in the opposite sense, = the evil which is from falsity. Ill.

839⁹. 'Which was between Elim and Sinai' (id.) = the Continuous and the quality . . . Hence the Continuous and quality signified by 'Sin' is the good which is from truth, (which) is the good with the spiritual man before regeneration . . . whereas the good from which is truth is that which is with him after regeneration . . . The previous good is signified by 'Sin,' the subsequent by 'Sinai.'

855⁸. 'From the wilderness of Sin' (Ex. xvii. 1) = from a state of temptation as to good. . . 'Sin' = the quality and state of temptation as to good.

E. 721¹⁸. 'Egypt,' 'Sin,' and 'No' (Ezek. xxx. 15) = scientifics and fallacies which are of the natural man, which are obstacles to the reformation of man through truths from the Word. That these will be known, but still not received in the life, and that thus [such people] cannot be reformed, is signified by 'Sin shall travail, and there shall not be [strength] to break through,' namely, the womb.

Sinai. Sinai.

A. 795⁶. Mountains = the Lord, and His holy heavenly things, on which account the Lord promulgated the Law from Mount Sinai. 6435¹².

[A.] 1786. When the Lord appeared . . . in Mount Sinai, it was a vision . . .

4311⁵. Why the Israelites were not allowed to approach Mount Sinai. 8797³.

6832. Why He so appeared on Mount Sinai.

8399. 'Sinai' (Ex.xvi.1), from the Law promulgated there, = good and the derivative truth.

—^e. The good from which is truth is the good with the spiritual man after regeneration; for he then does good from affection. . . This good is signified by 'Sinai.'

8658^e. Mount Sinai = the good in which is truth.

8753. 'They came to the wilderness of Sinai' (Ex.xix.1) = a state of good in which the truths of faith are to be implanted. . . 'Sinai' = the truths themselves.

—². Mount Sinai, in the supreme sense, = Divine truth from Divine good; 'mount,' Divine good; and 'Sinai,' Divine truth: in the internal sense, it = the truth of faith from good; here, the truth of faith to be implanted in good, because the Law had not yet been promulgated from it. Ex. and III.

—^e. 'Sinai' (Deut.xxxiii.2) = the truths of faith in the complex.

8793. 'Upon Mount Sinai' (Ex.xix.11) = into the good in which truth is to be implanted.

8805². Mount Sinai, in special, = Heaven, out of which truths flow from the Lord. Hence the descent of Jehovah upon that mountain = His presence in Heaven. And, as Mount Sinai = Heaven, in which is the Lord, it also = the Divine good united to Divine truth there. 8818.

8819. 'The whole of Mount Sinai smoked' (ver.18) = the appearing of heavenly good in the greatest obscurity. Ex.

8822. Mount Sinai = Heaven.

8826. 'Jehovah descended upon Mount Sinai' (ver.20) = the presence of the Lord in Heaven.

8827. 'To the head of the Mount' = in the Inmost Heaven. 8830.

8835. 'The people cannot ascend to Mount Sinai' (ver.23) = that those of the Spiritual Kingdom cannot elevate themselves to the Celestial Kingdom. 'Mount Sinai' = the Celestial Kingdom. Ex.

8916. 'The Mount,' here Mount Sinai, = the Divine good united to the Divine truth in Heaven. 9388^e.

8931². Mount Sinai is here (Ex.xx.22) called 'heaven.'

— This is why Mount Sinai = Heaven, whence is Divine truth.

9414^e. Mount Sinai = the Law, or Divine truth, and the Word such as it is in Heaven; thus also Heaven.

9415. Mount Sinai = the Word which is from the Lord, thus in which is the Lord; consequently also Heaven. Ex.

9420. Mount Sinai, here called 'the mount of God' (Ex.xxiv.13) = the Law, or the Divine truth which is from the Lord, thus the Word such as it is in Heaven; consequently Heaven.

—². That Mount Sinai = the Law, or the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord's Divine good, thus the Word; and, in the supreme sense, the Lord. III.

9422. Mount Sinai = the Law, or the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord, thus the Word. Its summit, where was Jehovah, = the inmost of the Law, or Word; the rest of the mount below the summit = the internal of the Law, or Word, such as it is in Heaven; and those parts below the mount, where were the elders and people, = the external of the Law, or Word, which is its external sense.

9429. 'The glory of Jehovah abode upon Mount Sinai' (ver.16) = the interiors of the Word of the Lord in Heaven.

9436. Mount Sinai = Heaven where is Divine truth in light.

10375. Mount Sinai = Heaven whence is Divine truth. 10450.

10396. Mount Sinai = Heaven as to Divine truth.

10543. Mount Sinai = Divine truth.

10605. 'Be ready for the morning, and thou shalt ascend to Mount Sinai' (Ex.xxxiv.2) = a new rise of the revelation of Divine truth. 'Mount Sinai' = Heaven whence is Divine truth; thus whence is revelation.

10606. 'Thou shalt stand to Me there upon the head of the Mount' (id.) = from the Inmost Heaven where is the Divine love. 'Mount Sinai' = Heaven whence is revelation. 10607.

10608. The more lofty mountain in the middle (of Horeb) was called Mount Sinai. Hence . . . the internal of Heaven is signified by Mount Sinai. (See HOREB, here.)

—^e. Why Jehovah descended upon the summit of Mount Sinai. Ex.

10689. 'As Moses descended from Mount Sinai' (ver.29) = the influx of the internal into the external of the Word, the Church, and worship.

—^e. 'Mount Sinai' = Heaven where the Lord is, and whence is the Law, or Word.

D. 2633^e. Mentioned.

E. 204⁷. 'Sinai' = Heaven where is the Lord, from whom is Divine truth, or from whom is the Law in a narrow and a wide sense.

336⁵. 'Sinai' = Heaven where and whence is Divine truth. Therefore it is said: 'Sinai in the Sanctuary' (Ps.lxviii.17).

405²⁵. As 'a mountain' = the good of love . . . Jehovah descended upon Mount Sinai, and promulgated the Law. . . Hence 'Sinai,' in the Word, = Divine truth from Divine good.

701¹¹. 'Mount Sinai' = Heaven whence is Divine truth.

Every affection of the heart . . . produces singing, consequently the things of singing. The affection of the heart is celestial; the consequent singing is spiritual.

—². That singing and what is like it=what is spiritual, has been evident to me from the angelic choirs, which are of two kinds: celestial, and spiritual. Spiritual choirs, from their vibratory singing—canoro—tone, to which the sound of stringed instruments may be likened, are very different from the celestial. Moreover the Most Ancients referred what is spiritual to the province of the lungs, thus something spiritual to everything of the lungs, as the singing voice, and things like it, thus to the tones of such instruments.

420. 'To sing' in the Word, = what is spiritual. Ill.

655^e. 'Their voice shall Sing in the windows' (Zeph. ii.14)=reasonings from phantasies. See 3391².

1977². There is heard from (the angelic Spirits) as from afar, a sweetly modulating sound, as it were of singing.

3069. 'Not to drink wine in the song' (Is.xxiv.9)=not to be instructed from the affection of truth. E.376²⁰.

3880⁴. 'Voice of singing,' etc. = what is spiritual. Ill.

3893. The celebration (of the Lord by the angelic choirs) was sometimes heard as from sweet singing . . . but human singing is not to be compared to (angelic) for sweetness and harmony. . . The choirs belonged to the province of the lungs . . . because singing is the office of the lungs.

3969¹⁴. 'Song' is a spiritual expression.

4137. 'I would have sent thee away with . . . songs (Gen.xxxi.27)= . . . a state as to truths . . . for 'songs' are predicated of truths.

4215². Gladness of mind—animi, and joy of mind—mentis, produce (by correspondence) singing and joyful shouting.

4686^e. 'To come with singing' (1's.cxxvi.6) = the gladness of the affection of truth.

6742^e. 'The singers—cantantes' (Ps.lxviii.25) are predicated of the truths which are of the Spiritual Church.

6988. 'The tongue of the dumb shall Sing' (Is.xxxv.6)=that these will confess the Lord, and the things which are of faith in Him.

7191². In all angelic discourse there is a harmony like that of Songs.

8258. These are the things contained in this prophetic Song.

8261. 'Then sang Moses and the sons of Israel this Song to Jehovah' (Ex.xv.1)=a Glorification of the Lord by those of the Spiritual Church on account of deliverance. . . 'To sing a Song'=a Glorification.

—². The reason 'to sing a Song'=to Glorify, and 'a Song,' Glorification, is that the Songs in the Ancient and Jewish Churches were prophetic, and treated of the Lord, especially that He should come into the world, and destroy the diabolical crew . . . and deliver the faithful . . . Hence the Songs signified the Glorifi-cation of the Lord, that is, the celebration of Him from gladness of heart; for gladness of heart is especially expressed by a song; for in a song gladness as it were of itself breaks forth into sound. Hence in the Songs the Lord is called 'a Hero,' etc.

—³. The Angels with the men were at the same time in the Glorification of the Lord; hence those who sang, and those who heard the Songs, had heavenly gladness . . . in which they seemed to themselves to be as it were carried up into Heaven. Such an effect had the Songs of the Church among the Ancients; such an effect they might have at this day also; for the spiritual Angels are especially affected by Songs concerning the Lord, His kingdom, and Church. The reason the Songs of the Church had this effect, was not only from the fact that gladness of heart was made active by them, and that it broke forth from the interior even to the extreme fibres of the body, moving these with a glad and at the same time a holy tremor; but also because the Glorification of the Lord in the Heavens is effected by choirs, and thus by the harmony of many.

— Hence the Glorifications of the Lord, among the Ancients of the Church, were performed by Songs, psalms, and musical instruments . . .

—⁴. That the prophetic Songs contained, in the internal sense, the Glorification of the Lord. Ill.

—⁵. (Thus) 'a Song' = the Glorification of the Lord for deliverance; for the Songs involved gladness of heart, and the exaltation of the Lord; gladness of heart for the Lord's advent, and Salvation then; and exaltation for victory over spiritual enemies. Gladness of heart attended with the exaltation of the Lord, is what is meant by Glorification.

—⁶. That gladness of heart was signified by 'Songs.' Ill.

— That the exaltation of the Lord was effected by Songs. Ill.

—^e. 'The Song of Moses and of the Lamb' (Rev. xv.) is the Song contained in this chapter. It is called 'the Song of the Lamb' because it treats of the Glorification of the Lord.

S263. 'I will Sing to Jehovah' (Ex. xv. 1) = that glory belongs to the Lord alone. S341.

S267. 'My Song is Jah' (ver. 2) = that everything of faith and thence of glory is from the Divine truth which is from Him; for 'a Song,' when said concerning Jehovah, = the Glorification of the Lord; but when concerning man, as here, it = the glory which is from faith, thus the faith from which is glory. Ex.

—². 'A Song' = the faith which is of Divine truth.

S337. 'To Sing' = to Glorify.

P. 279⁸. (Thus) mere changes and variations, successively continued, of the state of the organic forms, produce tones and their articulations, which are speech and singing.

R. 279. 'They sang a new Song' (Rev. v. 9) = the acknowledgment and Glorification of the Lord: that He alone is the Judge, the Redeemer, and Saviour; thus the God of Heaven and earth. These things are contained in the Song which they sang. Enum. . . Hence it is called 'a new Song.' E. 326.

—². The reason 'a Song' = Glorification, which is confession from joy of heart, is that singing exalts, and causes the affection to break forth from the heart into sound, and to present itself intensely in its life.

— The Psalms of David are nothing but Songs . . . Ill.

—³. That the Songs were for the sake of the exaltation of the life of love, and the derivative joy. Ill.

617. 'They sang as it were a new Song' (Rev. xiv. 3) = the celebration and Glorification of the Lord in the New Christian Heaven; here, in special, that He is acknowledged as the God of Heaven and earth, as He is acknowledged in the ancient Heavens. E. 857.

618. 'No one could learn that Song but the 144,000' (id.) = that none from Christians could understand (this) except those received into this New Heaven. 'This Song' = the acknowledgment and Glorification of the Lord, that He is the God of Heaven and earth. E. 859.

662. 'They sang the Song of Moses the servant of God, and the Song of the Lamb' (Rev. xv. 3) = confession from charity, and thus from a life according to the commandments, and from faith in the Divinity of the Lord's Human. Ex. E. 936.

M. 6⁵. In Heaven there are . . . Songs in the greatest perfection . . .

17. At the sides there are Singers and Songstresses, who entertain the citizens with most pleasant solos and part songs . . .

—². Every morning, from the houses round the public places are heard the sweetest songs of virgins and girls, with which the whole city resounds. One affection of spiritual love is sung each morning, that is, is sounded by modifications of the singing voice, or by modulations; and that affection in the song is perceived as if it were [the affection] itself; it inflows into the souls of the hearers, and excites them to correspondence. Such is heavenly singing. The songstresses say that the sound of their song as it were breathes itself in and animates from within, and exalts delightfully according to the reception by the hearers. 19.

55. A very sweet strain—melos—heard from Heaven: wives and virgins were singing a song—concinebant cantilenam. The sweetness of the singing—cantionis—was like the affection of some love flowing forth harmoniously. Heavenly songs are nothing else than sonorous affections, or affections expressed and modified in sounds; for as thoughts are expressed by speech, so are affections by songs. From the symmetry and flowing forth of the rhythmical measure, the Angels perceive the subject of the affection. . . They were singing the chaste love of the sex.

—². The song continued, and each of the bystanders heard it according to the state of his love. Enum.

155a. One morning very sweet singing . . . awoke me. . . The singing of Heaven is nothing else than an affection of the mind sent out from the mouth as a melody . . . I perceived it was the affection of the deliciousnesses of conjugal love which was made melodious—canora—by wives in Heaven. I observed this from the tone of the song, in which these deliciousnesses were varied in wonderful ways.

[M.] 207^e. The virgins then sang an ode, in which they expressed the affection of works of use with its pleasantnesses, in an angelic strain.

Ad. 3/23. See PSALM.

D. 491. I have again heard them hymning or chanting—cantantes—the praise of our Saviour; some choirs together . . . without confusion; one within another. Thus is the universal Heaven wont to be in the praise and glory of the Saviour. Hence musical harmony and singing are so delicious to the Angels, when the thoughts of men are in accordance with their ideas; as I have often experienced in places of worship, in that the angelic choirs were in accordance, with an intimate perception of gladness, ineffable.

2090. Two or three times I have heard harmonious singing . . . and the Spirits were so delighted with that singing that they became as it were spell-bound. The sweetness penetrated their interiors. In like manner with the Angels.

2108. Again have I heard a harmonious singing, and the harmony of it from the discords—disharmonicis was carried by the Lord to the deliciousnesses of Spirits and Angels, who were so spell-bound with the mere deliciousnesses, that they said they did not know but that they had been translated into the inmost Heaven; even Spirits not good, so that they have been rapt out of themselves with the sweetness. I have not often perceived such a quiet; for they are in a delicious stupor. 2231, Further des. 2232.

2403. (Like) evil Spirits lulled by singing.

3381^e. Cantatum occurs.

4176. (The birds) then begin to sing beautifully, from the quiet thence.

5603. (In the other life) they have Songs, and they Sing from them exactly as here. The spiritual are very greatly delighted with Songs.

E. 304³². The joy thence is described by, 'Sing ye heavens, exult earth, and break forth into singing, mountains' (Is. xlix. 13). Ex. 405⁹.

323². 'Singing' = the testification of gladness from the affection of truth.

—⁶. The good of truth is expressed by 'to Sing . . .'

—⁸. Vastation as to the Knowledges of good, is signified by, 'I will make the noise of thy Songs to cease' (Ezek. xxvi. 13).

326. 'A Song' = acknowledgment and confession from joy of heart . . . because joy of heart expresses itself by singing when it is in its fulness; and the reason this is done by singing, is that when the heart is full of joy, and derivatively the thought also, it then pours itself forth by singing; the joy itself of the heart, by the sound of the singing, and the derivative joy of the thought, by the Song. The quality of the joy of the thought is presented by the words of the Song . . . and the quality of the joy of the heart, by the harmony; and the quantity of its joy, by the uplifting of the sound and of the words in it. All these things flow as if spontaneously from the joy itself. Ex.

— (Thus) the harmony of singing . . . is from the Spiritual World, and not from the natural.

—². To (these instruments) was adjoined singing with Songs, by means of which were formed accordances of Things with the tones of affections. All the Psalms of David were such, and therefore they are called (also) 'Songs.' —^e, Ill.

—³. That 'singing,' and 'to sing a Song' = acknowledgment and confession from joy of heart. Fully ill.

—¹¹. Where the Lord's advent is treated of, a 'new Song' is mentioned. Ill.

328¹¹. 'They shall come to Zion with singing . . .' (Is. xxxv. 10) = eternal happiness.

374³. 'To sing in the height of Zion' (Jer. xxxi. 12) = internal heavenly joy . . .

376¹³. 'In the vineyards no singing' (Is. xvi. 10) = their delight taken away; for they were wont to Sing in the vineyards and winepresses to represent delights from truths.

406⁵. 'To Sing a Song,' and 'to praise' (Is. xlii. 10) = worship from a glad mind.

455²⁰. 'Shall Sing' (Is. xxxv. 6) = joy from the intelligence of truth.

—⁴⁰. 'He shall answer,' that is, 'Sing.'

863¹². All spiritual gladness is from the affection of truth, and therefore 'to sing,' etc., are said of virgins and girls.

—¹³. 'Singing' describes the gladness of those of the Spiritual Kingdom. Ill.

1159². 'To praise with lips of singers' (Ps. lxxiii. 5) = to worship through truths which gladden the mind.

D. Wis. x. 5. Sounds which derive little from the understanding are those of singing and music.

— The correspondence of the variations of sound, as those of singing, etc., is with the variations of affections which are from the love of the will in the understanding.

1515. A woman with a deadly stench was associated with the Sirens. The stench of Sirens is similar, because their interiors are filthy, while their exteriors are becoming and fair. Sirens quickly learn everything, even doctrinal things, in order to turn them into magic, and obtain command over others. They enter into the affections of the good by the simulation of what is good and true.

1983. Sirens, who are interior sorceresses, insidiate in the night time, and try then to insinuate themselves into man's interior thoughts and affections. Des.

—³. Sirens are chiefly of the female sex, who (here) had studied to allure male companions by interior artifices. Des. Their especial end is to exercise command. In the other life they seem able to do all things from themselves. Their interiors are defiled with adulteries and hatreds. Their sphere is powerful. They reduce their interiors into a state of persuasion . . . and thus compel Spirits to think as they do. They make no show of reasonings, but infuse a sort of simultaneous [rush] of reasonings inspired with evil affections. They study to destroy the conscience, and then possess the interiors of men; nay, obsess them, although the man is ignorant of this. At this day there are internal obsessions by such. Des.

2483. (Adulteries of Sirens exposed from their memory.)

2744². Sirens are women who have been in the persuasion that it is honourable to scortate and commit adultery; and have been . . . in the elegancies of life. Most of them come from Christendom. D.3194.

3750⁴. Such popes are ruled by a crew of Sirens above the head, who have imbued the nature of insinuating themselves into all kinds of affections with the design of exercising command . . . using holiness and innocence as means. They are afraid for themselves, and act cautiously; but, when occasion offers, rush into cruelty without merey. D.3663.

6311. The Sirens wanted to be there, because they saw men with their eyes. As Sirens have been adulteresses above others, they can see only such Spirits as are in sensuous lumen. Examp. D.4627¹².

10286. Sirens induce on themselves a beauty almost angelic, by phantasies.

W. 424². The harlots called Sirens induce beauty on themselves, and adorn themselves in becoming garments; but when the phantasy is removed, they appear as spectres. Ex.

M. 433^e. I have heard (this) afar, from Sirens, who are obsolete venereal lusts.

505². These harlots (who appear at first to the seducers as lovely virgins) are called Sirens.

T. 80. The satan's woman was from the crew of Sirens, who can induce on themselves all the habits and forms of beauty and adornment. Enum. Such (there) are harlots, and study phantasies. Ex. . . They are skilled in inspiring lasciviousness.

533. These two loves are like the Sirens of the ancients. Des.

D. 181^e. Some Spirits are only affections, who affect a man with a certain delicious delight. If evil, these women are to be called Sirens.

240. That there are Sirens also in the Ultimate Heaven.—The worst of all (female Spirits) are those who may be called Sirens; for they simulate deceits under the veil of innocence. Whatever can be found in man which they can produce, they produce it for the falsification of truth.

2963. Sirens are those who insinuate themselves into the cupidities, pleasures, and affections, in such a manner that they do not know there is evil beneath, so that they are captivated by the delight with those with whom they are; and yet—although they do not think of this at the time—when occasion offers, an evil intention comes forth . . . But those who, when insinuating themselves, meditate deceits . . . are not Sirens, but the deceitful.

3205. There were many Sirens with me. . . Those who suffer themselves to be enticed by them pass from their sweetnesses to their posteriors, where is Gehenna. Rep.

3206. In Gehenna are the most deceitful, especially Sirens, who by a pretence of piety enter into the lower minds of others, and delude and seduce them, so that no one can resist unless the Lord protects him. Phalanxes of Sirens flew out. They moved the top-most skin of my head tremblingly. They esteem the Conjugal as nothing. . . Such pursue the innocent and allure them to lusts, scortations, and adulteries, under the pretext of what is honourable. Further des.

3207. The Sirens of Gehenna can [become] both fire and ice, and thus undulate from one extreme to the other, so that they are miserably tortured. Ex.

3214. There exhaled from (that murderer) so much subtle poison that it excited the more deceitful Sirens . . .

3647. A new Spirit among the Sirens over head. (A pontiff.) Des.

3663. Such are ruled by those over head, called Sirens. Des.

3664. (Such) rule the Sirens, because they are above them.

3699. Sirens are those who have lived at their pleasure—genio . . . They have made the sole life to consist in what is becoming (so that) they could insinuate themselves into societies. . . Thus, outwardly, they appear honourable. . . They frequent the rites of the Church; but are devoid of the conscience of what is honourable, good, and true; inwardly studying themselves only, while outwardly they simulate [to do so] for others. They are more facile than others to flagitious things, and esteem adulteries as nothing, in so far as they can be hidden; and so with all other loves.

3700. In the other life they conduct themselves in the same way: learn with avidity all arts: have infested me while awake all this night: can easily allure the upright, entering into all their affections by merely pretending what is honourable, pious, merciful, and innocent. Some of them this night allured many Societies which are otherwise upright. Des.

3702. One Siren can act as a Subject of many Societies simultaneously, both good and evil, and thus can be in a persuasive life.

3710. They can inspire others with anger, with an efficacy of persuasion, so that they kill themselves, in order to have a right over them, as murderers. Nothing comes forth . . . which they do not try to turn to their own advantage, thus into magic . . . and therefore they learn with avidity the truths and goods of faith, but solely with the end of deceiving others. Thus they cannot learn what is true, good, and holy; for they pervert and profane it. 3715.

3712. Especially do they simulate the lower mind of another . . . in order to deceive those who love him. Des. . . Such desire to come into the world through others, being very deceitful, for they insinuate themselves through good affections . . . and have a very persuasive life.

3713. Women constitute the greatest part of such Sirens, even those who (here) have been celebrated, and have been esteemed above others because they lived in what is externally becoming. For they do not manifest their deceit . . . but still they may be known.

3714. When left to themselves, the Sirens were carried into the most obscene things . . . among themselves; (showing that) they have no internal bond . . . and that their interiors are completely loosed. Des.

3716. Sirens especially desire to obsess men, but their interiors through their exteriors. For days they have laboured to come into my senses, nay, into the taste. Ex. The adulterous and cruel desire to obsess man's exteriors; but these his interiors. . . They wanted to appropriate the corporeal memory, and thus return into the world. These obsessions are interior. (How a man may know whether he is thus obsessed.) If he is withheld by external bonds alone, so that if these were removed he would perpetrate such things, he is obsessed within by such Sirens. This is the obsession which exists at this day. 3717. 3718.

3718. They desire to act while man sleeps, as well as when he is awake. (From experience.)

3718a. When they suppose themselves to be penetrating towards the interiors, they are carried (to the brain) through excrementitious ways. Des.

3719. They are such as want to obsess the scientific and intellectual things of man; and thus to insinuate themselves through all Knowledges turned into what is magical, so that they may obsess the men. They are such here also: by external things they can allure men to themselves, and as it were fascinate them to be in their society; and so they are drawn away from internal things.

3720. The other Sirens, who insinuate themselves through the affections, when they supposed themselves to pass towards the chest, and thence into the loins, were brought through (my) external skin. Such possess the excrementitious pores of the sweat there . . . and so also between the loins. Such is their outcome.

3721. He who has not faith in the Lord is obsessed by such, and at last comes among them. In the other life he is associated with them, and lives in the most filthy excrementitious things.

3722. Such can excite irresistibly, with both men and Spirits, all the venereal thoughts they have had from infancy . . . For the efficacy of their sphere is such that it passes into the corporeal memory of Spirits, which, otherwise, is never permitted. 3739, Ex.

3728. Evil Spirits above the head spoke filthy things through the Sirens with others as if from me. Des. Such are the Sirens.

3997. Those who are . . . Sirens in the highest degree . . . while I was writing, inflicted pain in the abdomen, which was their own anguish at not wanting to be exposed. . . I perceived that they insinuated themselves into the affections, and could excite pity, as if they were upright. Des.

3999. The Sirens over head, high up, and very high, supposed that they were not adulterers to an extreme degree, and therefore their bonds were relaxed, and they then excited others to adulteries without any conscience, insomuch that the devil of the cloud was sent to them, in terror of whom they confessed that they are adulterers. . . For they are those who excite others in secret, being for the most part those called prelates, who are persuaded that they can remit all sins . . .

4019. How Sirens hold those bound whom they are trying to obsess. Ex.

— They have eyes like those of serpents, which have sight, or ideas, as it were present on every side.

4057. This is done by Sirens and adulterers.

4098^e. These are a species of Sirens. Des.

4265. The Sirens wanted to have (this profaner) for their Subject; but he swelled out and appeared like a great dragon, and poured the Sirens into his belly, rendering them powerless. Ex.

4278. How some Sirens are punished, and broken.

4298. Sirens try to do violence to infants. Their punishment des.

4304. On the progression of the Sirens. Sirens inflowed into my will. . . Some have supposed the influx of the Lord to be nothing else than that it should take possession of them . . . The Sirens then advanced to others, and inflowed, in order to subjugate them . . . Wherever they came they insinuated themselves into the affections of every kind . . . taking souls captive, and then leading them into things dishonourable and filthy.

4306. Sirens, by their magic arts, can penetrate into the first place of innocence. Ex.

4308^s. Sirens transfer themselves into a subtler sphere.

4327. A new penalty ; for Sirens. Des.

4420. Sirens were around me for weeks, to the left, above . . . harassing me by their magic arts and profane adulteries ; and at last they came so far as to speak exactly as if they were in the body. They supposed themselves to be altogether in the world . . . a sign that they want to return altogether into the world, thus altogether to obsess man, which they tried with me by night while I was asleep. They laboured, with various arts, to enter into me, and to cast out my spirit, and substitute their own. . . I touched their hands in that state. But they were punished most grievously. Des.

4448. On the Hell of the Nephilim of this time, properly that of Sirens. Sirens have been with men an entire year, who had a most filthy and profane Subject. In the world such had been women most highly esteemed for outward decorum, good morals, and cleverness. The Sirens who are properly Nephilim, within are the most filthy, are interior sorceresses, and are pre-eminent as adulteresses . . . continually labouring to destroy not only the conscience, but also to kill the body and also the soul in the lowest Hell . . .

4449. These female Nephilim or Sirens pervert the very sphere of the World of Spirits . . . carrying with them wherever they are borne a persuasion as if the Lord were there, and thus perverting the sphere equally as did the antediluvians.

4450. How they mix holy with profane things . . . thus alluring to themselves . . . not only the grosser Spirits, but also the more subtle ones. They could allure even infants.

4451. They (sometimes) elude punishments either magically or filthily. Their punishments des. But when they returned they had not been made better, but worse. To relate all these things would be to write a whole book. They are the experiences of almost a year.

4452. Their final vastations, and their lot in Hell. Des. 4453.

4455. Their obsession of men at the present day. Des. 4457.

4458. Their subject. Des. 4459. 4465. 4473. 4474. 4476. 4520.

4462. When sent into various Hells, the Sirens eluded the infernals . . . because they mix profane and holy things, and can at the same time introduce themselves into interior nature, and this simultaneously, being at once as it were holy with the good, cunning with others, and profane with the profane, and this all at once in every idea.

4463. Still, they are punished many times. Des. . . Then, fearing for their lives, they abstain for some time.

4464. Their outcome is that they become as if they were corpses, yet have a miserable life, and a cadaverous stench. The reason is that they desire nothing else than to return into worldly and bodily things.

4477. Whatever idea there has been, or scientific, Sirens, when they call it forth from the man, turn into magic with the end of exercising command, of destroying all others, and of rendering them infernal. They have entered into my scientifics as to the viscera, and have tried to make magical things thence, unknown to me ; but were grievously punished.

4552. Some of the worse kind of Sirens came while I was writing, because they could thus attract my delight to themselves. Des.

4573. In externals, Sirens scatter from themselves affections of good, and thus insinuate themselves to simple Spirits. They thus keep themselves in the World of Spirits, and can with difficulty be thrust down thence. . . By such things they enter into the thoughts of men, and wholly lead them, so that they are the worst of those who obsess, because they are internal, and men cannot be defended from them except by the Lord. (Their operation des.)

—². There are two kinds of them. Some have as the end to command man . . . by thus obsessing the thoughts, and by leading them. They are very troublesome. The other kind are similar, but have not such a frenzy to exercise command. They take away all freedom from those who want to think well, and give it to those who want to think evilly. . . They are very obscene, are sorceresses, and are against everything good and true. Their Hells des.

4580. On those of the male sex who are like Sirens. Fully des. Their Hells.

4581. On the Hells of those who give aid to the Sirens.

4594. Those women become Sirens who think of nothing else than that they may enter into the affections of men—virorum, over whom they want to exercise command, and by whom to profit, by alluring them to the love of self, or to self-esteem, so that at last they suffer themselves to be taken captive and commanded by them, and spend all their wealth on them; when yet those women have not the least love for them, but at heart wholly despise them. So do they act with many in succession, and also simultaneously. Hence, in the other life, as soon as they come to Spirits, they enter into their thoughts, and hold the thought completely obsessed, until they are delivered by the Lord. . . . Unless the Lord should deliver the World of Spirits from such, scarcely any good Spirit could be in that World without being led as a captive by them. . . . When they first enter into the thoughts, they follow one's thought strongly, afterwards, they lead it.

4596. For a week or two they came to me in crowds, because with me they could see the world, and thus be in the Corporeal itself; and, as soon as they arrived, they seized upon my thought, which they held so bound that I had no freedom of thinking. Their lot in Hell des. The incredible multitude of such, mostly from the Church. 4600.

4601. When Sirens arrive, they continually murmur something, and observe whether the murmur is fixed anywhere, and thus observe that there are Spirits there, and at once throw themselves into their thoughts, and thus bind them. At first they openly follow their thoughts, then they try to lead them, and thus obsess them. The Spirits are then in a lamentable state, without the freedom of thinking; and, unless delivered by the Lord, would spiritually perish. Ex. Their cow bells.

4624. Sirens are distinguished according to the Hells with which they have effected conjunction.

— Some Sirens do nothing else than compel Spirits to speak certain sonorous words for a long time, and thus as it were destroy—mortificant—them.

4632. An Angel seen, with great force, reducing Sirens in Hell into order. Des.

4635. Sirens are of many kinds, des. But all these have been thrust down into Hell. . . Sirens are the most pernicious of all. Des. At this day there is a vast number of such, from Europe.

4948. She wanted to enter the Hell of the Sirens, into which no one is admitted. Des. See also 4950.

5006^e. The Sirens and their like encompassed (James Benzelius) with a fatuous lumen.

5127. Sirens among celestial Spirits. Des.

5128. That crew, which was almost sirenic, was cast down . . .

5224. The phantasies of Sirens by which they induce on themselves lovely forms, and present beautiful houses, etc. 5225.

5464^s. Sirens know how to insinuate themselves into various affections, which are the head of man, and thus draw him to them. They also know how to magically reduce the thoughts of another down to the Sensuous, and they then induce various phantasies, and lead him wherever they want.

5486. The Last Judgment of the Sirens. (See LAST JUDGMENT, here.)

— Sirens are the worst of all in the other life, and are more hurtful than all others, for they can seduce all whom they approach unless they are taken away and protected by the Lord. They enter into both the good and the evil affections of all, by arts both phantastic and magical. They conspire with all the Hells; in a word, are more diabolical than all others. There are also men—virii—of this quality, who, in the world, have entered into the friendship of everyone, by insinuation into their affections and gains, solely for the sake of gain, and of obtaining command over them, it being a matter of indifference to them whether they insinuated themselves by piety, charity, and love, or by impiety, profanation, murders . . .

5656. Sirens can dislose anyone's evils.

5700. Mentioned.

6106^r. Harlots who are women of talent are called Sirens. They appear like mice . . .

D. Min. 4680. Sirens cause an obstruction of the hinder part of the cauda, where the spinal marrow ceases, and a pain there. They act into the lower intestines, especially into the rectum, and there cause a species of colic, and a difficulty in evacuating the faeces.

See under DISTANCE, and PLACE.

A. 1273. On situation in the Grand Man. Gen.art. 1376, continued.

1274. Societies appear distinct as to situation, although places there are only varieties of state.

— . Situations there are circumstanced relatively to the human body (however it is turned round).

1276. The situation of Spirits and Angels in relation to the Lord. Ex. . . Thus all have their situation relatively to Him, in all directions and heights, and in horizontal, vertical, and oblique planes. Their situation is constant to eternity. 1376.

—^e. Hence there is a like situation of all things around each Angel, and with every man to whom Heaven is opened.

1277. Men also, as to their souls, have a situation in the Lord's Kingdom according to their life and state. Ex.

—^e. Men thousands of miles apart may appear to touch, in accordance with their situation.

1377^e. After (minor) changes of state they return to their own situation.

1380^e. That all Spirits and Angels constantly keep their own situation, is an appearance. Ex.

1381. Souls and Spirits not yet allotted a constant situation in the Grand Man. Ex. D.2547, Ex.

1640. They speak with me from the various situations in which they are according to their situation in the Grand Man, that is, according to their state. Des.

3638. Hence all the Societies keep a constant situation relatively to the Lord, who appears as a Sun; and . . . they keep the same situation relatively to everyone there, wherever he goes and however he turns himself round. Ex.

3639. Hence all situations there are circumstanced relatively to the human body, that is, to its right, left, front, back, in any position of it; and also according to its planes, as that of the forehead, temples, eyes, ears, shoulder-blades, breast, abdomen, loins, knees, feet, soles; also according to planes above the head and below the soles, at every obliquity; and also at the back, from the occiput downwards. From the situation itself, it is known what the Societies are, and to what provinces they belong. 4321. 4403; Ex. 5171. 5380. 7111²; Enum. H.66. D.636.

4321. All in the Grand Man keep a constant situation according to the quality and state of the good and truth in which they are. Situation there is not situation, but state.

7171^e. The situation of the various planets in the ideas of Spirits. Enum.

332. The situation of the Heaven of infants. Ex.

582. The situation, etc., of the Hells. Chapter.

587. The situation of the Hells in special is known to the Lord alone; but their situation in general is known from the quarters in which they are. Ex.

M. 415⁵. The changes in situation of these Spirits, were changes of the state of their minds . . .

D. 445. They are to be judged from their situation. Ex.

1703. As to situation, it cannot be said that the Spirits are actually there. 1703a.

1985. That the place or situation where Spirits appear is only apparent. Ex.

2336. They do not always present themselves according to their situation in the Grand Body. Ex. 2357.

2357. On the situation of Spirits relatively to the body. Gen.art.

2358. Not only was such a situation continually observed around my own body; but, if there were many like me, the same Spirits appeared to them also in a like situation, neither more remote, nor more near . . . however distant from each other we might be.

2651. Spirits, wherever their dead bodies may be on Earth . . . are allotted a situation in the Grand Body according to their qualities or faculties. In like manner men on Earth. Ex.

2810. In the Spiritual World, all things are allotted a place and situation entirely according to their natures and native qualities . . . And so there is a gyration of all things according to heavenly forms . . . Hence each and all things are allotted a situation in the Grand Body, according to the changes of their state . . . and [so are] carried from their own situation into others . . . but still they are brought back into the situation which is in agreement with their nature.

2846. As situation (there) is not anything, but situations are according to their nature . . .

3400. A Spirit who could change his situation; may he changed the situation of almost all in the sphere.

3941. Progressions from one place to another mean changes of Societies; for all Societies have their situation; and therefore all change of situation comes from a change of Society . . . 4403^e; Ex.

3957. See EAR.

4403³. Thus every state has its own situation within the Grand Man, as also without it.

5240. On the situation of the peoples and nations there.

5511^e. Hence it is everywhere Known what they are in mind and affection, from their mere place, or situation, in the cities, and on the mountains and rocks, and also in the lesser societies, as in places of worship.

A. 6. The six 'days,' or times, which are so many successive states of regeneration. 62.

12. The sixth state is when he speaks truths and does goods from faith and thence from love, (thus) becoming a spiritual man, (and being in) combat. Ex.

13. Rarely does anyone come to the sixth state.

63. At the end of the sixth day evil Spirits recede, and good ones succeed, and he is introduced into Heaven.

82. That man has now become so far spiritual that he is the sixth day. Sig. 83.

730. 'Six'=labour, from the six days of labour or combat.

737. 'Six'=labour and combat. 4178.

—². As 'six'=labour and combat, it also=the dispersion of what is false. Ill.

—³. Elsewhere, 'six' does not=labour, combat, or the dispersion of what is false, but what is holy of faith, because it relates to 'twelve,' and to 'three,' whence is the genuine derivation of the number six. Ill. The reason of this derivation is that in the combat of temptation there is what is holy of faith; and also because the six days of labour and combat regard the holy seventh one.

900. Six, as preceding seven, =what is not holy, but relatively profane.

—^e. Six, as preceding seven, =in general all that state which precedes. This is the signification of six in application to any subject of which it is predicated.

1709. 'Six'=combat. 1963.

2276. 'Six'=labour or combat.

3239^e. There are in general twelve classes—sortes—in the Lord's Kingdom; but here there are six, (which)=the same. 3960.

3960^e. 'Six'=the same as 'twelve,' namely, all things of faith and love.

4592⁴. Six names which frequently occur in the Prophets. Enum.

5291. 'Six'=the same as 'three.'

8443². Truth Divine in the sixth degree.

8494. The six previous days represented combat and labour, consequently, the temptations which precede a state of peace.

8506. 'Six days ye shall gather it' (ver.26)=the reception of truth before it is conjoined with good; for 'six days'=a state of labour and combat; here, a state of the reception of truth, or a state when good is acquired through truth; for in this state there is labour and combat. Ex.

8510^e. The six days (in Gen.)=temptations and combats.

8516. 'He gives you on the sixth day the bread of two days' (ver.29)=up to the end of the former state He gives so much of good through truth, that conjunction may afterwards be effected. 'The sixth day'=the end of the prior state.

VOL. V.

8539². The prior state (of regeneration) is signified by the six days which precede the seventh.

8888. 'Six days shalt thou labour' (Ex.xx.9)=the combat which precedes and prepares for this marriage. 'Six'=combat. Ex.

—^e. There are no six days of labour there.

8891. 'In six days Jehovah made . . .' (ver.11)=regeneration and vivification. . . 'Six days,' when predicated of the Lord, =the labour with man before he is being regenerated.

8975. 'Six years shall he serve.' See SERVE.

9272. 'Six years shalt thou sow the land' (Ex.xxiii.10)=the first state when the man of the Church is being instructed . . .

9278. 'Six days shalt thou do thy works' (ver.12)=a state of labour and combat while in external delights which are to be conjoined with internal. —³.

9431. 'Six days' (Ex.xxiv.16)=while in a state of truth. Ex.

9555. 'Six reeds' (of the candlestick)=all things of truth from good in the complex. 'Six'=all things in the complex. 9561.

9654. 'Six boards' (Ex.xxvi.22)=good from the Divine Human in every way.

9741^e. The six days which precede the seventh=the former Church up to its end, and the instauration of the new one.

9843. 'Six names on one stone' (Ex.xxviii.10)=the whole quality of truths from good. 'Six'=all things.

10217⁸. The triplication of the senary number involves the end.

10262⁵. In the Spiritual Kingdom the correspondent numbers are 12, 6, and 3; for by these are signified all things; and, when predicated of truths and goods, all truths and goods in the complex.

10360². The time and state while the Lord was in combats is signified by the six days of labour.

10366. 'Six days shall work be done' (Ex.xxxi.15)=the state which precedes and prepares for the heavenly marriage.

10373. 'In six days Jehovah made heaven and earth' (ver.17)=the state of combat and labour while the Church is being instaured. 'Six days,' when the instauration of the Church and the regeneration of man are treated of, =a state of combat against evils and falsities, thus a state which precedes and prepares for the conjunction of good and truth.

10624. 3, 6, and 12 belong to the spiritual class.

10667. 'Six days thou shalt work' (Ex.xxxiv.21)=the first state of regeneration, when man is in truths, and is then in combats against evils and falsities. 10729, Ex.

10729. 'Six days shall work be done' (Ex.xxxv.2), in the supreme sense, =the glorification of the Lord's Human.

R. 245. 'Six wings' (Rev.iv.8)=(all) the powers and guards. . . 'Six'=all as to truth and good; for 6 comes forth from 3 and 2 multiplied together; and 3=all as to truth, and 2 all as to good.

[R.] 322. '3,' and '6,' are predicated of truths, and signify them.

489². 'Six' = what is complete to the end, because it is the double of three.

610. 'Six' = the same as 3 times 2, and 3 = full, and all, and is predicated of truths; and 2 = the marriage of truth and good; and as 6 is compounded of these two numbers multiplied together, it = all the truth of good in the Word; here, it falsified.

—². That 'six' = full, and all, and is said where the truths of good are treated of. Ill.

M. 21³. Six virgins stood at the side of the bride (because) the number six = all, and what is complete.

155⁴. Wives have a sixth sense.

T. 302. The 'six days' of labour = combat against the flesh and its concupiscences.

E. 253⁷. 'Six steps' (of Solomon's throne) = all things from primes to ultimates.

283³. 'Six' = spiritual good; for 'six' = communication; and communication with the Lord is through charity towards the neighbour.

376³⁹. 'Six' = all things, and is predicated of truths.

401¹⁵. 'From the sixth to the ninth hour' (Luke xxiii. 44) = that there was mere falsity and no truth whatever; for . . . 'six,' and 'nine' = all things in the complex; here, falsities and evils.

627⁴. 'Six' = the same as 'three;' namely, truths in the whole complex.

633. 'Six weeks' = the same as the six days of one week, namely, a state of combat and of labour, consequently the end, when the Church has been completely devastated, or when evil has been consummated.

S47. 'Six' = all things, and is predicated of truths and of the derivative goods; and, in the opposite, of falsities and the derivative evils. For this number is composed of 2 and 3 multiplied together; and 2 is predicated of goods, and in the opposite of evils; and 3 of truths, and in the opposite of falsities. Hence it is that 'six' = all truths and the derivative goods in the complex; and, in the opposite, all falsities and the derivative evils in the complex.

Sixteen. Sedecim.

A. 9660. 'Sixteen bases' (Ex. xxvi. 25) = complete sustentation. 'Sixteen' = complete-prorsus; for it = the same as 'eight.'

E. 384². See FOUR.

924. '1600' = the same as '16;' and '16' = the same as '4' and '2;' and all these numbers are predicated of goods; in the opposite, of evils.

Sixtus Quintus.

R. 752. I spoke with pope Sixtus Quintus. He was chief regulator of a Catholic Society who excel the rest in judgment and industry. For half a year before his death he had believed that the vicarship was an invention for the sake of dominion; and that the Lord alone is to be adored; also that the Holy Scripture is Divine; and that the saints are not anything. He leads an active life, proposing to himself every morning nine or ten things. (He tells how he had accumulated the great treasure in the castle of St. Angelo. His message to those now living.) Compare D. 5529. 5833. J. (Post.) 103.

Sixtieth. Sexagesimus.

A. 3306. 'Isaac was a son of sixty years' (Gen. xxv. 26) = the state of the Divine Rational. What 'sixty' involves may be evident from the simple numbers of which it is composed: 5 and 12; 6 and 10; and 2 and 30.

5335². 'Another, sixty' (Mark iv. 8, 20) = fulness of remains, because it arises from ten.

E. 684³⁷. Sixty = a full time and state as to the implantation of truth; thus 'sixty-two' = the marriage of truth with a little good.

S47. 'His number six hundred, sixty and six' (Rev. xiii. 18). Ex.

3540. See SKIN-pellis. 10036.

—⁴. 'To be encompassed with skin' (Job xix. 26) = the Natural such as man has with him after death. 3813⁵.

3812⁴. 'Their skin cleaveth to their bones' (Lam. iv. 8) describes a changed state as to the celestial things of love; namely, that there was no flesh on their bones, that is, no good; for then all truth becomes like skin which cleaves to the bone: it withers, and becomes like wood.

4046^e. They who reason from external sensuous things . . . go more and more outward, even to the external skin of the head, which they represent.

4325. The skin, muscles, etc. receive for the most part fibres from the cerebrum . . .

4793^e. They were conveyed away by the excrementitious ways in the brain towards the externals of the skin. . . Such Spirits correspond to the filthy cavernules in the outermost skin where is the itch. D. 3719.

5552. On the correspondencè of the skin, etc. Chapter.

— . The things in man which have less life correspond to Societies in Heaven which are in less life there; as are the cuticles which encompass the universal body, etc.

5553. The Societies to which the cuticles correspond are in the entrance to Heaven; and to them is given a perception of the quality of the Spirits who come to the first entrance, whom they either reject or admit . . .

5554. See INTEGUMENT.

5555. They who have known only the generals of faith . . . and have suffered themselves to be much seduced . . . being sensuous, and not entering into reasons, constitute the skin, but the exterior and less sensitive one. I have spoken with those who constitute the skin of the skull. But such are as different from each other as is this skin in various places. Enum. D. 3704.

5557. See MEMBRANE.

6402². As those in truth and not yet in good look outwards, they are among those who belong to the province of the external skin in the Grand Man; for the external skin is turned outwards from the interiors of the body, and takes its sense of touch from the things which are without; but not sensibly from those which are within. Thus they are in the Lord's Kingdom . . . but in its ultimates.

8247. Their beauty is in the external skin, and not in the fibres from within. U. 52^e.

8588⁶. Such (simple angelic Spirits) are those who correspond to the cuticles. 8870³.

8956. (In Saturn) they are clothed lightly; for they are encompassed with a thick skin, or coat, which repels the cold.

8977. Such are in the entrance to Heaven . . . and are called cuticulars, because they correspond to the skin. 8980^e.

9215. 'His garment for his skin' (Ex. xxii. 27) = sensuous things which invest exterior ones. . . 'The skin' = what is exterior, which also invests interior things, but still is within the Sensuous.

—². The exterior or middle Natural is what is signified by 'the skin.'

9216. In the skin—which is the ultimate tegument of the body—cease the interiors of the body, because it holds them together, and therefore they rest upon it.

10044⁹. The ultimate of man is the skin . . .

10691. 'The skin of his faces shone' (Ex. xxxiv. 29) = the internal of the Word shining forth in its external. . . 'Skin' = the external of truth and good. E. 937¹.

509^e. This lust . . . at last becomes cuticular.

510². Their faces consist only of skin, because they have no spiritual life in them.

—³. As they are cutaneous, they reason from the fallacies of the senses.

D. 1569. Those of the cutaneous glands. Des.

1693^e. These constitute the province of the external skin of the head.

1736. On those who constitute the external skin, and its coats. Gen. art.

—^e. These are the interior coats of the skin.

1738. For the external skin communicates through fibres and vessels with the interior and inmost things of the brain; hence its sense. Nay, they imbibe the most subtle things of the world, and transmit them into the brain, besides their exhaling the more subtle faeces, as is evident from the santorian perspiration.

1740. Some who constitute the interior coats of the skin are sufficiently upright . . .

1741. So long as they are in these phantasies, they constitute such externals, especially the skins and membranes, as act against internal things. The most of such are from our Earth.

[D.] 1743. The state of a man when ruled by those who constitute the cuticle. Gen.art.

— . There came many who constitute the cuticle (who showed) the state of a man who takes too much care of his cuticle . . . He is withheld from all study, and there is insinuated into him a disgust for doing anything real. Des. 1744. 1745. (See A.4054.)

1746. Such are they who care too much for the cuticle, or who are delighted with the things which belong to the skin; and who are called the delicate. These feel a repugnance to all good or essential work . . . The care of the cuticle is manifold, and therefore there are genera and species of such men.

1747. The cuticulars are averse to interior things . . . The exterior ones who actuate them are they who constitute the scaly and unclean skin.

1749. But when there is an equilibrium with others, they are of use, as is the skin to the interiors . . . The skin serves not only for excreting filthy things; but also for the insinuation of things which serve for nourishing the interiors; but the skin is then disposed by the interior life . . .

2864. Such (sorcerers) were in the skin of my head. Des. . . Most of these dwell in the outermost province of the head, namely, in its skin.

3206. See SIREN.

3700. The incredible number of the Societies who constitute the province of the skin of the whole front of the body. 3703.

3704. They who constitute the external skin, are such in the world as suffer themselves to be easily persuaded, having no extension of the understanding. (Of these) there are many genera and species; as those who suffer themselves to be easily deceived by simulated love towards infants and by simulated conjugal love, these constitute the skin of the provinces of the genital members: those who suffer themselves to be easily deceived by simulated mercy, constitute the skin of the chest; and so on. This, moreover, is the character of such skin; for it suffers itself to be deceived by external things which soothe it.

4154. These (reasoning) Societies wandered in the outermost skin.

4640. Simple Spirits in the First Heaven who correspond to the cuticles.

5926^e. Wherefore these are to be called cutaneous.

D. Min. 4597. Callosities in the skin of the head, and in the skull, to which (magicians) attach themselves . . . because they are associated with Spirits who know only the generals of faith . . . thus who have a general love towards the neighbour, without considering who is the neighbour. These greatly abound at this day, and suffer themselves to be seduced by every deceitful . . . Spirit. They are for the most part sensuous, and enter but little into reasons. They constitute the skin; these, the skin of the skull. Such exist with much difference, and correspond to the skin of the skull in various parts, as the occiput, face, etc.

4660. Spirits who induce pain in the cuticle of the knee bone.

4740. Such are like tumours . . . they adhere outwardly to the scaly skin, and thus extract a gross juice.

E. 386¹⁵. 'The skin' = the natural man. Ill. 540⁵.

556¹¹. This is signified by 'escaping with the skin of his teeth' (Job xix.20). Teeth without skin = falsities; but with skin, not falsities, because still in some measure clothed.

780⁵. 'Can the Ethiopian change his skin?' (Jer.xiii.23) = that evil cannot change its nature. As the skin is the outermost thing of man, and corresponds to his Sensuous, it = his nature.

D. Love xxi^e. The heat of the sun (merely) opens the outermost or cuticular things of bodies . . .

—^e. The clothing of man prevents the effect of the cold [of winter] in the cuticulars.

Inv. 49. Around the whole body are coats, one within the other, which taken together are called the skin.

Skin. Pellis.

A. 292. 'He made for (them) coats of skin' (Gen.iii.21) = instructed them in spiritual and in natural good.

294. That 'a coat of skin' = good spiritual and natural . . . The general term skin is here used, but that of a kid, sheep, or ram is meant, which animals = affections of good, charity, and the things of charity. 296, Ill.

3540. 'The skins of the kids of the goats' (Gen.xxvii.16) = the external truths of domestic good; for 'skins' = external things . . . because they are the outermosts of the animal, in which its interiors are terminated, in like manner as the skin-cutis, or cuticles, in man. This signification is derived from the representation in the other life; those there who are in the province of the skin-cutis (being) such as are only in external good and its truths. Hence the skin-cutis, and also the skin = external things. Ill.

9471. 'Skins of red rams and skins of badgers' (Ex.xxv.5) = the external truths and goods by which they are held together; for 'skins' = external things.

9632. 'Skins' = external truths.

10036. 'Its skin' (Ex.xxix.14) = what is false in ultimates; for 'skin,' or skin-cutis = what is true in ultimates . . . for those who relate to the skin-cutem- in the Grand Man are those who are in the truths of faith, and not so much in the corresponding good, who are those in the threshold to Heaven. Hence by the skin-cutem seu pellem, in the abstract sense, is signified truth in ultimates. The reason 'skin,' here = falsity in ultimates, is that when 'the flesh' = the evil of love, its 'skin' = what is false of faith thence.

P. 313^e. The 'coats of skin' = the appearances of truth.

—^e. Hence those who have lived in deadly hatred . . . and the derivative falsities, have their skulls completely indurated; and some have skulls like ebony, through which no rays of light—which are truths—can penetrate.

5717². (Such) relate to deadly tumours of the head within the skull.

7748. They who love mere Knowledges . . . relate to the interior membrane of the skull. And they who accustom themselves to speak without affection, and to draw the thought to themselves, and withdraw it from others, relate to this membrane ossified. D. 3888.

Sleep. Dormire.

A. 959². Sirens wanted to insidiate against me in my sleep-somno; I had a sad dream. Punishing Spirits were suddenly present, who miserably punished them. Des. They found them all, in spite of all their arts. Des. I marvelled that they were so grievously punished; but the crime is enormous, from the necessity of man's being able to sleep in safety, without which the human race would perish. The same thing takes place round other men whom they attempt to assail insidiously in their sleep-somno, though the man is not aware of it. . . When man sleeps, the Lord guards him most of all. 1983. D.3680. 3681. 4420. 4236.

1976^e. The third kind of dreams come through the Spirits who are near while man sleeps . . .

3893^e. They who are appointed to involuntary respiration are present with man while he sleeps; for, as soon as he sleeps, the voluntariness of his respiration ceases, and he receives what is involuntary of respiration. D.496.

4638⁴. 'To sleep-obdormire' (Matt.xxv.5)=to cherish doubt.

4814². Man's state while his exterior thought is lulled, that is, while he sleeps.

5210. 'He slept-obdormivit' (Gen.xli.5)=an obscure state; for 'to sleep-dormire'=an obscure state; moreover, sleep-somnus, in the spiritual sense, is nothing else; for there is spiritual sleep-somnus, while truths are in obscurity . . . In the degree, also, of such . . . obscurity, Spirits have sleep-somni.

When they awoke, they said they had slept, and fled away; one saying that he had not wanted to sleep. . . The Lord alone watches over all, even His enemies, and does them good.

3232. (Thus) evil Spirits are compelled to sleep when with man, and thus cause that man sleeps well even if surrounded by evil Spirits. Otherwise . . . if not in sleep-somno—they would then perceive that they were Spirits separate from the man. . . When man sleeps and they are awake, they can then know it.

4834. Certain with me while I was asleep (caused me) to want to kill those who entered into my chamber . . .

5598. This was done while I slept.

5617. The plane and ultimate is with an intelligent man, whether he is thinking . . . or is asleep . . .

D. Min. 4693. Spirits do not know where men are . . . When they happen to light upon them while they are asleep there appears as it were a sound of shouting outside of them, and as if some one fell down near the bed, and went under it, and stayed there. The man then supposes that it is an illusion, or a vision; but this is the source of it. It has happened to me sometimes while I slept.

4726. On those who have slept much.—A certain person who in the life of the body had slept much, and had had the delectation of his life in it, applied himself to the Spirits with me, and somnolence at once took possession of me. The Spirits also complained. Such are of almost no use, but are rejected; for they induce a torpor on others so that they cannot think; for thought is of waking, and makes waking.

E. 187². 'To sleep'=to lead a natural life without a spiritual one. —^e,ill. 355¹¹.

365¹³. As peace is in them and from them, it is said, 'In peace I together lie down and sleep' (Ps.iv.8). 'To lie down and sleep'=to live.

1977. See DREAM.

1982. Some Souls who long to see the glory of the Lord . . . are lulled as to the exterior senses and lower faculties in a kind of sweet sleep; and then their interior senses and faculties are aroused . . . D.456.

1983². I was once in a very sweet sleep . . . When awake, good Spirits began to chide me for infesting them. (This was the work of Sirens, acting as if from me.)

3715. 'Jacob awoke out of his sleep' (Gen.xxviii.16) = illustration; for 'sleep'=a relatively obscure state.

4048. One spoke to me close to my head, and I perceived from the sound that he was in . . . a kind of peaceful sleep. . . Interior angels spoke through him, and he was in such a state that he could perceive and produce it. . . Such are they who relate to the sinuses of the brain . . . 7744. D.3878.

4175. 'My sleep is driven from my eyes' (Gen.xxxi.40)=temptations; (for these words)=continually, or without rest.

4283^e. He is then like one awaking from sleep in the morning . . .

5114³. (The lower degrees) are then quiescent with him, almost as the Corporeal is quiescent with man in sleep.

5988. Subjects near my head spoke as if they were in sleep, and spoke well, like those not in a state of sleep. Evil Spirits inflowed into them; but the influx was dissipated, and they complained that they were their Subjects no longer. The reason was that good Spirits could act into them while they were in sleep.

8850^e. In (Jupiter) they die tranquilly as if in sleep.

10833. Revelation (in the Sixth Earth) takes place in the morning, in the middle state between sleep and waking . . .

H. 440. In the state of being withdrawn from the body, the man is brought into a middle state between sleep and waking. Des.

506. All who have lived in good . . . appear to themselves, when let into the state of their interiors, like those who being awaked from sleep come into waking.

W. 74^e. Time (then) does not appear, as in sleeps.

R. 158. Natural life, regarded in itself . . . is nothing else than sleep.

[R.] 961. Once, on awaking from sleep, I fell into a profound meditation about God. (A vision followed. Des.)

M. 194. By the 'sleep' and the 'falling asleep—obdormitio' of the man (Gen.ii.) is signified his complete ignorance. —^e.

T. 160⁷. The first days after death are passed like a sleep . . .

606. A man not regenerated is like one who dreams . . . In the Word, natural life is likened to 'sleep.'

Ad. 3/2654. The life of the external senses is relatively a sleep; the life of the interior sense, that is, of the natural mind, is also a sleep relatively to that of the more interior faculty, which is properly human. This, moreover, is merely as a sleep relatively to the inmost life, which is that of the soul; and this is nothing but a sleep relatively to the veriest life, which is that of God. Thus each and all things in man are nothing but shade and sleep; (and) thus there are degrees of sleep, as there are of Angels and Spirits.

D. 319. (Souls) have states, and very many changes of these, merely between their highest sleep and their highest waking. Ex. 456. 778.

— . There is a state of sleep as it were awake . . . in which state they do not seem to themselves to sleep—dormire, but to be awake. Ex.

427. Some, by a peculiar merey, are prepared for Heaven by deep sleep, and by dreams which infest them in sleep.

2535. This state is as obscure to them as is the state of sleep. 2538.

2913. There is a law of retaliation. (Thus) some wanted to trouble me in my sleep, and to take away all my sleep, and therefore there were others who troubled them all night, and I slept—dormiebam.

3015. On the ideal speech of sleep.—Speech was held with me in the middle state between sleep and waking, by means of inexpressible ideas. . . This speech of sleep belongs to evil Spirits of the interior World, or to evil Spirits in sleep. Its quality.

3086. They infested me all night, so that I was twice aroused from sleep . . .

3369. Meanwhile I was in a sweet sleep.

3381^e. They can induce sleep whenever they want.

3391^e. He obtained this reformation as in sleep.

3464³. I have observed that when falling into sleep, my respiration was almost taken away.

3618. He had put on the persuasion that in the other life he would have a sweet sleep until the day of Judgment. Hence . . . he could induce on anyone a sweet sleep. . . He skilfully induced sleep on the Spirits around me, so that one after another fell into sleep. He tried the same with me, and I could feel a soporiferous force from it. Being an artifice, it is not permissible . . .

3619. While in a state of sleep, and in the middle one between sleep and waking, a certain Spirit wanted me to observe and write the things which were in mind . . .

3680. To-night, while in sleep, some insidiated . . . When they rushed on me to destroy me, a vehement wind was felt, which dispersed them in a moment from their Societies, so that they could scarcely retain their sanity, and were therefore miserably tortured.

3791. In the middle state between sleep and waking, but nearer to sleep, there was an ideal representation. Des.

4127. Being in sleep, I was infested. Des.

4128. Angelic Spirits then spoke with me in my sleep by representations. Des. On awaking, I could not understand a whit. I wanted to remember, but could not; for they were such things as do not fall under the sense which is expressed by speech.

4132. In general, the state of Spirits and Angels is a state of sleep, relatively. Ex.

4199. Others have loved the world; but they are kept in a state of sleep, until the delight of the world has been lulled. These are simple, and some good.

4257. Man thinks as the Spirits (in communication with him) speak; and the Spirits who are nearest to the man think as if in sleep.

4284. Again have evil Spirits infested me in my sleep, and have been punished.

4398. On waking sleep. Des. . . Such is sleep when with Spirits. Ex.

4424. A certain woman appeared to me in the middle state between sleep and waking, nearer to sleep.

4788. In my sleep there appeared . . .

E. 781¹⁰. 'He leaned his hand on the wall, and a snake bit him' (Amos v.19)=that when such a one consults the Word in the sense of the letter, seeking goods, he does not see that evils pervert him. The bite of a snake = falsification from the interior dominion of falsity from evil.

Snare. Laqueus.

Ensnare. Illaqueare.

Ensnaring, An. Illaqueatio.

A. 7653. 'To be for a snare' (Ex.x.7)=to be taken by one's own evil, and thus brought into the evil of the penalty.

9013². They who have ensnared the neighbour . . .

9348. 'It will be for a snare to thee' (Ex.xxiii.33)= by the enticement and deception of evils.

— . 'A snare,' when predicated of evils, =enticement and deception. Ex.and Ill.

—⁶. 'A snare' = enticement and deception through the delights of the loves of self and of the world . . . through reasonings from the fallacies of the senses . . . for spiritual ensnarings and takings are from no other source. Ex.

—⁷. As 'a snare,' 'net,' etc. = such things, they also = the destruction of spiritual life, and thus perdition. Ex. —⁹, Ill.

10641. 'To be for a snare' (Ex.xxxiv.12) = to be taken and seduced by one's own evil and falsity.

L. 14⁶. 'The snares of death' (Ps.xviii.5) = temptations.

T. 72³. Your faith is a snare to catch doves.

147^e. Theological things regarded as snares to catch doves.

448^e. Cries of fear, as if of snares.

E. 578⁷. 'Snares, fire, and sulphur' (Ps.xi.6) = evils of falsity, and falsities of evil. (=falsities and evils which seduce. 960⁶.)

T. 683². They who snarl at His name.

Snatch away. Surripere.

T. 121³. The footstool of the Angels snatched away.

D. 3498. On the Dutch who deceitfully snatch away the goods of others. A.5573.

3499. Wanted to snatch away their ideas.

— . That they may pilfer their goods.

—^e. They now withdraw privily.

3500^e. As they can pilfer nothing from them, they have no commerce with them.

3573. Evil Spirits snatch away truth and good. Ex.

3883. They know how to snatch away an idea.

3935. When I secretly took away the things they had used to destroy me.

3980. When good works were snatched away from them.

4239. Some would snatch away those being punished.

4248. They would snatch away my thought.

E. 355³¹. The confirmation of falsities thence is signified by 'the snorting of his horses' (Jer.viii.16).

Snow. Nix.

A. 1042². According to the varied mingling of dark and light.

1774². A face of snowy paleness.

3412³. With such there appears a snowy light. 4416. 5128³, Ex. E.107².

3812⁴. 'Whiter than snow, and fairer than milk' (Lam. iv.7) = in celestial truth. E.364⁵.

4007². 'To wash, and be made whiter than snow'

5060². A little snowy one went out of his body, which represented their desire to put on a state of innocence. 4082.

7626. The man of the Church is then like the earth covered with snow.

7918². 'Snow' is predicated of truth. 8459, Ill.

8952. Saturn's belt appears as a snowiness . . .

9470³. 'His garment as white as snow' (Dan.vii.9)= its external truth.

10754^e. Their noses are more of a snowy colour.

H. 132. Truths outside the Heavens shine coldly, like what is snowy, without heat. 482². Like winter, when all things lie under the snow.

R. 47^e. It is said 'as wool, as snow' (Rev.i.14) because . . . 'snow'=truth in ultimates; for . . . snow is from water, which=truths of faith.

I. 6⁴. Spiritual light appears like resplendent and dazzling snow, such as His garments, when transfigured.

T. 185. In the frigid zones (there) snow appears on the lands. . . I was once led to a region where all the land appeared covered with snow. Des. . . The place of worship was unseen, because covered with snow. But the custodians were removing the snow, digging a way in.

216. From its light (the Word) shines white like snow.

D. 3430. He was shown naked and snowy. Ex.

3468^e. Their passive life is represented as of snowy light.

3804. He emerged as a little snowy something like a man.

3895. The girls appeared naked and snowy, which signified that they supposed themselves innocent.

4012. He showed a snowy brain.

4052^e. The streets are very snowy, so that it appears a snowiness which=a life of faith.

4074. The man clothed in what is snowy=those represented by Noah.

4083. That snowiness then became black. Ex.

4811. Nordberg appeared snowy as to the body and hands.

5629. See ENGLAND.

5920. Melancthon's species of persuasion appeared snowy.

D. Min. 4708. When this Hell was opened there appeared a striped snowiness. Ex.

E. 67. 'Snow'=truth in ultimates, because it is from water and from its whiteness.

—². That truth is described by 'snow.' Ill. 372⁵. 1042⁸.

411²⁸. 'The snow of Lebanon'=the truths of the Church thence. 'Snow' here,=the like as water, namely, truths; but 'snow'=cold truths, because such a Church is treated of.

419¹⁵. 'Snow and vapours' (Ps.cxlvi.8)=the sciences and Knowledges of the natural man; for these are 'snow and vapour' before the man has become spiritual. . .

475¹¹. 'Waters of snow' (Job ix.30)=truths which are, or which appear, genuine. 481⁷.

644¹³. 'The snow coming down from heaven' (Is.lv.10)=natural truth (appropriated to man), which is like snow when only in the memory, but becomes spiritual through love, as snow becomes the water of rain by heat.

704². See HAIL.

798⁴. In the light of Heaven, their mind appears snowy, such as is rational light.

1070³. 'His garments as white as snow'=Divine truth.

1208^e. (Plant-like forms in snow. Ex.)

D. Love xvii. 4. Still, their exteriors appear snowy and crimson from (external) uses.

Snuff-box. Pyxis tabaci.

D. 5008. Carl Gyllenborg had also a snuff-box (or tobacco-box), by which he inflowed into my natural things, which correspond to the teeth.

Snuff-Dish. Trulla.

A. 9572. See SNUFFERS, and TONGS.

Snuffers. Emunctoria.

Snuffed. Emunctus.

A. 9572. Tongs and snuff-dishes are things to snuff with, thus things purificatory and evaculatory. The reason these are in the Natural, is that the Natural is the emunctory, thus the Purificatory and Evacuatory. Ex.

M. 380⁴. As the candle had not been snuffed, it gave little light.

D. 3124. (The emunctories of the body.) D. Love v².

So. Ita.

A. 202². The celestial Angels merely say that it is so, or is not so. Sig. 1384. 9818, Ex. E.826².

2094. The case stands thus—ita se res habet. 2116, etc.

2294². The infants only said it is not so.

2915⁶. The spiritual argue whether it is so; but the celestial know and perceive that it is so; hence the Lord says 'Let your discourse be Yea, yea . . .' (Matt.v.37). 2718². —⁴. —⁵. 3246². 9166².

2733³. He wanted to reason whether it is so.

5228². Causes perception that it is so, or is not so.

5554. Persuaded by others that it is so.

5558. When they want to know anything, they say that it is so . . . for when it is not so, a resistance is perceived.

6222⁴. This Intellectual . . . is an apperception that it is so.

6562. 'Thus'=what is to be done.

[A.] 9166². Celestial Angels only say, Yea, or Nay. 10124². 10786.

H. 270². The celestial Angels never debate whether it is so, or is not so.

P. 150². He sees in himself that it is so as soon as he hears it.

D. 3233. The Spirits of Mercury said, This is so; this is not so.

5730. When they hear those of the Spiritual Kingdom, they say, when they speak truths, It is so; but when they do not speak truths, they say that it is so; that it should be said so.

Soaked. Bullatus. A. 3880⁸.

Soap. Sapo.

M. 525². With soap and water.

B. 52. Here are water, soap, and towel. T. 331^e. 436^e.

Soap. Smegma.

A. 8159. 'Like fullers' soap' (Mal. iii. 2).

Life 112^e. Besmear it with a cleansing unguent.

E. 475¹¹. 'If I cleanse my hands with soap' (Job ix. 30). 'Soap' = the good from which (he is purified).

—¹⁵. 'Though thou . . . multiply thee soap' (Jer. ii. 22). Ex.

M. 164. The virtues which belong to the moral wisdom of the men are sobriety, etc.

Social. Socialis.

D. 2321. See SOCIETY.

Society. Societas.

See under CONSOCIATE, and HEAVEN.

A. 187. He is then received into a Society of good Spirits. Rep.

471². Innumerable Societies there.

483. Each Society has a different perception.

644^e. In Heaven these divisions are called Societies; in the Word, 'habitations;' by the Lord, 'mansions.'

684. These three Heavens are distinguished into innumerable Societies; and each Society consists of many who by their harmony and unanimity constitute as it were one man; and all the Societies together are as one man. The Societies are distinct from one another according to the differences of mutual love and of faith in the Lord . . . 1013⁴. 1285². 2982. 3519², Ex. 3815. 3986³.

—^e. Each Society is therefore an image of the universal Heaven, and is as it were a little Heaven.

686^e. (All these loves) are ordained most distinctly into Societies.

687. (Hence) no Angel or Spirit can have any life unless he is in some Society.

— . A Society is nothing but a harmony of many.

— . For every man (also) is in some Society of Spirits and Angels . . . and unless he were conjoined with Heaven and the World of Spirits through the Society in which he is, he could not live a moment. Ex. . . The very Societies in which and with which men have been (here) are shown them . . . and when they come into that Society, they come into their veriest life which they had had here, and from that life begin a new life. 3255².

690. One Society is never exactly like another. Ex.

697. Thus every man is in some Society of the infernals . . . The Society in which a man has been is sometimes shown him (there); for he returns to it . . .

1103². Man is born . . . to perform use to the Society in which he is (here).

1106. So long as these (good people) are in falsity, they cannot be intromitted into heavenly Societies . . .

1110². At last . . . they can be admitted into good Societies; but they still fluctuate long between truth and falsity. 1111^e.

1259. The nations, families, and houses represented His Kingdom, where all are distinguished into Societies; and the Societies into greater ones; and these again into greater ones, according to the differences of love and faith in general and in special. 2943².

1268. To be led to such is effected through intermediate Societies of Spirits and Angels . . .

1273. When souls are at last to come into the Society in which they had been while (here), they are led about to many mansions, which are Societies separate from but still conjoined with others. Now they are received, and now they are taken away to other Societies . . . until they come to the Society in which they had been while they lived (here), and there they remain. From this point there is a new beginning of their life.

—². They who are taken from vastation among the Angels, also vary Societies; and when they pass from one Society to another, they are dismissed with courtesy and charity; and this until they come into the angelic Society which accords with the distinctive quality of their charity, piety, probity, or sincere courtesy. Ex. 2699², Des.

1274. See SITUATION. 1277.

1277. Men thousands of miles apart may be in the same Society.

1316. When all have as the end the common good of society . . .

—^e. Hence the heavenly Societies are as a one.

1322. Evil Spirits also are distinguished into Societies, being bound together by like phantasies and cupidities, and act as a one in persecuting truths and goods.

1394. It is by this perception (of character) that they are conjoined into Societies . . . Hence the Societies are so distinct that nothing can be more so, according to all the differences of love and faith . . .

1506. He who is deprived of his Society becomes half dead . . .

1631^e. Such are expelled from the Societies . . .

1648^e. Such think and speak in Society; hence the form of the speech flows according to the connection and unanimity of the Society. 1649.

1752^e. Good Spirits are subordinate to angelic Spirits, and these to Angels, so that they constitute one angelic Society.

1758. Each Society or family of Spirits can be distinguished by its speech.

1808. 'Stars' = Angels, or Societies of them.

1835². External bonds make it possible for men to live in society.

1900^e. (Truths are disposed in the memory) according to the image of the Societies of Heaven.

1928. There are conjunctions of Truths like those of the Societies in Heaven. Ex.

2045². Self love destructive of society. 2057. 2219.

2127. When Societies of the evil are broken up. 2128, Des. 2129, Ex.

2130. I heard Societies of Spirits saying that the wolf had wanted to carry them off, but the Lord had rescued them. Their fear that they had come too late vanished when they were received by the angelic Societies. The admission (was) continued by Societies, up to twelve, the twelfth Society being admitted with more difficulty. Afterwards eight quasi Societies were admitted, of the female sex. This process of admission—that is, of reception—into the heavenly Societies, appears thus, and this continually, from one place to another, in order. . . The Societies appeared to be twelve, because '12' = all things of faith. See 9659⁴.

2131. They who are admitted are received by the angelic Societies with inmost charity and its joy; but they who do not want to remain in the Societies to which they come first are received by other Societies, until they come to that Society with which they accord, and they remain there until they go forth still more perfect. . . But the transference from one Society to another never occurs by rejection, but by something voluntary on their own part. D.704.

2132. See HYPOCRITE.

2133. Many Societies unite in a general Glorification.

2302. Many Societies of Angels have the care of little children . . .

2379. The man who is in good is as to his soul in Society with Angels.

2422^e. According to these affections, the good are distinguished into Societies.

2739. According to these loves . . . all the heavenly Societies are formed . . . 3189.

2753. (Seducers of virgins) can insinuate themselves into Societies. . . They thus pass from one Society to another, but are everywhere rejected . . .

2853². All parts of the human body correspond to Societies in Heaven; therefore it is said that these Societies belong to the province of the head, of the eye, and so on.

2973³. In every heavenly Society those in the midst are the best . . . 2996. 2998. 4051.

3214. There are Societies in which these (long continued representatives) take place.

3216. In the lower sphere, where there is a corresponding Society of Spirits . . . 3217.

3219². They had fallen down from an angelic Society (in consequence of being in error). 6322².

3451². (The Societies of the Church will differ as to doctrinals, but may still be one.)

3584. Truths and goods form a Society among themselves.

3629. Not one Society only inflows into each organ or member of the body, but very many . . . 3631, enum.

3630. Thus all the several viscera and members correspond to the Societies in Heaven, to so many quasi distinct Heavens.

3638. All the Societies keep the same situation relatively to the Lord . . . and also relatively to each individual . . . thus the Societies at his right are always at his right, however he may change his position.

3639. It is Known from the situation itself what Societies they are, and to what province they belong. 5171.

3665. All the Societies there are distinct according to the genera and species of good and truth, and the proximities thence. 4067², Ex.

3815^e. Spiritual relationship commences in the Society in which one is . . .

3886. There are as many kinds of pulses and respirations in Heaven as there are Societies. Ex.

3890. The Societies of the province of the heart are celestial Societies, and they are in the midst; those of the province of the lungs are spiritual, and are round about. The influx is through the celestial ones into the spiritual ones. Ex.

3891. Not only the universal Heaven, but also all the several Societies in consort, breathe as one man.

3913³. If he can serve the community - societati communi.

4041. All the heavenly Societies are ordained according to this form, and there is a gyration accordingly.

4051². A Society in which all were alike. (See 5189, below.)

4054. A host of Societies which care nothing for use, but only for pleasure. The effect of their presence.

[A.4067]⁴. Middle goods and delights are nothing but such Societies, which are applied to a man that he may be introduced to spiritual and celestial goods and truths.

4073². When the Societies of Spirits and Angels in middle good recede, new Societies draw near which are in more perfect good. A man's state is exactly according to the Societies of Spirits and Angels in the midst of which he is: such is his will, and such is his thought. But the changes of state are quite different when he adjoins the Societies to himself, or himself to them, from what they are when the Societies are adjoined to him by the Lord. Ex.

4075. While He made the Human Divine, He had Societies of Spirits and Angels around Him. Ex.

— How Societies may subserve a use, and still nothing be taken from them. Examps.

4077. The Societies do not easily recede . . . but when (the man) recedes they are indignant. Sig. and Ex.

—². When he who is being regenerated is transferred into other Societies.

4088. These are Societies which serve as mediums, and for communication. Ex.

4096⁴. These things can be known better when the idea is kept on the Societies through which they inflow; for man's willing and thinking come from these Societies . . .

4099. The Societies of Spirits which serve as middle good are those in worldly things; but the Societies of Angels which serve for introducing affections of truth are in heavenly things. These two Societies act with the man who is being regenerated. Ex.

4110². Good Spirits, Spirits of a middle sort, and evil Spirits, are adjoined to a regenerating man . . . but they are such Societies of Spirits as are not in agreement with him, except for a time; and therefore, when they have performed their use, they are separated. (See SEPARATE.)

4111². When Spirits are removed from one Society, and remitted into another, the states of their thoughts and affections are changed . . . But if they are remitted into Societies not in accord, they perceive undelight and restraint, and therefore they are separated thence and are borne into concordant Societies. Hence it is that the evil cannot stay in Societies of the good, nor the good in Societies of the evil; and that all Spirits and Angels are distinct in Societies according to affections. But as every affection contains many things, of which one is regnant, every person may be in a number of Societies, but strives after that one which is of his reigning affection, and is at last brought to it. Tr. 4121².

4121^e. When one Society is separated from another, it comes to a different one, and therefore to other goods.

4129². The steps of the process (of the adjunction of Societies to man and of their separation from him) are fully described in this chapter.

4151². When the Societies of Spirits in middle good are in Society with Angels, it appears to them exactly as if the truths and goods of the Angels were theirs.

But when they are separated, they perceive it is not so, and then they complain. Sig. 4186.

4223. It is the functions, therefore, to which the heavenly Societies principally correspond; and as they correspond to the functions, they correspond also to the organic forms.

4263^e. No Society is in like good to another.

4330. The Societies to which the things of the external man correspond are largely from this Earth; but those to which correspond the things of the internal man are for the most part from elsewhere. In the Heavens these Societies act as a one . . .

4403. Societies send forth Subjects. Ex.

4528. See EYE.

4619. That everyone comes into his own Society after death. Sig.

4624. As to his spirit, man is in Society with Spirits; as to his body, with men.

4625. The Societies of which the whole Heaven consists are more and less universal; the more universal are those to which an entire organ corresponds . . . Each Society is an image of the whole. . . As the more universal Societies are images of the Grand Man, they have particular Societies within themselves which correspond in like manner. (Thus there are Spirits of the lungs, heart, ear, eye, etc. in each of them.)

—^e. Their Perceptive varies according to the general changes of state of their Society.

4674. As to his spirit, every man is in some Society either angelic or diabolic; his thought is there . . .

—². Some (of these evil Spirits) are elevated into the first Societies which are in the entrance to Heaven . . .

4720^e. All things of every doctrine regard each other as in a kind of Society.

4793⁴. The shame of injuring society, an internal bond.

4797. When Angels are in their own Society, they are in their own face; but when they come into another Society, their faces are changed according to its affections . . .

4800. There are Societies of Spirits and Angels to which all the several things with man correspond; and the more Societies there are, and the more in a Society, the better and stronger is the correspondence.

4802². By truths (evil Spirits) have communication with some Societies of Heaven . . .

—^e. When such approach angelic Societies, they stink. 7225^e.

4805. Societies of interior friendship. Des.

— Those outside their Society they regard as not alive.

4837³. Heaven is distinguished into many general Societies, and into lesser ones subordinate to these; but they are a one through good . . . If Heaven were distinguished according to truths, there would be no Heaven. Ex.

5002². So in a civil society: where everyone is for himself. . . the society is destroyed. Therefore the esse of such a society is also conjunction, but in externals.

5025. (Dignities should be for the sake of societies.)

5050. The Societies to which the loins and organs of generation correspond. Tr. 5053.

5058. A Society of the simple good.

5060. Action of Societies into the corresponding parts of the body.

5075². Every man is in Society with Spirits. 5614².

5173. After Spirits have been agitated, they are let into . . . the Societies into which they are to be inaugurated. Ex.

5182. The thought and speech must in themselves be in accord with everyone in the Society.

5189. On a wandering Society of Spirits, who all speak differently, but think alike. D.3823.

5288^e. See FORM.

5339^e. With the regenerate, these series (of truths) are according to the ordinations of the Societies in the Heavens; with the unregenerate, according to the ordinations of the Societies in the Hells. 5343^e.

5344². The spiritual things (in the interior Natural) correspond to the Societies in the Second Heaven.

5381. Societies of Spirits of the urine.

5527². Spirits elevated into angelic Societies come into like intelligence . . . 5649³.

5531. These receptacles in man are as many as his general truths, and each corresponds to some Society in Heaven.

5552. The things in man which have the most life correspond to those Societies in the Heavens which have the most life and consequent happiness. . . But the things which have less life, correspond to such Societies as are in less life. Examps.

5554. Very many Societies of the integuments. Ex.

5560. Societies of the cartilages and bones. Ex.

5649³. For there are angelic Societies in the exterior, and also in the interior, Natural.

5704². All the Societies are disposed according to truths under good . . .

5798⁷. When the Lord reduces into order the (heavenly) Societies, which is continually being done on account of the new comers, He gives them what is blessed; and when this inflows into the Societies which are in the opposite—for all the Societies of Heaven have opposite Societies in Hell, which produces an equilibrium—these latter are angry, burst forth into evil, and thus incur the penalty.

5856. Communications of Societies with other Societies are effected through . . . Subjects. I could not know when any Society was with me, until they sent forth a Spirit. (Thus) the Spirits and Angels with man are for the sake of communication with Societies in Hell, and with Societies in Heaven. 5983.

5859. Thus good Spirits, in the heavenly Society into which they come, put on and possess all the wisdom of all in that Society . . . 6193.

5861. If a Spirit longs for it, he is shown the Society in whose consort he had been (here), and from which emissary Spirits had been with him; and, after passing through some states, he at last returns to the same Society . . .

5975. In a Society there, when many act as one . . . what one thinks, the others think.

5983. Without Subjects, the Societies could know nothing that was with me . . .

5984. When Spirits . . . want to have communication with a number of Societies, they send a Subject to each Society.

6004³. When scientifics are thus infilled, the thought extends itself widely to many Societies in the Heavens at once.

6023². A Society is more the neighbour . . .

6191². I could perceive of what Societies the Spirits were the Subjects; and could also discourse with the Societies themselves. 6194^e. 6197.

6206^e. Societies are conjoined together by spheres.

6324. Spirits who reason much cannot be admitted into interior angelic Societies.

6338. As soon as Angels or Spirits are congregated, they are at once disposed into order, and thus constitute a heavenly Society, which is an image of Heaven. Ex.

6388^e. Such are separated from angelic Society.

6430. A man in the good of life is, as to his interiors, in Society with Angels. 6629, Ex.

6470^e. Heaven is most distinct in Societies according to the quality of the good. Ex.

6476. By reading the Lord's prayer, communication was effected with some Societies in Heaven.

6599^e. Thought diffuses itself into Societies . . . and the faculty of understanding and perceiving is according to this extension, that is, according to the influx thence. 6600, Ex.

—³. There is, however, no influx of thoughts and affections into Societies; but from Societies, through the Angels and Spirits with the man.

[A.] 6601. In every idea and affection there are innumerable things which penetrate into (a number of) Societies. Examp.

—e. (Thus) the quality of a man's life is exactly according to the Societies into which his thought and affection extend.

6602. The spheres . . . extend themselves into spheres of remote Societies. Examp.

6603. The thoughts and affections which reach into Societies do not move the Societies, in special, to think and will as the man, Spirit, or Angel does . . . but they enter into the universal sphere of the affection and thought of the Societies, the Societies knowing nothing about it. Ex. . . All thoughts and affections enter into the spheres of those Societies with which they accord. (See EXTEND.)

6604². In the furthest Societies the extension vanishes. . . . Within these limits . . . the thoughts and affections may be varied; now being nearer to one Society, now to another; and, when they are in the midst of one Society, all the other Societies are relatively in the circumferences.

6605. Every Society also relates to a man . . . and hence every Spirit and Angel has a form (beautiful or he reverse) according to his communication with Societies. Ex.

6607. When thoughts and affections diffuse themselves, they circulate almost according to the form of the circunvolutions of the etheritious substance in the brain . . . In such a form are the angelic Societies.

6608. The variations of intellectual light come forth according to the communications with the heavenly Societies. Des.

6609. See CLOUD.

6610. As long as a man lives, his ideas . . . are extended to various and new Societies (either infernal or heavenly). Des.

6614. See EXTEND. So63. H.49. 477².

6813. When Spirits of Mercury come to other Societies, they explore what they know. There is such a communication among Spirits that when they are in a Society, if they are loved, all things they know are communicated, not by speech, but by influx.

6819. A less or greater society is the neighbour . . . A society of many is in a degree prior to a single man; our Country to a society. 6820, Ex. T.412, Gen.art.

6977². Lest an evil (Soul) should have communication with any Society of Heaven, all truth and good are taken away.

7137². Simple Spirits are injected by the infesters into the Society with which they are preparing communication. Sig. 7337³.

7363. See MARS.

7396. Kingdoms are represented in Heaven as a man, and the Societies in it as his members. (Just as in Heaven.) How delightful that representation would be if (the people therein) were united together by charity and its faith! Wherever possible, the Lord thus unites Societies; for the Divine truth introduces this order. . . It is on earth also, but the Societies which constitute it are scattered through the whole globe, being those in love to Him and charity. These scattered Societies have been collected by the Lord, so that they also represent one man. These Societies are not only within, but also without, the Church; and, taken together, are called the Lord's Church scattered and collected from the good in the whole globe . . .

7454³. See SPHERE. 9606.

7502³. The heavenly Societies with which (evil members of the Church) have had communication . . . can only be separated from them by degrees. Ex.

7568. Hence infernals dare not approach any heavenly Society. Refs.

7836. The Societies in Heaven were represented by the consociations of the sons of Israel according to tribes, families, and houses. With the Societies in Heaven the case is this: the universal Heaven is one Society, which is ruled by the Lord as one man; the general Societies there are as many as the members, organs, and viscera; the special Societies are as many as the small viscera contained within each viscus, member, and organ; and the particular Societies are as many as in these there are lesser parts constituting a greater. So03. P.65. 68.

—³. But with each Society in particular the case is this: it consists of a number of Angels who accord as to goods. The goods are various, for every person has his peculiar good; but these accordant goods are disposed by the Lord into such a form that together they present one good. Such Societies were represented by the 'houses.' Ill. So03, Sig.

—⁴. If a heavenly Society is not as complete as it ought to be, there are taken from some neighbouring Society as many as will fill the form of that good. Sig. and Ex.

—⁵. Into the Second Heaven the Lord inflows with innocence through the Third; and it is through this influx that the Societies in the Second Heaven are disposed or ordained as to their goods; therefore the states of the good are changed according to the influx of the innocence; consequently the conjunctions of the Societies there vary.

So04. That the good (of one Society) is not to be commingled with that of another. Sig. and Ex.

8367². For through temptations a man as to his spirit is introduced interiorly into Heaven, and to the heavenly Societies with which he had been before. Ex.

8469. Sufficient good of truth for all in the Society. Sig. and Ex.

— Every Society has a common good distinct from that of the other Societies; everyone also in a Society has a particular good distinct from that of any other in the Society; from the distinct goods of those in a Society there results a form called a heavenly form; and the universal Heaven consists of such forms.

These conjunctions are called forms relatively to the goods, and Societies relatively to the persons.

8470. 'A tent' = a Society as to good.

—². Everyone in a Society in Heaven communicates his good to all in the Society, and all there communicate to everyone, whence comes forth . . . a general good, which communicates with the general good of other Societies; whence comes forth a good still more general . . .

8472. Reception according to the power of each Society. Sig. and Ex.

8794². All good given to man by regeneration has extension to the Societies in Heaven. (Continued under EXTEND.) The good itself inflows through the Societies of Heaven which are round about; there is no good without influx through the Societies; the Societies of Heaven are in a continuous coherence round about; nor does a discontinuity appear anywhere. . . Enrichment with good is nothing but insinuation into angelic Societies.

8795. No [extension] at all to the celestial Societies. Sig. and Ex.

8802². The intermediate (Angels) have extension even into the celestial Societies.

8918. What makes the angelic Societies appear distinct, and at a distance from each other. H.193. W.10.

8945⁵. Heaven consists of Societies of Angels who are in (these) goods . . .

8985. (In Heaven, when persons are thought of, their Societies are excited and disturbed; but not so when the thought is abstracted from persons.) Ex.

9079². Thus are disposed the Societies in Heaven. (Like family relationships.) 9807.

9334². See EVIL.

9433³. 'Chambers' = the heavenly Societies.

9670². The intermediate angelic Societies represented by the 'veil.' Ex. 9673; Ex. H.27.

9695. The Angel they worshipped was an angelic Society. Ex.

9807. The truths and goods with man correspond to these Societies.

9827². When angelic Societies are removed from Spirits . . .

9877. See FORM.

10516. In that Earth they do not live in Societies: there are Societies when they assemble for worship. 10813.

10554². See WORD.

10810. The good were left to form a heavenly Society among themselves.

10811. That cloud, in a human form, was an angelic Society, with the Lord in the midst.

10814. The dominion of self love is among those who dwell together in Society.

—^e. These also dwell by nations, families, and houses, although in Societies.

H. 41. Heaven consists of innumerable Societies. Chap.

50. (The best Angels do not live in Societies.) Ex. 189. See A.10813.

51. Every Society is a Heaven in a less form. Chap.

52^e. 'Michael,' 'Gabriel,' etc. are angelic Societies.

(d). The Societies have no name, but are distinguished by the quality of their good.

55. When the Lord presents Himself in any Society, He appears according to the quality of its good. Des.

62. Remote Societies seen in form of a man.

65. Angels know in what member each Society is.

68. Each Society in the Heavens relates to one man. Chap.

— . When the hypocrites were separated, the entire Society appeared as an obscure mass, (which by degrees resolved itself into the human form).

69. An entire angelic Society, when the Lord presents Himself, appears in the human form. Des.

70. One Society is not a like man to another. . . The Societies in the middle of the Inmost Heaven appear in the most perfect and beautiful human form.

71. The more there are in a Society, the more perfect is its human form.

— . Every Society of Heaven increases in number daily.

94. The Societies in any member correspond to the same member in man . . . Man subsists from this correspondence.

128². See LIGHT.

134. No two Societies have the same heat. Ex.

149. In each Society those in greater love dwell to the east; those in greater light to the south, and so on; and it is provided that there are all kinds [of Angels] in every Society. But in relation to the whole Heaven the Societies to the east and south excel those to the west and north.

157. Every Angel passes through these changes of state, and also every Society in general . . . One Angel is in delight when another is in undelight, and this within the same Society; and in one Society differently from another; and in the Societies of the Celestial Kingdom differently from those in the Spiritual.

204. See WISDOM.

—^e. This communication with Societies (does not come) to the manifest perception of those in them: it is a communication with their quality . . .

207. In a like (relative situation) are all the Societies of each Heaven. Ex. A Society of a higher Heaven has no communication with a Society of a lower one except by correspondences, and (this) is what is called influx. (See J.27, below.)

213. As the greater Societies consist of some hundreds of thousands of Angels, and as all within a Society are in like good, but not in like wisdom, it follows that there are governments . . . of one kind in the Societies of the Celestial Kingdom, and of another in those of the Spiritual.

[H.] 217. In the Spiritual Kingdom the forms of government . . . vary according to the ministries which the Societies perform. (These ministries enum.)

218. The governors have the good of the Society in the prior place . . . They dwell in the middle of the Society.

236. All in Heaven understand each other's language, from whatever Society they are, whether neighbouring or remote.

275. The Angels in greatest wisdom are in the middle of their Society; and so on.

294. Every Spirit (in the World of Spirits) belongs to some Society (of Heaven or Hell), and subsists by influx from it; and thus acts as one with it. Hence, as man is conjoined with Spirits, he is conjoined with . . . that Society of Heaven or Hell in which he is as to his love . . . 438.

360². Man cannot be formed for Heaven except . . . in the society of (others.) Ex.

378. Hence marriages there are contracted with those in the same Society. Rep. and Ex.

383. Hence every Society of Heaven consists of like ones. Like are brought to like, not of themselves, but from the Lord.

—^e. The marriage festivities differ in the different Societies.

387. Every Society performs a peculiar office. Ex.

391. All Societies in the Heavens are distinct according to uses. . . Some Societies have the care of infants; some instruct them as they grow up; some educate boys and girls of good disposition (who die); some teach and lead the simple good . . . others protect novitiate Spirits. Some Angels are present with those in the Lower Earth; and some with those in the Hells; and some with those who are being resuscitated from the dead. (Continued under ANGEL.)

399². If such approach a heavenly Society, the delight of those in it is diminished . . .

427. After death, the evil are immediately bound to the infernal Society in which, as to their reigning love, they had been (here); and the good to the heavenly Society in which they had been as to love, charity, and faith. (But this does not prevent the meeting together of those who had known each other here, so long as they remain in the World of Spirits.) 481². 497, Ex.

428. There is no passage open to any Heavenly Society, except by a narrow way, the entrance to which is guarded.

429. The gates to the heavenly Societies appear to those only who have been prepared for Heaven. To each Society there is one entrance from the World of Spirits, beyond which there is one way which branches into a number as it ascends.

438. A man does not appear in his Society while (here), because he thinks naturally; but those who think abstractedly from the body sometimes do so: they go meditating, silent, and looking at no one; and, as soon as any Spirit addresses them, they vanish.

452^e. (Such) are for the most part bound to some infernal Society. (See 571².)

468. Moral truths relate to our life relatively to Societies . . .

479. Universal Heaven is distinct in Societies according to the differences of the good of love; and every Spirit becoming an Angel is conveyed to the Society where his love is. There, he is at home, as if he had been born there . . . When he departs, there is a constant resistance, and an affection of longing to return to his like. (The same in Hell.)

—⁶. In the World of Spirits, Spirits go in no other ways than those which lead to the Society which is in the good (or evil) of their love. They see no others. W.145.

510. Everyone comes to his own Society in which his spirit had been . . . successively; and at last he enters it. Ex.

—². Their Society is shown them while still in their exteriors, so that (such) may know they have been in Hell even while (here).

511. Evil Spirits are usually led about to those Societies with which they had had communication by good thoughts and affections . . . thus to those which they had induced to believe that they were not evil . . . At the sight of them the good Spirits turn away, and thus the evil Spirits are turned to the quarter where their infernal Society is.

513. Instructions are given by the Angels of many Societies, especially by those which are in the northern and southern quarters; for these angelic Societies are in intelligence and wisdom from Knowledges. Des.

514. All in the places of instruction . . . as to their interiors are bound to the Societies of Heaven to which they will go; and, as these Societies are ordained according to the heavenly form, so also are the places where the instructions are given.

517^e. Thus, when a Spirit comes into his own Society into which he is initiated by instruction, he is in his own life when he is in his own use.

519. After the Spirits have been prepared by instructions for Heaven . . . they are clothed in angelic garments, and are borne to a way which leads upwards, are delivered to the Angel guards, and are then received by other Angels, and introduced into the Societies, and into many happinesses there; and then each one is borne by the Lord into his own Society, also through various roads which are known to the Lord alone; and when they arrive at their own Society their interiors are opened, and they are at once recognized, and received with joy. M.261.

541. The infernal Societies. See HELL, here. 542. 543. 553³. 573^e.

553². Among those in like evil, and thence in a like infernal Society, there is a general (facial) likeness . . .

560. Imagine a Society composed of those who love themselves only . . .

588. The Hells are as many as are the angelic Societies; for every heavenly Society corresponds, by opposition, to an infernal one. (See 541.)

594. Under each Society of Heaven there is a Society of Hell corresponding by opposition, from which results an equilibrium; and the Lord continually provides that no infernal Society beneath a heavenly one shall prevail. Des.

601. An entire Society can have communication with another Society, and also with another individual, wherever he is, by an emissary Spirit . . . The like is the case with the conjunction of man with the Societies in Heaven and in Hell, through Spirits adjoined to man from the World of Spirits.

N. 92. A Society is loved when its good is consulted from the love of good.

J. 10². The human race on one Earth might perish (for when man has no spiritual life) no society can be formed. Des.

27. All in the Spiritual World are collected into Societies . . . and each Society in its own place forms three Heavens, and, under these, three Hells; and therefore there are some in the lofty places there, some in those of middle height, some below these, and some in the Hells under them; and the higher ones dwell together as men do in cities, all together amounting to hundreds of thousands. (See H. 207.)

32. After death, everyone is bound to some Society; he is bound to it as soon as he comes into the Spiritual World; but, in his first state, a Spirit is not aware of it . . . and he goes hither and thither, wherever his desires take him; but still he is actually where his love is, that is, in the Society where are those in like love. (At first) he appears in many other places; (but) as soon as he is brought by the Lord into his reigning love, he vanishes, and is with those in the Society to which he is bound. 69³.

56⁵. (Mock heavenly Societies of the Babylonians.)

C. J. 18. (Societies of the imaginary Heavens.) Des.

21. All ordination of Societies in that World is ordination according to the differences of love. Ex. The Lord so conjoins the Societies that they all lead as it were one life of a man—the Societies of the Heavens, so that they lead one life of celestial and spiritual love; the Societies of the Hells, so that they lead one life of diabolical and infernal love . . .

57. Since the Last Judgment . . . there have been ordained to every love, good and evil, ways, which those who arrive from the world at once enter, and go to the Society corresponding to their love; and thus the evil are borne to a Society which is in conjunction with the Hells, and the good into a Society which is in conjunction with the Heavens. . . Such Societies, in the World of Spirits . . . are innumerable . . . and meanwhile, before they are elevated into Heaven, or cast down into Hell, they are in spiritual conjunction with men (here).

85. No Society is formed of the Quakers there. Ex.

S. 64. When I have read the sense of the letter, communication has been made with the Heavens, now with this Society of them, now with that . . .

—². Spirits abuse this by reciting passages . . . and taking note of the Society with which communication is effected.

72. A copy of the Word in the sacrarium of every larger Society.

107. Every Society is a Heaven in a less form; (therefore) in every Society of Heaven, those in the middle of it relate to the heart and lungs, and with these there is the greatest light, (which) thence propagates itself towards the circumferences, and thus to all in the Society, and makes their spiritual life. (Shown by experiment.) W. 253².

108. (A Society of Heaven in conjunction with a congregation who were singing a Psalm on earth.)

113. Each verse of the Word communicates with some Society of Heaven.

W. 79. An entire Society has sometimes appeared to me as one man angel: it could appear either as a giant, or as an infant. P. 64.

141. Universal Heaven is distinct in Societies according to all the differences of loves; in like manner Hell; and in like manner the World of Spirits. Ex.

143. The love which is the life turns its receptacles, called members, organs, and viscera, thus the whole man, to that Society which is in like love.

328. A man (here) means also a Society less or greater; as a republic, kingdom, or empire; and also the greatest Society, which is the whole globe.

366³. The multitude of the glands (of the brain) may be compared to that of the angelic Societies, which are also innumerable, and in a like order . . .

368³. Therefore all the Societies of Heaven, and all the Angels in the Societies, are ordained according to the affections of love; and no Society, or Angel in a Society, according to anything of the understanding separate from its love. In like manner in the Hells, and their Societies . . .

P. 4⁴. The form of a Society is more perfect in proportion as each Angel is more distinctly his own, and thus free; and thus loves his consociates as from himself . . .

62. As many Societies constitute Heaven as there are general affections of heavenly love . . .

64^e. The greatest Society, which is Heaven in the whole complex.

170. Such are admitted into a Society where is genuine faith, (and are thus shown the character of their own faith).

217⁴. Each Kingdom is distinct in innumerable Societies, greater or smaller . . . the Societies of the Celestial Kingdom being ordained according to the differences of celestial love, and those of the Spiritual, according to the differences of spiritual love.

278a⁶. As to his spirit, every man is in some Society; in a heavenly Society if he is in affection of good; in an infernal one if in conceivance of evil. . . Unless he were in some Society, a man could not live; and he is ruled by the Lord through it. If he is in an infernal Society, he can only be brought out of it according to the laws of the Divine Providence, among which is this: that the man must see he is there, and want to get out, and try to do so of himself. He can do this while (here), but not after death; for he then remains to eternity in the Society into which he had inserted himself in the world.

[P.] 289. Some were sent into a Society, and communication with the neighbouring Societies, to which their thoughts were usually extended, was cut off. They were then told to think differently from the way in which the Spirits of that Society thought, and to compel themselves to think against it; but they confessed it to be impossible.

294⁴. When a man knows that a thing is evil, and wants to shun it . . . he is taken by the Lord from the Society which is in that evil, and is transferred into a Society in which that evil is not.

296³. The real cause of an evil man's leading himself deeper into evil, is that he introduces himself more and more interiorly, and also deeper and deeper, into infernal Societies, as he wills and does evil . . . and he who has introduced himself more interiorly and deeply into infernal Societies becomes as it were bound round with cords . . .

—⁵. If evils are only in the thought, and not in the will, he is not yet, with [that] evil, in an infernal Society; but he enters it when they are also in the will.

— . Every man . . . is in some Society there . . . and sometimes appears there, while in deep meditation. (Moreover) as the sound of the voice and of the spoken words circumscribes itself in the air, so does affection with thought circumscribe itself into the Societies (there). 307².

303. See DELIGHT-jucundum.

319^e. He rests only in that Society where his reigning love is, to which everyone knows the way: it is as if he smelled it.

338⁴. No one can live with any except those in like love . . . Hence it is that everyone comes into the Society of his own . . . and recognizes them as relations and friends; and, when he meets and sees them, it is as if he had known them from infancy. . . What is more, no one in a Society can dwell in any house but his own: everyone in a Society has his own house, which he finds prepared for him as soon as he enters the Society.

R. 65. A sky full of stars appears there also, from the angelic Societies, each of which shines as a star before those below; and by this they know in what situation the angelic Societies are. T. 160.

73^e. 'The Angel' is written to, because by him is meant the angelic Society which corresponds to a Church of such.

153². After some days they see they are in a World where various Societies are instituted, which is called the World of Spirits. All the Societies there, which are innumerable, are wonderfully ordained according to natural affections, good and evil; the former communicating with Heaven, and the latter with Hell. The novitiate Spirit is transferred into various Societies, both good and evil, and is explored as to whether he is affected with truths (or falsities), and how. If he is affected by truths, he is led away from evil Societies into good Societies, into various ones, until he comes into a Society which corresponds to his natural affection, and he there enjoys the good which accords with that affection, until he puts off the natural affection, and puts on a spiritual one, and he is then elevated into Heaven. T. 281. R. 549.

—⁵. But (those) not affected by truths, but by falsities . . . are led away from good Societies into evil Societies . . . until they come into a Society which corresponds to the concupiscences of their love. (Their further experiences described.) T. 281. R. 549.

198^e. When not in society with others.

200^e. The Word communicates, singularly, with each Society of Heaven.

341. 600 English clergy ascend into one of the Societies of a higher Heaven.

500². They do not recede from these falsities; first, because they have introduced themselves . . . into a Society with their like in the Spiritual World . . .

611. (The introduction of prepared Spirits into their heavenly Societies, fully des. here under HEAVEN.)

675. (Experience of a small Society of Englishmen fully des. under ENGLAND.)

676³. Then, in the World of Spirits, according to the varieties of their concupiscences, they are disposed into Societies, which afterwards sink down.

752. (A Society of good Catholics which is continually being perfected.) —^e.

866². There are Societies in the World of Spirits, as in the Heavens and Hells.

883⁴. Heaven is distinct in innumerable Societies . . . according to the differences of affections of love in general and in special: each Society is one species of affection, and they dwell there distinctly, according to the relationships of it; and those in the closest relationship, in one house.

937². If anyone there loves another whom he Knows, he dwells with him in one Society; and, if he loves him inmost, in one house.

M. 10⁶. When prepared, they see ways opened to Societies of their like.

—⁸. Every one comes into that Society of Heaven whose form he is in individual effigy; and therefore, when he enters into that Society, he enters a form which corresponds to himself. . . Every Society is like a General, and the Angels therein are like the similar parts . . .

11. (Visit of ten Spirits to a Society of Heaven.) Fully des.

15. The prince wore the ensign of his Society.

18. Hence is society.

266. I am prince of the Society; the other is chief priest there ; and the prince said that he was the servant of the Society . . .

—⁴. Imagine in the world a Society composed of devils, and another of Angels . . .

283. Every household . . . is a small Society . . .

294^e. The Society from which the little boy was sent, was a Society of the New Heaven . . .

411². The young man follows his wife into her Heaven, or into her house, if they are in the same Society.

500⁶. When all (the adulterers) were within the heavenly Society . . .

523. Society would fall to pieces.

530². Heaven is distinct in innumerable Societies, and so is Hell . . . and the mind of every man . . . actually dwells in a Society, and intends and thinks in like manner with those there . . . But so long as the man lives (here), he migrates from one Society into another, according to the changes of the affections of his will and the derivative thoughts . . .

T. 14^e. I have often seen in Societies the spirits of living persons ; some in angelic, and some in infernal ones.

65. There is not a Society in Heaven which does not correspond to some organ . . .

78². The things in our houses . . . constantly remain there ; but before those who wander from Societies to Societies, such things are changed . . .

140. Inspiration is insertion into angelic Societies.

160². (The Societies in the east, west, and south, enum.)

403^e. Honours are . . . the pillars of society.

406. Man is born . . . for the sake of others . . . otherwise there would be no Society that would hold together, with any good in it.

412. A Society is like one man ; and those who enter into it compose as it were one body . . . The Lord, and, from Him, the Angels, when they look down into the earth, see an entire Society as one man, and its form from the qualities of those in it.

—³. But the rulers of this age can perform uses to a Society, and yet not love the neighbour. Ex.

— . They who have performed uses from love to the neighbour, are set over a heavenly Society . . .

447. Heaven in innumerable Societies . . . Hell in Societies . . . and after death a man is at once assigned to the Society where his reigning love is . . . Immediately after his entrance into the Spiritual World . . . he is for some time being prepared for his Society. Des.

498². Otherwise society would nowhere continue to exist.

608. I have seen one Society . . . of 10,000, as one man.

646. All Heaven is in Societies according to . . . and all Hell . . . The Church on earth is ordained by the Lord in like manner . . .

678. All of the same religion are disposed into Societies ; in Heaven according to . . . in Hell, into congregations according to . . .

798³. See CALVIN.

816. The people of Hamburg are not assembled in one Society. Ex.

D. 197. In Societies of evil Spirits, the worst are in the middle.

980. Such are conjoined into the sphere of a Society.

986. They at once fly to their own Society, to tell it.

1085. Nothing can inflow from evil Spirits into heavenly Societies. Ex.

1125. Progressing from one Society into another. . . The celestial come first into a Society of the serious. Ex.

1167. The condition of men, and Spirits, as to Societies, compared.

—^e. But in a true Church . . . Societies can be varied ; for they are led like Spirits. Ex.

1259. He prayed to be admitted into Societies of good Spirits, which was granted. . . He begged to be dismissed, and to come into other Societies . . . D.Min. 4732.

1356. Such are unexpectedly cast out of Societies.

1765. On those who disturb Societies (here).

2052. Those in a Society Know each other.

2091. Spirits and Angels change Societies . . . myriads of times. Ex. 2092.

2093. Changes of Societies are their changes of state.

2094. Changes of Societies compared to changes of their faces.

2103. Societies consists of those of one genus, with its species.

2121. Societies badly made up : dispersed by 'the east wind.' And in other ways. 2129. 2177. There are consociations even in Heaven which have to be tempered. 2132. D.Min.4814.

2166. Societies of Spirits which crave to wander forth. Ex.

2177. Societies are dispersed and reduced into order in various ways. Ex.

2204. There was one who was as it were the centre of the rest . . . in the Society.

2266. How it is with Societies of Spirits . . . When the thoughts of many Societies inflowed into one idea . . .

2315. Societies are continued as in a concatenated series. Ex.

2321. How all can be ruled, Societies being continuous. Moreover, a Society of one perceives the activities of all the other Societies . . .

2324. Each Society is a man. Ex.

2341. On speech outside the Society.

2361. On Societies which contain those who dissent.

2376. Societies have their Spirits with men. Ex.

2405. Nothing can exist of any faculty or quality unless there are Societies of Societies of many, and still higher ones, which inflow.

2499. When such have been ejected from Societies, some mark always adheres to them . . . so that at last they are tolerated in no Society.

2705. Such are rejected like excrements from their Societies . . . for every heavenly Society is founded in conjugal love.

2716. It is in a general Society as in each man . . .

2774. They who form Societies here want to be similarly associated there; and therefore Societies formed here, of those unlike in animus, for various ends, are very troublesome. Ex.

2972^e. For dissociating Societies badly consociated.

2991. On separations from Societies.

3012. He tried to extricate himself from their Society. Des.

3035. An idea of the Societies (there) from the consociations of the muscles . . .

3063. When Spirits are borne on high and in a moment into the deep, it is because there is a change of Societies, which are adjoined by phantasies . . .

3076. When anyone is thought of . . . he is at once carried away from the Society in which he is into the Society in which is the one thinking about him; so that he then comes from his own Society into another; but as soon as the thought ceases, he returns into his own Society, which he is unaware of . . .

3225. (These) are representations of Societies which remain in lowest things . . . and the little one of Societies which are interior. Thus these representations arise from changes of the state of Societies.

3226. It is the lowest Society which has clothing for a Subject.

3685. Spirits are seen round me as if not in any Society: caused by the fancy that Spirits are gas. 3754.

3686. But the Spirits confessed that there are Societies: that they see each other, dwell together, etc. But this applies to good Spirits and Angels: the evil do not appear to each other except on certain occasions . . .

3687. It is the love alone which determines Spirits and Angels into Societies . . .

3702. The more numerous the Societies are which concur (in a Subject), the more . . .

— It is nefarious for good Societies to have the same Subject as evil ones . . .

3812. They who retain so little of their own can be in Societies, but scarcely know it.

3857². Without the reflection of place, etc. man cannot be in society.

3941. Certain representations are variations of Societies. . . Progressions from one place to another, not from phantasy, mean changes of Societies; for all Societies have their own situation . . . 4087. 4403, Ex.

3942. As change of places come from changes of Societies, and ideas cause Spirits to change their place, it follows that every idea is also a change of Societies . . .

4029. What angelic Societies were with me while asleep.

4062. Wherever the Angels are, even while in uses, they are in (their) Societies, although they may then be associated with others.

4154. There are Societies there of all things which can ever come into the thought and concupiscences of man. Examp.

4180. When Spirits pass from a Society through Societies to their own Society, they seem to themselves to journey . . . 4232^e.

4232. A Spirit, and still more an Angel, changes his Societies according to the changes of his state, which takes place continually; but they are transmitted by the Lord, at His pleasure, into other Societies, and yet other ones. (From experience.)

4269. Spirits send of their own into other Societies, to have communication. Evil Spirits . . . enter into Societies, and excite them, causing them to be explored . . . and thus dissociated . . . (See 4268.)

4280. How some Societies of Spirits were affected by the sphere of the Lord's affections.

4287. How innumerable Societies conspire to one principle of falsity . . .

4288. Every idea . . . is the image of such a Society in general . . .

4322. Evil can be taken away (there) by removals of evil Societies.

4324. Spirits are not permitted to be such together as they had been in Society (here).

4480^e. When Spirits are elevated into Heaven, external Societies are taken away.

4486. Are snatched away into other Societies, although they relapse into their own.

4552. Evil Societies cohere together, and adjoin to themselves the stupid and simple. Ex.

4679. A heavenly Society infested by an evil Spirit.

4753. They (thus) summon infernal Societies.

4755. Every Society has its own respiration. Ex.

4786. The angelic Societies with a Spirit inflow not only into the things of his mind and body, but also into . . . his garments, etc. Examps.

4885. Some such Societies constituted his head, some his arms, and so on; so that as they were removed, so were the parts of his body echanged.

5057. Societies (there) constitute cities. Des.

5058. Every such Society, city, or mountain, has a correspondence with some part of the human body, both outwardly and inwardly with man.

5130. When Sirens act in Society, they have power; but, when dissociated, they have none.

5164. While a Spirit is in (externals) he goes hither and thither, now in one Society, now in another; now with those from Heaven, now with those from Hell . . .

5173. They know their winter, spring, etc. are coming; they have then a different face, and state; and this takes place in the whole Society.

5189. I saw a certain one of the ancients, who was in a great angelic Society, depart; and its wisdom was at once taken away (showing that the rest had wisdom by communication with him). 5194.

5511. On the purifications of Societies.

5832. They have profaned the society of marriage.

5902. Every Spirit is afforded the opportunity of going out of his Society or city . . . they who love uses never want to do so . . .

—^e. These are they from whom all Societies are purified.

5993a. See ZINZENDORF.

5998. The evil are led to the good Societies with which they had communication (here) through the truths of the Word with them . . . and they depart with aversion, and are thus loosed from them. Afterwards they are borne to evil Societies, with which they are delighted, and with which they conjoin themselves; and thus truths and goods are taken away, and evils and falsities are seized on, until at last they come into their reigning love. But the good are borne to Societies not good, and when they do not agree with them, they depart, and thus are separated from them. They are also borne to various good Societies, and are conjoined with them . . .

6027. See MARRIAGE. —⁸. —¹². —¹⁴.

6031. No evil can be removed until it has been called forth . . . Thus, for the first time, are such Societies removed from a man. 6032, Ex.

6033. The Societies of the Spiritual World were taken away from him, and he then became very stupid; and he could return to no life of the understanding, until he returned to his Societies, into which there was an extension of his thoughts; so that man's thought and derivative intelligence depend on his communication with Societies, and he cannot be reformed by the taking away of those Societies; but . . . the man must of himself reject those Societies.

6106⁶. There are foul Societies, where harlots and adulterers meet . . .

D. Min. 4675. (How Societies of Spirits which are not yet celestial or spiritual defend themselves from evil genii.)

4732. On the freedom of choosing a Society.

4772. James Benzelius perceived that I was in a certain Society in Heaven. (By alluring simple good Spirits) he came into that Society, and began to infest me by his sphere. But he lost all power of thinking, which caused him to appear bound hand and foot, and was cast down.

E. 78⁴. When evil Spirits, not yet vastated, enter any heavenly Society, they are direfully tortured.

90. These Societies (of Heaven) correspond to those on earth who are in like affections . . .

— . All these Societies are called Angels . . .

206. See WAY.

212. Heaven distinct in Societies according to . . . 256^e. 306. 837. 1093².

223. The Societies into which the Heavens are distinguished are for the most part Cities.

307. 'One of the elders' = a Society of Heaven excelling in wisdom.

313³. In every Society of the Heavens the inmost is the most perfect . . .

403². In general, (these trees)=a whole Society . . .

413. He is bound to some heavenly Society . . .

431¹¹. The ordinations of the twelve tribes represented those of the angelic Societies. Ex. and Ill. 447^e.

486². In the Spiritual World are Societies distinct according to . . .

537². He is at once bound to infernal Societies, or heavenly Societies . . .

659²⁴. They will never return to the Societies of Heaven. Sig.

674³. Within each Society there is a general communication . . . The variations of affections originating from the communication come forth from the influx of affections from other Societies . . . and also from newcomers who enter the Society; and also from the fact that few or many are taken out of the Society . . .

676². Within the Societies there is a constant quality of the state of each one's life . . . But outside the Societies anyone's name is not constant; for before a Spirit comes into any Society, he runs through many states . . .

[E.] 677³. When Societies are being purified, which happens whenever evil persons have insinuated themselves into them . . .

759³. A man who has become spiritual . . . is in a heavenly Society; but a natural man is in an infernal Society . . .

816³. Spirits excite heavenly Societies to conjunction with them by bringing forth passages of the letter. 832².

831⁵. Angels of the Second Heaven also dwell distinct in Societies; but the Societies of the Third are above them . . .

889⁴. There is not one thought of Spirit or man which does not through this sphere communicate with some Society. 1093⁴, Ex.

951⁷. As man by his garments has communication with Societies of Heaven; and there are Societies in good, and Societies in truth; and man must not have communication with both at once. Sig.

988^e. There was such a correspondence of families on earth with the Societies in the Heavens . . .

1062². Many Societies, which are as many churches . . .

1070². Communities which did not make one with the Babylonians.

1093³. Thoughts . . . inoculate themselves into homogeneous Societies.

—⁵. As man, by the thoughts of his love, is inaugurated into Societies . . . his quality is known (there) by the mere extension of his thoughts into Societies . . . He is also reformed by admissions of his thoughts into Societies of Heaven, and condemned by immersions of his thoughts into Societies of Hell.

1147². Some Angels . . . were brought into infernal Societies, from one to another, in each of which, while there, they thought exactly as did the devils there . . .

— . Sometimes the Societies with which (people) are bound are separated from them, and they then cannot think, nor will . . .

1163. From his birth, man is in the midst of infernal Societies; and he extends himself into them exactly as he extends the evil affections of his will . . .

1164³. To be separated from evils is nothing else than to be separated from infernal Societies.

1174². Man's affections have extension into Societies round about, into more or fewer according thereto: man, as to his spirit, is within these Societies, bound to them as with extended cords which circumscribe the space for his walking; and, as he proceeds from one affection into another, so he proceeds from one Society into another; and, in whatever Society he is, there is the centre from which his affection and thought make excursions to the rest of the Societies as to their circumferences . . . Through these Societies the man's mind walks free, although bound; and the Lord leads him. Ex.

1175³. From such a marriage are all the Societies of Heaven . . .

— . (Thus) the Societies of Heaven are not thoughts but affections; consequently, to be led by these Societies is to be led by affections; or, to be led by affections is to be led by Societies.

1190². The eminent and opulent in the Societies of Heaven.

1191². The governors in the Societies of Heaven.

1200². So are universal Hell, and World of Spirits, distinct in Societies, according to . . . The animals in the Societies of Heaven, Hell, and World of Spirits, enum.

1212². The plants are changed; but outside the Societies.

—⁴. The correspondence of animals and plants with Societies of Heaven and of Hell, thus with their affections; for the Societies and affections there make a one.

1222³. The Church on earth is also distinct in Societies; and each Society is a man; all within this man are within Heaven, and all outside him are in Hell.

1224⁴. Every Society of Hell corresponds, by opposition, to a Society of Heaven . . .

—^e. Every Society of Hell, in His sight, is a man devil . . .

J. (Post.) 36. While here, man conjoins himself with Societies according to the principles of his religion . . . in these he remains after death, and in these Societies every one has his life, and therefore it is impossible to extricate one's self from them, and introduce one's self into new ones. 44.

247. After death, every man is bound to many Societies; to as many as his loves had been; but, after vastation, he comes into the Society where is his reigning love; for this is the centre.

De Verbo 10. The several chapters in the Prophetic Word correspond to the several Societies of Heaven . . .

De Conj. 99. The Societies which correspond to the genitals are distinct from others, because this region in the body is also distinct. 106. 107.

C. 78. A Society less or greater is the neighbour according to the good of its use. Ex.

82. A Society on earth appears before the Angels as one man.

137. Every heavenly Society is a series of affections in perfect order.

D. Love x. Divine love is distinguished into . . . provinces; and these again into Societies; and Societies into families and houses. —².

D. Wis. vii.2. Each Society has its own peculiar respiration . . . and pulsation; and therefore no one can enter from one Society into a higher (or lower) one.

Docu. 2, page 7. I (Swedenborg) have never sought admission into any literary Society in any other place (than Stockholm), because I am in an angelic Society, where such things as relate to Heaven and the soul are the only subjects of discourse.

A. 5432^e. If they had been born in Socinianism . . . 8993^e. 9300⁵.

6865³. Any doctrinals can be confirmed, as theirs by the Socinians.

8521². Hence all believe their own dogmas true, even Socinians.

9424³. Falsities from fallacies of the external senses . . . seduce heretics and fanatics, especially Jews and Socinians.

H. 3. They who have denied His Divine, and acknowledge only His Human, as the Socinians, are outside Heaven, and are borne in front a little towards the right, and are let down into the deep, and are thus completely separated from the rest from the Christian world.

83. He who is not in the idea of the Divine from which is Heaven, cannot be elevated to the first threshold of Heaven, (on account of the strong repulsion which he feels); for his interiors are closed. . . Such is the lot of those within the Church who . . . like the Socinians, deny the Divine of the Lord.

P. 231⁶. The sixth kind of profanation is committed by those who acknowledge the Word, yet deny the Divine of the Lord: these, in the world, are called Socinians and Arians. Their lot is that they invoke the Father, and not the Lord . . . but in vain, until they become without hope of Salvation, and they are then let down into Hell among those who deny God. These are meant by those who blaspheme the Holy Spirit. Ex.

256³. Therefore they who deny the Divine of the Lord, who are called Socinians, have been excommunicated from the Church.

257⁴. If this had been prevented, (the Babylonians) would have made themselves Socinians or Arians, and would thus have destroyed the whole Church . . .

262². From thought about God as three Persons, has originated Socinianism and Arianism, which reign in the hearts of more than you believe.

R. 571. They who deny the Divine in His Human are not far from the Socinians and Arians . . .

T. 94. Through calling Him the Son of Mary . . . enter Socinianism, etc.

159⁶. Have you ever seen Socinus, who acknowledged God the Father only, or Arius . . . or any of their followers? . . . They are in the deep beneath you. Presently some were called up thence; and, being questioned about God . . . said, What is God? We can make as many gods as we please.

339. (Character of the Arian and Socinian faith.)

380². The two wicked heresies, the Arian, and the Socinian . . . I fear that these abominations still lie hidden in the general spirit of the men of the Church at this day. It is remarkable that the more anyone deems himself superior to others in learning and judgment, the more prone he is to embrace . . . ideas about the Lord as being a man and not God . . . and one who appropriates to himself these ideas introduces himself into companionship with the Arians and Socinians, who, in the Spiritual World are in Hell. The reason such is the general spirit of the men of the Church at this day, is that with every man there is an associate Spirit . . .

—⁴. Round Orcus are Satans who have eaten of the apples of Arius and Socinus.

795^e. They who do not receive (the instruction about the Lord) are cast down into Hell: among these also come those who, like the Socinians, have approached God the Father only.

D. 4785^e. They would be classed with Socinians. 4810.

4795. They fear being called Socinians.

4800. They would be rejected as Socinians.

5808. They who have acknowledged His Human (only) . . . like the Socinians, inflicted fracture of the bones of the breast. (Compare J.(Post.)45.)

5886. The Moravians thought to be almost Socinians.

5993⁵. In special, they belong to Socinianism.

6101. (This English bishop) was a Semisocinian.

E. 778⁴. Hence it is that the Socinians and Arians, who, although they do not deny the Lord, yet deny His Divine, are outside Heaven, and cannot be received by any angelic Society.

815⁷. This is why those cannot be saved who at this day look to His Human only, and not at the same time to His Divine, as do the Socinians and Arians.

957⁴. All who have no idea of the Divine concerning the Lord, as is the case with the Socinians and Arians, are under the Heavens, and are unhappy.

1109². Unless they had received a Trinity of Persons, they would, at that time, have become either Arians or Socinians . . . by which the Christian Church would have perished, and Heaven would have been closed against the man of the Church.

1182⁴. Hence no other than Socinian Spirits operate into Socinians . . .

J. (Post.) 172. The rest (of the Protestants), who have thought about the Lord as a common man, have been rejected among the Socinians and Arians, who, at first being under the Heavens are next above the Hells, are afterwards in the Hells.

D. Wis. vii. 2³. They who deny the Divinity of the Lord, as do the Socinians and Arians, have a difficult and rough respiration.

Sodom. Sodoma.

Sodomy. Sodomia.

Sodomite. Sodomita.

A. 1212. 'In coming toward Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim' (Gen.x.19) = the falsities and evils in which they are terminated. . . There are two origins of falsities . . . [and] the falsities thence, when they want to dominate over truths, are signified by (these cities).

1587. 'Before Jehovah destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah' (Gen.xiii.10) = the external man destroyed by cupidities of evil and persuasions of falsity. Ex.

1598. '(Lot) pitched his tent even unto Sodom' (ver. 12) = extension to cupidities; (for) 'Sodom' = cupidity. Ex.

1600. 'The men of Sodom were evil and sinners to Jehovah exceedingly' (ver.13) = the cupidities to which scientifics extended themselves. Ex.

1663. 'They made war with Bera king of Sodom, Birsha king of Gomorrah,' etc. (Gen.xiv.2) = so many kinds of cupidities of evil and persuasions of falsity against which the Lord fought.

—'. 'Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar' = the most general, or most universal, kinds of evils and falsities.

1666. 'Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim' = cupidities of evil and persuasions of falsity, which in themselves are unclean. Ex.

1689. 'The king of Sodom and of Gomorrah fled, and fell there' (ver.10) = that these evils and falsities were overcome. 'Sodom and Gomorrah' = evils of cupidities, and falsities of persuasions.

1694. 'The wealth of Sodom and Gomorrah' (ver.11) = evil and falsity. Ex. 1717.

1721. 'The king of Sodom went out to meet him' (ver.17) = that the evil and falsity submitted themselves. 1740. 1749, Ex.

2141. 'Sodom' (Gen.xviii.) = the love of self and the derivative cupidity of exercising command, from evil.

2219. 'They looked to the faces of Sodom' (ver.16) = the state of the human race.

—'. These evils (of the love of self) in general, are meant by 'Sodom.'

2220. That 'Sodom' = all evil from the love of self, is evident from the signification of 'Sodom.' Although it appears as if by 'Sodom' were signified the evil of the worst adultery, in the internal sense nothing else is signified by it than evil from the love of self. The abominations which spring from the love of self are represented by adulteries of various kinds. That 'Sodom' = all evil from the love of self in general; and 'Gomorrah,' all the derivative falsity. Ill.

2240⁸. 'Vine of Sodom' (Deut.xxxii.32) = falsity from evil.

2314. By the inhabitants of Sodom' (in Gen.xix.) is described the state of those within (the Spiritual) Church who are against the good of charity; and how in process of time evil and falsity increase with them until they have nothing but evil and falsity. 2347, et seq.

2318. 'Two Angels came to Sodom in the evening' (ver.1) = the visitation which precedes Judgment.

—^e. The destruction of those who are altogether in evil and falsity, is here treated of. These are they who are here signified by 'Sodom and Gomorrah.'

2322. That 'Sodom' = the evil, especially those within the Church, is evident from the signification of 'Sodom,' which is the evil of the love of self, consequently those who are in this evil. They who apprehend the Word from the sense of the letter alone, may suppose that by 'Sodom' is meant a filthiness which is contrary to the order of nature; but, in the internal sense, by 'Sodom' is signified the evil of the love of self . . .

2323². In this chapter it treats (also) of the destruction of the old Church which is signified by Sodom and Gomorrah. Ex.

2324. 'Lot was sitting in the gate of Sodom' (ver.1) = those in the good of charity, but in external worship, among the evil, but separated from them.

—e. 'Sodom' = evil in general, or the evil, especially within the Church.

2346. 'The men of Sodom' (ver.4) = those who are in evils.

2393. 'Place,' here, = a state of evil, because it was Sodom, by which is signified evil in general.

2400². There are three kinds of men within the Church . . . The second are those who are entirely in falsity and evil, and reject both truth and good: these are represented by 'the men of Sodom.'

2444. 'Jehovah caused it to rain upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire' (ver.24) = the Hell of those who are in the evils of the love of self and the derivative falsities.

2455³. 'Place of nettle' refers to Sodom.

5117¹⁰. See VINE.

7418². The reason it would be 'more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah' (Matt.x.15) is that by 'Sodom and Gomorrah' are meant those who are in evil of life, but who have known nothing about the Lord and the Word, and thus could not receive them. (See E.653⁹.)

7519⁷. 'Sodom' = the evil of the cupidities from the love of self; 'Gomorrah,' the derivative falsity.

C. J. 26. (The Angels) were treated there as in Sodom. D.4932. J.(Post.)136.

R. 502. 'Which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt' (Rev.xi.8) = the two infernal loves, which are the love of dominating from the love of self, and the love of reigning from the conceit of Own intelligence, which are in the Church where God is not one, and the Lord is not worshipped, and where they do not live according to the precepts of the decalogue. By 'Sodom,' in the spiritual sense, is signified the love of dominating from the love of self. —², Ex. and Ill.

—³. That the love (of dominating from the love of self) is signified by 'Sodom,' is unknown in the world; but retain this, and recollect it when you come into the World of Spirits, and you will be fully confirmed.

B. 87. The present-day justifying faith, when confirmed, is meant by 'the great city which is spiritually called Sodom and Egypt,' where the two witnesses were slain.

D. 1977. (Such) are not far from being Sodomites.

2675. On Sodomy.—In the other life are those who commit the sin of Sodomy: these have believed nothing concerning the life after death . . . but are entirely like beasts, and so would die; so that they have no Intellectual, although they can reason. (Their punishment des.)

3768². Therefore these coitions were much more abominable than those of the Sodomites. Des.

3796. So was there procreation of offspring at Sodom.

4932. See LAST JUDGMENT. 5069.

5939^e. They who are in the love of self, and whose love is to exercise command over others, are Sodomites (there).

5979. [The correspondence of Sodomy.]

6096²⁹. They who are in the highest degree of exercising command from the love of self, and not for the sake of use, are in Sodom.

E. 357¹⁷. 'Sodom and Gomorrah' = evils from the love of self and the derivative falsities.

519⁷. 'Sodom' = all evils which spring from the love of self.

539². 'Sodom and Gomorrah' = those who are entirely in loves of self.

578². By those who were in Sodom and Gomorrah, are meant those in falsities of evil from the love of self . . .

653. Which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt' = through evils of the love of self and through the falsities thence. 'Sodom' = the love of self and the derivative evils of every kind. —², Ex. and Ill.

—⁴. Hence Jerusalem is not only called Sodom, but it is also said that she did worse things than Sodom (Ezek.xvi.46,47). . . That the evil of the love of self was the evil of Sodom, is described thus . . .

—⁵. Compared to the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah. —⁷.

655². These two (infernal kingdoms) are meant by 'Sodom and Egypt.'

1006². The Sodomitic Hells are for those who have been in evils from the love of exercising command over others from the sole delight of exercising command, and in no delight of use.

1029¹⁴. 'Sodom' = the destruction of all good through the love of self.

De Conj. 87. The love of self, especially that of reigning, while still thinking from the Word, is such as there was at Sodom . . .

Coro. 41³. The consummation of the nations (of the Noetic Church) which were around the Jordan, is described by the destruction of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim.

4412. He acted by a gentle and soft influx.

5172^e. The thymus gland is then soft.

6359. Truth from good (there) appears as soft; but falsity from evil as hard.

7068². Those in good are as it were soft.

7359. (The speech of the Spirits of Mars) was soft in its flow; a softer one I have not perceived; it was like the softest breeze.

8321^e. Charity with faith is yielding and soft.

8868³. That all things of the discourse of the Angels are open to the Lord . . . is heard from the softness and its quality.

9372⁴. That the Word in the letter (appears) rude and obscure; but in the internal sense, soft and resplendent, is signified by their not seeing a man 'clothed in soft raiment; lo, they who wear soft things are in kings' houses' (Matt.xi.8).

9377. A humble heart is soft . . .

2915. 'I am a sojourner and an inhabitant with you' (Gen.xxiii.4) = that although the Lord is unknown to them He can be with them.

2959³. The sojourning of the sons of Jacob in Egypt = the vastation of the Church.

3148². Journeyings and peregrinations = the things of instruction, and thence of life.

3369. 'Sojourn in this land' (Gen.xxvi.3) = instruction.

3672. 'The land of thy sojournings' (Gen.xxviii.4) = the life of instructions.

4243. 'To sojourn' (Gen.xxxii.4) = to be instructed.

4430. The journeys or peregrinations of Abraham and Jacob, represented progressions into truths of faith and goods of love.

4444⁵. They called (converted) gentiles 'sojourners sojourning with them' (ill.) because 'to sojourn' = to be instructed; and thus 'a sojourner' = those who have suffered themselves to be instructed in the statutes and doctrinals.

4615. 'Where Abraham and Isaac sojourned' (Gen. xxxv.27) = Divine life together. 'To sojourn' = life.

4844⁵. 'Sojourner' = those who want to be instructed in the truths of faith. 4956².

6004³. (Thus) when a sojourner is the subject of thought, as by him are signified those who are to be instructed, all exercises of charity towards such are suggested, thus truths.

6077. 'To sojourn in the land are we come' (Gen. xlvii.4) = to seek life in scientifics. 'To sojourn' = to be instructed, and also to live.

6095. 'Sojournings' (ver.9) = life and instruction; thus successive states of life.

6796. 'I am a sojourner in a strange-aliena-land' (Ex.ii.22) = instructed in truths in a Church not his own. 'To be a sojourner' = one being instructed in the things of the Church. 8650.

7197. 'The land of their sojournings wherein they have sojourned' (Ex.vi.4) = where are the things of faith and charity about which they have been instructed, and according to which they have lived.

7260. (The Ancients called those) sojourners whom they were to gather together.

7865. When it treats of journeying, or peregrination.

7908. 'Both a sojourner and one born in the land' (Ex.xii.19)=one of the Church, whether not born there, or born there. 'A sojourner'=one being instructed in the truths and goods of the Church, and who receives them; thus one not born within the Church, but who nevertheless accedes to it. 8002³.

8007. 'When a sojourner sojourneth with thee' (ver.48)=those who have been instructed in the truth and good of the Church, and who have received them. . . . It is said 'when he sojourneth with thee' because by 'to sojourn' is signified to be instructed and to live. Thus by 'sojourners sojourning with them,' are signified not only those who are being instructed in the truth and good of the Church, and who receive them; but also those who live according to them.

8013. 'There shall be one law for the native and for the sojourner sojourning in the midst of you' (ver.49) =that he who on being instructed has received the truth and good of the Church, and lives according to them, shall be as he who is within the Church . . . —³, III.

8098². These things are signified by the peregrinations of the sons of Israel in the wilderness.

8420^e. 'To go' = to live; as also 'to journey,' 'to progress,' and 'to travel.'

8890. 'Nor the sojourner that is in thy gates' (Ex. xx.10)=the Scientific in general.

9196. 'A sojourner thou shalt not afflict, and shalt not oppress' (Ex.xxii.21)=that those who want to be instructed in the truths and goods of faith are not to be infested with falsities of faith and evils of life. Ex. 9268.

9200^e. 'A sojourner'=those who want to be instructed in such things as are of the Church.

9281. 'The son of thine handmaid may take breath, and the sojourner' (Ex.xxiii.12)=the state of life of those who are in truths and goods outside the Church.

— Those not born within the Church are signified by 'sojourners.'

9354. On this Earth there is an intercourse of all nations, by travellings, and by navigations.

850¹⁰. 'To fight upon Mount Zion, and upon its hill' (Is.xxxi.4)=to do Judgment from Divine truth.

C. 166. Charity in the common soldier.—If he looks to the Lord, and shuns evils as sins, and does his work sincerely, justly, and faithfully, he also becomes a charity . . . He is averse to unjust depredation; he abominates the wrongful effusion of blood. Otherwise in battles: he is then not averse to it, because he then does not think about it; but about the enemy as an enemy, who wants his blood. His fury ceases when he hears the sound of the drum calling him to desist from slaughter. He looks upon his captives after victory as the neighbour, according to the quality of their good. Before battle he raises his mind to the Lord, and commends his life into His hand; and, after he has done this, he lets his mind down from its elevation into the body, and becomes brave; the thought of the Lord, which he is then unconscious of, remaining still in his mind, above his bravery. And then, if he dies, he dies in the Lord; if he lives, he lives in the Lord.

A. 51^e. The celestial man is called 'a son of God' (John i. 12).

570. 'The sons of God' (Gen. vi. 2) = doctrinals of faith. Ex.

1608². Those with whom there is love and the derivative faith are they who are born of God; and as these have been born of God, they are called sons of God' (John i. 12).

1733². As to the external man, relatively to Jehovah, it is said 'Son of God'; but relatively to the mother, 'Son of Man.'

1737^e. Hence all these are called 'sons of God' from the Lord, who was the only Son of God.

2159². He (then) put on the Divine Human, from which He called Himself 'the Son of Man,' and also 'the Son of God'; and by 'the Son of Man' He signified the truth itself, and by 'the Son of God' the good itself, which belonged to His Human essence when made Divine. 2813. 3952².

2628². The Divine Human was not only conceived, but also born, from Jehovah; hence the Lord as to the Divine Human is called 'the Son of God,' and 'the Only-begotten.' Ill.

2649². No longer the son of Mary, but the Son of God, both as to conception and as to birth. 2657^e.

2813⁵. The Son of God, or the Lord as to the good in the Divine Human, could not be tempted. Ill.

L. 19. That the Lord as to the Divine Human is called 'the Son of God.' Gen. art.

—². That the Lord's Human conceived of Jehovah the Father, and born of the virgin Mary, is 'the Son of God.' Ill.

—⁸. In the Jewish Church, by 'the Son of God' was meant the Messiah. Ill.

21^e. From these passages it is evident that 'the Son of God' is Jesus conceived of Jehovah the Father, and born of the virgin Mary.

22. Where it treats of His Divinity, of His oneness with the Father, of His Divine Power, of faith in Him, of life from Him, the Lord calls Himself 'the Son,' and 'the Son of God.' 26².

32⁷. The Human itself from this Divine is the 'Son of God.'

35. That the Lord . . . put on a Human from the Divine in Himself, which is the Divine Human, and the Son of God. Ex.

Life 17². 'To believe in the name of the Son of God' = to believe in the Word, and live according to it.

R. 520³. That the Messiah is the 'Son of God.' Ill.

618. They cannot think of the Son as God.

961⁶. By a Son of God born from eternity, I understood His birth foreseen from eternity . . .

T. 92. That the Human by which God sent Himself into the world is the Son of God. Gen. art.

—². The Human is actually the Son of God, because conceived from Jehovah God as the Father, according to Luke i. 32, 35. He is called 'the Son of God,' 'the Son of Man,' and the Son of Mary; and by the 'Son of God' is meant Jehovah God in His Human; by the 'Son of Man,' the Lord as to the Word; and by the Son of Mary, the mere human . . .

—². The Divine which the Lord had was from Jehovah the Father, and the Human He had was from the mother: these two united are the Son of God. Ill.

94². The Council of Nice, therefore, to vindicate the Lord's Divinity, invented a Son of God born from eternity . . . 637^e.

101². By the Son of God is properly meant His Human. 135⁴.

171². That a Son of God begotten from eternity descended and assumed the Human, may be compared to fables . . . (See R. 743.)

342. The First of faith in the Lord is the acknowledgment that He is the Son of God; and thus God from God. Ill. 379.

379^e. The first characteristic mark of faith, which is that the Lord is the Son of the Living God, is like the morning star to all who enter His Church.

729^e. They who receive the Lord, that is, have faith in Him, and are not in evils of life, are called 'sons of God,' etc. Ill.

D. 4774². Hence they might know that the Son of God was from eternity, and that He was the same with the Father, but in a human form.

5668a. The Mohammedans who are on the mountains . . . think of the Lord as the Son of God.

5927. Thus the Lord in the world could not be called the Son of God; but His own Son.

6045^e. Some (there) see a Son of the Father . . .

E. 684⁵. 'Thou art the Son of God, the King of Israel' (John i.49). As 'Messiah,' 'Christ,' 'Anointed,' and 'King,' are synonyms, so is 'Son of God,' and each of these names = the Divine truth. . . The reason He is called also 'the Son of God,' is that 'sons' = truths; hence 'Son of God' = the Divine truth. Ath. 149. 156.

740¹⁴. In the time (of Job) the Angels were called sons of God, because by 'sons of God,' equally as by 'Angels,' were meant Divine truths. 746⁹, Ex.

852³. (Thus) the Lord's Human is what is called 'the Son of God;' for it is said that 'the Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.'

—⁵. 'The Son can do nothing of Himself, except what He seeth the Father doing; for the things which He doeth, these also the Son doeth in like manner. As the Father raiseth the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom He will. . . He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father who hath sent Him. Verily I say unto you, The hour cometh, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself' (John v.19-26). That by 'the Father' is here meant the Divine in the Lord, which was His life, as is the soul of the father in every man; and that by 'the Son' is meant the Human, which lived from the Divine in Him, and thence also was made Divine; consequently that the Father and the Son are one, is evident from these words . . .

—¹³. That by 'the Son of God' is meant the Lord's Divine Human, has been manifested in other passages; as in . . . 'Unto us a Son is given, and the government is upon His shoulder, and His name is called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God, Hero, Father of eternity, Prince of peace' (Is.ix.5); and 'a virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and His name shall be called 'God with us' (Is.vii.14).

1025³. The Divine Human born in time is meant by the Son of God.

1069². As He was conceived from Jehovah, He is so often called 'the Son of God.'

Ath. 62. The Son from eternity was the Divine Human from eternity, and it was the Divine proceeding, from which is Heaven, thus the Divine forming. Ill. 149.

132. The Divine Human is the Son of God; the Divine Proceeding, which is the Word, is the Son of Man.

149. Hence those are called 'sons of God' who are recipients of Divine truth.

150. The Lord was conceived from the Divine Itself, and was afterwards born from It, for that which was born from Mary the Lord expelled by His Divine, and hence assumed a Human corresponding to His Divine, and thus . . . the Divine assumed to itself a Human. Thus He was not only conceived, but was also born, from Jehovah, according to: 'Jehovah hath said unto Me, Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee' (Ps.ii.); and hence it is that He is the Son of God.

215. If, therefore, the Lord is the Son of God, as a Man, it follows that the Lord as a Man is God. Ex.

De Just. p. 10. When Calvin mentioned the Son of God, he did not understand Jesus Christ as to the Human.

Can. Redeemer v. 3. The Lord's Human (by which He sent Himself into the world) is called 'the Son of God,' from the Divine truth and Divine good in Him, which is the Word; and 'the Son of Man,' from the Divine truth and good from Him, which is the doctrine of the Church from the Word thence.

Son of Man. Filius Hominis.

A. 49. By 'Man,' and 'Son of Man,' in the supreme sense, is meant the Lord; in the internal sense, wisdom and intelligence; hence everyone who is regenerate. Ill.

—³. Called Son of Man, or Man, which is the same.

264^e. Hence, the Lord, being Himself the seed, called Himself the 'Son of Man,' that is, the faith of the Church.

477³. Those are called 'sons of man' (Deut.xxxii.S) who have been in faith in the Lord. (=those who are in truths of faith. 1259⁶.)

1313. 'Which the sons of man were building' (Gen. xi.5) = the sons of the Church inventing.

1607². For by 'the Son of Man' is meant His Human essence, which when united was Divine . . . —³. 1729.

1733². See SON OF GOD. 2159². 3704². T.92. Ath. 132. Can. Redeemer v. 3.

2813. The Lord often said that the Son of Man would suffer, but never the Son of God. Ill.

—². In all these passages, by 'Son of Man' is meant the Lord as to truth Divine, or as to the Word in the internal sense.

2814. It is rational truth, such as is with the Angels, consisting in appearances of truth, which is called 'the Son of Man,' but before the glorification.

3869⁴. 'To hear the voice of the Son of Man' = to have faith in the Lord's words, and to will them.

4060⁵. 'Then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven' (Matt.xxiv.30) = the appearing then of truth Divine; 'the Son of Man' = the Lord as to truth Divine. (=the truth Divine proceeding from the Lord. 8427⁴.)

[A.] 4230. The time of the end of the old Church and the beginning of the New is meant by 'the coming of the Son of Man.'

4287^e. The truth which is from good is called . . . also 'son of man.'

4334^f. 'So shall the coming of the Son of Man be' (ver. 39)=that they will not receive the Divine truth. 'The coming of the Son of Man' is the Divine truth which will then be revealed.

4809. 'When the Son of Man shall come in His glory' (Matt.xxv.31)=when the Divine truth will appear in its light, which happens to every man when he dies; for he then comes into the light of Heaven, in which he can perceive what truth and good are, and thus his own quality. 'The Son of Man,' in the internal sense, is the Lord as to Divine truth; thus the Divine truth which is from the Lord.

6432^f. 'The Son of Man' (Rev.i.)=the Divine truth.

8902^f. 'A son of man' (Is.xiii.9)=truth from good; in the supreme sense, the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord. Refs.

9295^f. 'He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man' (Matt.xiii.37). 'The Son of Man'=the Lord as to the truths of the Church.

9372^f. That they would do in like manner with truth Divine itself, is signified by, 'so shall the Son of Man also suffer of them' (Matt.xvii.12). 'The Son of Man'=the Lord as to truth Divine.

9405^f. The advent of the Lord and His presence in the Word, is meant by 'to see the Son of Man' (Matt.xxiv.30).

9684^f. 'The Son of Man'=the Lord as to the Divine truth from His Divine Human. 9807^f, Ill.

9807^f. 'To desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man' (Luke xvii.22)=one of the states of truth Divine which is genuine. E.63^f.

—⁴. 'When the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith upon the earth?' (Luke xviii.8)=when truth Divine shall be revealed out of Heaven it will not be believed. 'The Son of Man'=the Lord as to truth Divine, or truth Divine proceeding from the Lord.

—⁶. 'Henceforth ye shall see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming upon the clouds of heaven' (Matt.xxvi.64). 'The Son of Man'=the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord. Further ex.

—⁹. 'No one hath ascended into heaven, but He that descended out of heaven, the Son of Man who is in the heavens' (John iii.13). From this it is evident that 'the Son of Man' is the Divine truth in the Heavens . . . for no one can ascend into Heaven, unless the Divine truth in him has descended from Heaven . . . and as the Lord is this truth, He calls Himself 'the Son of Man who is in the heavens.'

—'. 'The Son of Man hath not where to lay his head' (Matt.viii.20). 'The Son of Man'=the Divine truth, which at that time had no place anywhere, or with any man.

—¹⁰. That 'the Son of Man should suffer, and be killed' (ill.) involves that so it would be done with the Divine truth, consequently with the Lord, who was the Divine truth itself.

—¹¹. As 'son of man'=the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord, the prophets, through whom it was revealed, were called 'sons of man.' Ill.

—¹². 'Son of man,' in the opposite, = falsity opposite to truth. Ill. E.63^e.

28. The reason 'the Son of Man'=the Lord as to the Word, was that the prophets also were called 'sons of man;' and the reason the prophets were so called, was that they represented the Lord as to the Word, and thence signified the doctrine of the Church from the Word . . . for the spiritual signification of 'prophet,' and also of 'son of man,' is the doctrine of the Church from the Word; and, when concerning the Lord, the Word itself. Ill.

50^e. 'Blasphemy against the Son of Man'=something against the Word, by differently interpreting its meaning; for 'the Son of Man'=the Lord as to the Word.

R. 44. 'In the midst of the seven candlesticks one like the Son of Man' (Rev.i.13)=the Lord as to the Word, from whom is the New Church. (=the Lord from whom is everything of Heaven and of the Church. E.63.)

—'. As the Lord represented Himself before John as the Word, He who was seen by him is called 'the Son of Man.'

273^e. 'The Son of Man' (ill.)=the Lord as to the Divine Human, and this is the Word, which 'was God,' and 'was made flesh.'

522. That the Son of Man, who is the Lord as to the Divine Human, is the Almighty, the Alpha and the Omega, etc.

642. 'Upon the cloud one sitting like unto the Son of Man' (Rev.xiv.14)=the Lord as to the Word. Ex. E.906.

910. By 'man' is signified intelligence and wisdom from the Word . . . Hence the prophets were called 'sons of man,' and the Lord Himself called Himself

'the Son of Man;' and 'the Son of Man' is the truth of the Church from the Word; and, when said of the Lord, it is the Word itself from which is the Church.

654³⁶. 'Sons of man'=those in Own intelligence.

684¹⁴. 'Sons of man'=those intelligent in Divine truths.

724²³. 'Sons of man' (Ps. xlix. 2)=spiritual truths which are from the Lord through the Word; 'sons of man-viri'=rational and natural truths which are from the understanding; thus the understanding of the Word.

778³. 'The Son of Man' (Matt. xii. 32)=Divine truth such as is on earth; thus the Word such as it is in the natural sense. (Thus) 'to say a word against the Son of Man'=to interpret the natural sense of the Word, which is the sense of its letter, according to appearances.

911³. 'The Son of Man'=the Lord as to the Word.

—⁶. 'He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man'=Divine truth from the Lord.

1029⁸. 'The Son of Man'=the Lord as to the Divine Human, and as to the Word.

Ath. 178. Hence the proceeding Divine is the Lord in the Heavens, and is called 'the Son of Man,' and also 'the Holy Spirit.'

Can. Holy Spirit v. 9. The reason why he who speaks a word against the Son of Man is forgiven, is that he [may] deny this or that to be Divine truth from the Word in the Church, provided he believes that in the Word and from the Word are Divine truths. 'The Son of Man' is the Divine truth from the Word in the Church, and this cannot be seen by all.

Q. 1. The Lord called Himself 'the Son of Man' because He was the Word, or Divine truth, even as to His Human; for the title 'Son of Man,' in the spiritual sense, =the truth of the Church derived from the Word. The same was signified by the term 'prophet' . . . and therefore the Lord, who was the Prophet, and also the Word, and thence Divine truth, called Himself, as to His Human, the Son of Man . . .

Son-in-law. Gener.

A. 2388². Hence the 'sons-in-law,' and 'sons' (of Lot), by whom were signified such truths (without good), were not saved.

2389. That 'sons-in-law' = truths associated with affections of good and truth; here, which were to be associated, is (because) 'sons-in-law' = Knowledges of truth with which are associated affections of good, which are 'the daughters,' (and) Lot's sons-in-law had not yet married his daughters.

7297. 'Sorceries,' and 'enchancements,' in the Word, = the art of presenting falsities so that they appear like truths, and of presenting truths so that they appear like falsities, which is done especially by means of fallacies. Ill. 7298.

—^e. These phantasies are a species of sorceries, for they too are abuses and inversions of Divine order.

9188. 'A sorceress thou shalt not cause to live' (Ex. xxii. 17) = those with whom anything of the Church has been conjoined with the falsities of the evil of self love; for 'sorceries' = the falsities of the evil of the love of self conjoined with such things as are of the Church. Ex.

—². It is this conjunction which, in the internal sense, is signified by 'sorceries,' Ill.

—⁴. That 'sorcerers' = those who conjoin the falsities of the evil of self love with the truths of faith, and thus perish, is evident from the several things here, regarded in the internal sense.

—⁵. The false doctrinals of their Church are called 'sorceries,' because they destroy the truths of faith.

—⁶. That those are 'sorcerers' who are learned from themselves, and trust only in themselves to such a degree as to love themselves, and to desire to be worshipped as divinities. Ill.

—⁸. 'Sorcerers,' etc. = those who destroy the truths and goods of the Church by scientifics wrongly applied, thus those who learn and teach from Own intelligence, and by means of falsities from the evils of the loves of self and of the world; and thus who do so from the cupidity for gain and honours.

48. The things man produces (in the sixth state of regeneration) are called 'the living soul,' and 'the beast.'

75. The life of the celestial man is described by the 'breathing into him of the breath of lives' (Gen. ii. 7). (The word used is spiraculum, in 94.) See I. 8².

94. 'Man became a living soul' (id.) = that the external man also became living.

180. How the celestial Angels begin to speak to the Souls (being resuscitated).

182. But if the Soul is such that . . .

314. (Experiences of a resuscitated one, or Soul. See RESUSCITATE. 315.) 316.

[A.] 320. The nature of the life of the soul, or spirit. Gen.art.

— . Souls, or recent Spirits, do not know they are in the other life . . . being exactly like men as to senses, cupidities, and thoughts . . . 444.

443. Opinions about the soul, or spirit. Gen.art.

444. He now was a Soul, or Spirit.

—². If the soul, or spirit, were only thought . . .

547. The Souls who come into the other life are all ignorant of what Heaven is . . .

670. 'The living soul' (Gen.vi.19)=the things of the understanding . . . By 'living soul,' in the Word, is signified every animal in general; but here, because the words 'all flesh' are adjoined, the things of the understanding are signified; because the man of this Church was to be first regenerated as to intellectual things.

794^e. Every man thus forms for himself as it were a soul . . . 2256². 3748.

815. Such desire to destroy also the soul, which the Lord has redeemed.

1000. That 'the soul'=life. . . 'Soul,' in the Word, =in general all life, both that of the internal and that of the external man. And, as it=all life, it=such life as is that of the man of whom the soul is predicated. Hence it is predicated of the life of the regenerate man, which is separate from the man's will . . . Here, therefore, 'the flesh with the soul thereof' (Gen.ix.4), which they were not to eat, =that they should not mingle this new life . . . with evil . . . that is, with the proprium.

1001^e. The blood may be called the corporeal soul. Ex.

1005. 'Souls,' in the opposite, =those who inflict violence. Ex.

—^e. 'Soul'=life in a threefold sense.

1008. 'Will I require the soul of man' (ver.5)=to avenge profanation.

1026. 'With every living soul that is with you' (ver. 10)=in general all the things with man which have been regenerated. 1040, Ex. 1056.

1050. 'Every living soul of all flesh' (ver.15)=the universal human race. . . Every man is called a 'living soul' from what is alive with him . . . that is, something of innocence, charity, and mercy . . . as remains.

1143. The internal sense is like the soul . . . 1405. 1408. 2311. 4857^e. S.4.

1273. Souls recently from the world. (Their experience.) 1381. 1389. 1630. 1876. 1886, pref. 2121. 2122.

1277. Men as to their souls, are bound to some Society . . .

1436. 'The soul they had gained in Haran' (Gen. xii.5)=every living essential which could be given in that obscure state.

— . 'Soul,' in the proper sense, =that with man which lives, thus his very life. That in man which lives is not the body, but the soul, and the body lives through the soul. The life itself of man . . . is from celestial love . . . therefore by 'soul' here is signified the good which lives from celestial love, which good is the living essential itself.

1458². 'To draw out the soul to the hungry, and to satisfy the afflicted soul' (Is.lviii.10)=the goods of charity in general.

1477. 'That my soul may live because of thee' (Gen. xii.13)=that thus the Celestial could be saved. 'Soul' =the Celestial, because this is the soul itself, because the very life itself.

1594⁵. The spirit or soul is the interior man who lives after death; and it is organic; for it is adjoined to the body while the man is living in the world . . .

1614^e. This is the soul of Heaven. Ex.

1622². Certain Souls, recently from the world . . .

— . The Souls who are being introduced into Heaven . . .

1632. Hence is the vegetative soul, or life.

1637². All Souls can at once understand the speech of all in the universal world . . . for they perceive whatever a man is thinking.

1641². Into this faculty come Souls immediately after death. 1649.

1742. 'Give me the soul' (Gen.xiv.21) = that He should give them life.

1815. The soul or life is from the father . . . 2005.

1921³. Jehovah . . . cannot be divided like the soul of a human father.

1982. Souls recently from the world who longed to see the glory of the Lord . . . 2041.

1984. So different are the functions of the soul, that even if disclosed they would not be acknowledged.

2005. The soul with the body make a one; for the soul is of the body, and the body is of the soul.

2018. (The soul and the body) are sometimes so distinct, that the one fights with the other, as in temptations . . .

2025⁴. The soul of man is in him; and, being in him, it is in his veriest singulars . . . of thought and action. Whatever has not his soul in it, is not his. The Lord's soul was life itself, or Esse itself, which is Jehovah . . . and thus was in His veriest singulars . . .

2058. 'That soul shall be cut off from his people' (Gen.xvii.14)=eternal death; for 'soul'=life.

2209². Souls, after death, converse together.

— . All Souls at once know how to speak.

2228^e. The soul, after death, is such as is its love.

2416. 'Escape for thy soul' (Gen.xix.17)=that he should take care for his life to eternity.

2424. 'To make alive my soul' (ver.19)=to save him.

2432. 'My soul shall live' (ver.20)=so perchance he would be saved.

2576³. The things which are inmost in man are those of his soul . . . the inmost things of man are goods and truths, from which the soul has its life ; otherwise the soul would not be a soul.

2603^e. (Negroes) know that their souls are white.

2621². The soul is the very esse of man, and the Sensitive or Corporeal is the existere of it . . .

2702¹⁵. 'Every living soul which creeps' (Ezek.xlvii.9) = their delights.

2930. 'If it is with your soul' (Gen.xxiii.8) = if from the affection of truth from the heart.

— . 'From the heart and from the 'soul,' in the Word, = from the will and the understanding. . . The new understanding is what is called 'the soul.' Ill.

—³. 'Soul' = the affection of truth. Ill.

—⁴. 'The hungry soul' = the longing for good ; 'the soul thirsting for drink' (Is.xxxii.6) = the longing for truth.

— . 'Soul' = the life of the affection of good and truth.

—^e. 'Soul,' in the universal sense, = all life ; for, in this sense, 'the soul' is that from which another thing is and lives ; thus the soul of the body is its spirit, for from this the body lives ; but the soul of the spirit is its still more interior life, from which it is wise and understands.

2967³. 'Soul' = all life which is from the Lord.

2973⁴. Man's soul is in the midst, or in his inmost, and the body is in the circuit.

—⁵. With those in celestial and spiritual love, good from the Lord inflows through the soul into the body. 3128². 3995².

2997. The internal man is the spirit of man, and is called his soul.

3207⁵. Good is the soul or life of truth.

3219^e. The body does not inflow into the soul.

3299^e. Both (good and truth) are called the soul ; but still good is principally the soul.

3539⁵. Mutual love is the soul from the life of Heaven.

3570³. The end is as the soul ; and the Natural is as the body of that soul ; such as the soul is, such is the body.

—⁴. The soul of man has its beginning in the ovum of the mother, and is afterwards perfected in her womb, and is there encompassed with a tender body, that through it the soul may be able to act . . . So when man is being regenerated : the new soul he then receives is the end of good, which has its beginning in the Rational . . . the tender body is the Natural and the good there . . .

3646. When spiritual light inflows into the souls of brutes . . .

—². The souls of men are in a higher degree, and in a more perfect state, and are such that they can look upwards . . . and therefore the Lord can adjoin them to Himself, and give eternal life. But the souls of brutes are such that they cannot but look downwards, thus solely to earthly things, and thus can be adjoined only to these ; and therefore they perish with the body.

3747. (Ignorance of the learned about the soul) . . . when yet the simple know that the soul is the internal man, and that it is his spirit which is to live after death . . . and also that it is the real man . . .

4149². The life which inflows through the soul.

4224². How the case is with his internal man, which is called his soul.

4235. The very essence of life, which with man is called the soul, was thence, and was Himself.

4299. 'My soul is delivered' (Gen.xxxii.30) = that he sustained . . .

4373. See Body.

4502². 'Soul,' in the Word, is predicated of life.

4641. The Divine was to Him for a soul, and consequently the inmost of His life. 10052². 10053.

4658⁶. (Aristotle's idea of the soul or spirit.) D.3954.

4727². Like the soul of man, which is his interior essence : this as it were creates or effigies a body in the image of itself. . . The soul is as the cause in which is the end ; consequently the soul is the all in the body . . . He who had Jehovah Himself for a soul could have no Human but a Divine one.

4733. 'Soul' = life ; here, the life of religion.

4747². That which is inrooted in the life of the understanding and the life of the will cannot be rooted out, since the very soul of man, which lives after death, is formed of these, and is such that it never recedes from them.

5084⁶. It is a fallacy thence that the living [principle] itself with man, which is called the soul, is merely an ethereal or flamy something, which is dissipated when the man dies ; and that it resides either in the heart, the brain, or in some part of it, and thence rules the body like a machine . . .

5293. What nourishes the soul.

5511³. The soul is nothing else than the internal man . . . being the man himself . . .

5573². Business had been as it were their soul.

5689^e. That which gives essence is like a father ; for essence is soul.

5835. 'His soul is bound in his soul' (Gen.xliv.31) = the conjunction close ; for 'soul' = life.

5847. The Lord's life is received variously, according to the quality which a man, by his life, has induced on his soul . . . Man induces a form on the purest substances of his interiors, so that it may be said that he forms his own soul, that is, its quality. 6467.

[A.] 5949². Even the soul should be only a mediate end; a man should care for it not for its own sake, but for the sake of the uses he may perform in both worlds.

6053. On the intercourse of the soul with the body. Gen.art. 6466, continued. 6598.

— (Various ideas as to what the soul is, and where.) 6400².

6054. The soul is nothing but the man himself who lives in the body; that is, it is the interior man, who through the body acts in the world, and who gives to the body to live. This man, when loosed from the body, is called a Spirit. Des. This, then, is the soul of man which lives after death. D.4618. 4844^e.

—². Lest by the use of the word soul the idea should fall into an unknown something . . . it is better to say the spirit of man, or, if you prefer it, the interior man . . . D.4618.

6077². Good is as the soul of truths. 6344. 7056. 8459^e. 9174.

6138². The proprium of man is signified by 'soul' in, 'he that loveth his soul shall lose it; but he that hateth his soul in this world shall save it in life eternal' (John xii.25). 9050^e. Life 99.

6319^e. The soul or spirit of man is in the Spiritual World, and the body in the natural; thus (their intercourse) is according to correspondences.

6338². Unless the soul inflowed universally and singularly into the viscera of the body, nothing ordinate and regular could come forth in the body . . .

6354. 'Into their secret let not my soul come' (Gen. xlix.6). . . It is said 'my soul,' because by 'soul' here is signified the life of good, which is spiritual good.

6373. Could rule over the Souls which came from the world.

6468^e. That the soul of man in the womb can so wonderfully form the body . . .

6574³. It is the delight of their life to destroy anyone as to the soul.

6641. 'All the souls' (Ex.i.5) = all things. 'Soul' in the general sense, = man; here, the man of the Spiritual Church. But in the internal sense 'soul' = truth and good, because from these man is man.

6716². For the inmost of life of every man, which is called the soul, is from the father . . . (and) the soul, which is from the father, continually wills to make the external which is from the mother an image of itself.

6929. That of man which will live after death they do not call the spirit, but the soul . . .

7021. 'All the men are dead who sought thy soul' (Ex.iv.19) = the removal of the falsities which endeavoured to destroy the life of truth and good.

— By 'soul,' in the Word, is meant every living thing; it is attributed also to animals; but 'soul' is properly predicated of man, and this in various senses. Man himself is called 'soul,' because his life in general is so called; and also his intellectual life in special, or understanding; and also his voluntary life, or will. But in the spiritual sense by 'soul' is meant the life of the truth which is of faith, and of the good which is of charity; and, in general, man himself as to his spirit which lives after death. Ill.

7324³. 'Pools of the soul' (Is.xix.10) = the things which are of intelligence from Knowledges.

8988². How the men of the Church appear as to their souls in Heaven.

9048. 'Soul for soul' (Ex.xxi.23) = a law of order . . .

9050. That 'soul' = spiritual life, is evident from the signification of 'soul,' as being the life of man, but the life of his faith, which is spiritual life.

— (In the expression) 'heart and soul,' in the Word, 'heart' = the life of love, and 'soul' the life of faith; for man has two faculties which receive life . . . —⁴, Ill. 9300².

—². 'Soul,' in the Original, is said from the respiration . . .

—⁵. 'Soul' is here said from the Divine truth, which is of faith with man.

9213³. 'Soul' = the life of faith from charity. 9231⁵. 9818⁸.

9269. 'Soul,' when predicated of those who long to be instructed in the truths of faith, = longing and life; for 'soul' = life from faith . . .

9281³. As respiration corresponds to the life of faith, the life of faith is signified by 'soul,' from the animation, which is respiration.

9293. From the will they have their soul, or life.

9398. Obedience from the soul is obedience from the understanding, thus from faith.

9812³. As the end is the soul of the cause . . . so celestial good is the soul of spiritual good . . . That which is the soul . . . in something else, is in it as endeavour is in motion, or as will is in action. That will is the soul and the all in action, is evident . . .

9936⁴. 'With all thy soul' (Deut.vi.5) = from the understanding where is the truth of faith, thus from faith.

10044. 'Soul,' in the Word, = the whole man. Ex. and Ill.

10076². For man has no Knowledge of his soul, nor that the body is formed after its likeness, and hence that the whole man is such as is his soul.

—⁴. The soul itself of man is his will.

10099³. Such was the idea the ancients had about the soul of man.

—⁴. But this idea about the soul and spirit of man . . . has disappeared, because of there being no just idea of successives. Ex.

10125². Every man has from his father the esse of his life, which is called his soul; thus the Divine good of the Divine love was in the Lord's Human as the soul of a father is in his son; and, as with man nothing lives except his soul—for the body without the soul does not live—, and as everything of the body is produced from the soul, thus to a resemblance of it, that the soul may be in a state adapted and accommodated to functions in the ultimates of order, it follows that the Esse itself in the Lord's Human was Jehovah, which is the Divine good of the Divine love . . . —³, Ex. 10738³. —⁴. 10823. H. 316. L. 29, Ill.

10490⁷. That the things proper to man, which are evils and falsities . . . are meant, is evident, for it is said that he must 'hate his own soul' (Luke xiv. 26).

10592. This internal is what is called the soul. N. 224.

10740. Such as is the life, thus such as is the love, such is the whole man as to soul and as to body.

—^c. That the soul can exist without the body . . . is an error; for every soul of man is in a spiritual body after (death).

61². The vegetative soul is use.

310². Use is said to be like a soul, because its form is like a body.

346³. The soul of all animals is natural affection, and appetite.

379⁹. As love is the life of man, and the soul transacts its life in the body by the blood, the blood, in the Word, is called 'the soul.'

383. As the understanding corresponds to the lungs, and thought to the respiration, by 'soul,' and 'spirit,' in the Word, is signified the understanding. Ill.

—³. The word spirit derives its origin from the animation, and therefore when a man dies it is said that he gives up the ghost—emittat animam. Hence man believes that the spirit is wind . . . and in like manner the soul.

394. From the correspondence of the heart with the will, and of the understanding with the lungs, all things may be known . . . about the soul of man. Gen. art.

—⁹. Many have laboured in investigating the soul, but because they knew nothing about the Spiritual World, and about the state of man after death, they could do nothing but build hypotheses . . .

—². The soul of man, which lives after death, is his spirit; and is a man in perfect form; and the soul of this is the will and understanding; and the soul of these is love and wisdom from the Lord . . .

395. As the soul, as to its very esse, is love and wisdom . . . two receptacles have been created with man . . .

P. 34. Their soul, which is the affection of good and truth . . .

162. The Lord is in the universal angelic Heaven as the soul is in man; in like manner in each Society, and in each Angel; for the soul of man is not only the soul of the whole, but also of every part. 163, Ex.

193³. As the soul of the will is love, and the soul of the understanding wisdom . . . it follows that love is the life . . .

199⁹. The soul, which disposes the interiors, disposes also the actions from them. The soul of man is nothing else than the love of his will, and the derivative love of his understanding . . . Therefore, if he attributes all things to himself and nature, the soul becomes the love of self; whereas if he attributes all things to the Lord, the soul becomes the love of the Lord.

277³. Whence comes this likeness? The soul of everyone is from his father . . . Examp.

M. 8⁵. This deliciousness inflows . . . into the soul, and descends through the higher and lower things of the mind into all the senses of the body . . .

44⁶. Love at once conjoins souls, afterwards minds, and thence enters bosoms . . .

69. Its inmost deliciousnesses, which are of the soul, into which first inflows the Conjugal of love and wisdom . . . are imperceptible . . .

75⁵. I observed the unity of their souls in their faces. . . The husband said, We are two bodies, but one soul . . .

76⁶. These represent unity of souls; these, conjunction of minds . . .

101. There are three things of which man consists, and which follow in order with him: soul, mind, and body. His inmost is the soul . . .

156a. On the conjunction of souls and minds by marriage . . . Chapter.

158. Every man consists of soul, mind, and body; the soul is his inmost . . . the soul, being the inmost of man, is from its origin celestial; the mind, being middle, is from its origin spiritual; and the body, being the ultimate, is from its origin natural . . .

172. In the Prolific of the husband is his soul, and also his mind as to its interiors which are conjoined with the soul. This has been provided from creation, in order that the wisdom of the husband, which makes his soul, may be appropriated to the wife . . .

178². The union of their souls and minds is felt in their flesh, because the soul constitutes not only the inmosts of the head, but also the inmosts of the body; and in like manner the mind, which is intermediate between the soul and the body . . .

179. Love truly conjugal . . . is a union of souls, a conjunction of minds . . . Ex.

180⁶. Innocence and peace are of the soul, tranquillity of the mind, and so on.

183². These three proceed as a one from the Lord, and thence as a one inflow into the souls of men, and through their souls into their minds . . .

—⁴. In the seed of a man is his soul in a perfect human form, covered over with substances from the purest things of nature . . .

—⁵. All propagation, etc. are . . . from the immediate influx (of love, wisdom, and use) from the Lord into the souls of men; from mediate influx into the souls of animals; and from an influx still more mediate into the inmosts of plants.

—⁷. These nuptial sports of love and wisdom in the soul are not at all perceived by man . . .

192. That marriages induce other forms on souls and minds. Ex.

— Spirits and Angels are nothing but minds and souls in human form, stripped of the exuviae . . .

204. The Conjugal of good and truth has been implanted from creation in the soul of everyone, and also in the sequents from the soul . . .

206. Because the soul of the offspring is from the father, and its clothing from the mother. Ex. 238.

seed, it follows that men have abundance according to the love of propagating the truths of their wisdom . . .

238. That the very origin of conjugal love resides in the inmosts with man; that is, in his soul . . .

244². Many causes conjoin lower minds, yet do not conjoin souls . . .

245. How the soul is propagated from the father, although it is not conjoined with the soul of the mother. Ex.

246. For the soul of every man derives life from the marriage of good and truth . . .

315³. What is the soul? and what is its quality? Discussed there. T.697.

—¹⁰. The soul is a form of all things of love and of all things of wisdom . . .

—¹¹. You are all souls . . . and because you are forms of love and wisdom from God, you cannot die to eternity. The soul, therefore, is the human form, of which no whit can be taken away, and to which no whit can be added; and it is the inmost form of all the forms of the universal body; and, as the forms which are without receive both essence and form from the inmost things, you, as you appear before yourselves and us, are Souls. In a word, the soul is the man himself, because it is the inmost man; and therefore its form is fully and perfectly the human form. But it is not life, but is the proximate receptacle of life from God, and thus is the habitation of God.

355⁴. The soul itself of man, being in the marriage of good and truth, is not only in the perpetual effort for this union, but is also in the perpetual effort for the fructification and production of its own likeness . . .

372^e. In what region of the mind does jealousy reside with men-viros? They replied, In their souls, because it is a protection against adulteries . . .

482. The conjugal love of one man with one wife . . . unites their souls.

483². What is more detestable than for a man to mix his soul with the soul of a husband in his wife? Do you not know that the soul of a man is in his seed?

I. Title. On the Intercourse of the Soul and the Body. D.4616, Gen.art.

8. That these two, heat and light, or love and wisdom, inflow conjointly from God into the soul of man, and through this into his mind . . . Ex.

— . The things which inflow from God, inflow proximately into man's soul, and through the soul into the rational mind, and through this into the things which make the body.

—². For the soul is not life in itself; but is a recipient of life from God . . .

—³. As the inmost or first of the receptacles in man is his soul . . .

—⁴. For the mind is subordinate to the soul; and the body to the mind . . .

—⁵. The human soul, being a higher spiritual substance, receives influx immediately from God; but the human mind, being a lower spiritual substance, receives influx from God mediately through the Spiritual World . . .

11³. The organic body with which the soul clothes itself . . . invests the soul; and the soul also withdraws itself from it, and casts it off . . . The body grows old . . . but not the soul; because this is a spiritual substance, which has nothing in common with the changes of nature . . .

—⁴. They who do not consider the body as the clothing of the soul, which in itself is dead, and only adapted to receive the living forces flowing into it through the soul from God, cannot avoid concluding, from fallacies, that the soul lives of itself, and the body of itself, and that there is, between their respective lives, a pre-established harmony; or, also, that the life of the soul inflows into the life of the body, or the life of the body into the life of the soul . . .

—⁵. It is believed by many that the soul is life, and that man therefore, as he lives from his soul, lives from his own life . . .

12. The soul clothes itself with a body as a man clothes himself with a garment; for the soul inflows into the human mind, and through this into the body, bearing with it the life which it continually receives from the Lord, and thus transfers it mediately into the body, where, by the closest union, it makes the body as it were live.

—⁴. The reason man lives . . . after death, is that his soul is then clothed with a substantial body, just as in the world it had been clothed with a material one.

14². Love and wisdom proceed unitedly from the Lord, and in like manner inflow unitedly into the souls of Angels and men . . .

T. 8. There is a universal influx from God into the souls of men: that there is a God, and that He is one. Ex.

— . The reason this influx is into the souls of men, is that the soul is the inmost and supreme of man, and the influx of God is into it, and thence descends into the things which are below . . . Truths . . . indeed inflow through the hearing, and are thus implanted in the mind, thus below the soul; but by these truths the man is merely disposed to receive the influx from God through the soul . . .

11³. The faith of God enters into man through the prior way, which is from the soul into the higher things of the understanding . . .

63. From this Sun He sends forth heat and light, which produce the life of men and animals, and also the vegetative soul, which is in every germ upon the Earth.

79⁵. Whence are your souls? . . . Were they from nature; or were they also in that great chaos? . . . The (philosophers) concluded that the human soul is nothing but ether . . . But some said: Souls originated when the ether massed itself together from that great chaos, and then in the highest region divided itself into innumerable individual forms, which infuse themselves into men when they begin to think from the purer air; and these are then called souls.

[T.] S2^e. The soul being from the father, and the body from the soul . . . the Lord had His soul and life from Jehovah God; and, as the Divine cannot be divided, the Divine of the Father was Itself His soul and life. . . What therefore can be more ridiculous than that the soul of our Lord was from the mother Mary, as both the Roman Catholics and the Reformed dream?

92. That the Son of Mary means the merely human, is evident from the generation of men; in that the soul is from the father, and the body from the mother; for in the seed of the father is the soul, and it is clothed with a body in the mother . . .

99². Such is the reciprocal conjunction of soul and body.

103. The soul which is from the father is the man himself; and the body which is from the mother is not in itself the man, but is from him. . . The soul is of such things as are in the Spiritual World. Every man, after death . . . retains (only) the Spiritual which he had from the father, together with a kind of border from the purest things of nature around it . . . —².

110³. The Lord when in the world had a soul like every other man. He had this soul from God the Father. . . A mother cannot conceive a soul . . . Nor can God the Father impart a soul from Himself, and then recede from it . . .

119. The Lord Himself is the soul and life of this Grand Man.

126^e. While a man suffers as to the body, his soul does not suffer, but only grieves.

137⁹. Whence was the soul of the Lord our Saviour? If you say, From the mother, you talk insanely; if from Joseph, you profane the Word; but if from the Holy Spirit, you say rightly, if by the Holy Spirit you mean the Divine proceeding and operating, so that He is the Son of Jehovah God.

139. Like these three: soul, body, and proceeding, which together make one essence . . .

Divine and the Human of the Lord; for the Divine of the Father is the soul of His Human, and the Human is His body . . .

166. These three Essentials of the one God make a one, as do the soul, body, and operation with man. Ex. Can. Trinity ii.

— . For man begins from the soul, which is the very essence of the seed: this produces (everything else).

167. That His soul was from Jehovah the Father, can be denied only by Antichrist . . . The Divine of the Father, like the soul in man, is therefore His first Essential, (and) the Son whom Mary brought forth is the body of that Divine soul; (and) the operations make the third Essential, because they proceed from the soul and body together . . .

188¹⁰. As with man, whose activity does not proceed from the soul through the body; but from the body from the soul. Ill.

310. 'Murders,' in the spiritual sense, mean all modes of killing and destroying the souls of men. Ex.

366. It is the same soul in the infant as in the old man.

371⁷. The conjunction of soul and body is not alternate, but mutual. Ex.

494. The spiritual things of the Church dwell in the highest region of the mind, because they are proper to the soul and regard its eternal life; and the soul is in the highest things, and its nutrition is from spiritual food.

498. (Thus) free will itself in spiritual things resides in the soul of man in all perfection; and from that . . . it inflows into his mind . . .

— . For there are three degrees of life with man: the soul, the mind, and the sensuous body . . .

583. For man is born spiritual as to his soul, and is clothed with what is natural . . . and when this body is laid aside, his soul comes clothed with a spiritual body into a World where all things are spiritual.

585². The vegetative soul . . . or its prolific essence, is from the heat of the Spiritual World.

695³. Some (of the learned) believe the soul to be a particle or drop of ether; some that it is a little ball or spark of light; others that it is some entity which hides itself in the brain. . . By what is spiritual they mean a purer natural.

712. Hence there are three things in man as to his internal: the soul or mind, the will, and the understanding: these three are the receptacles of those three universals; the soul or mind is the receptacle of the Lord, for thence it lives . . .

769. As to the state of Souls after death, the Churches believe . . . that human souls are ghosts . . . some, that souls are ethereal or aerial forms, thus phantoms; some of which dwell in the air, some in the forests, and some in the waters; but others think that the souls of the dead are transferred to the stars . . . but the greater part that they are reserved for the time (of the Last Judgment).

787. The New Church will worship one visible God in whom is the invisible, like the soul in the body.

Ad. 88. The highest life, or rather faculty, of man, is that which is properly called his soul; the second, which succeeds it, is called his intellectual mind . . . 131, Ex.

522². As we have so slight and obscure a Knowledge of the soul . . .

643. By no one is man not distinguished into soul and body; by the soul is meant his internal, and by the body his external.

— The inmost of man's faculties is the soul itself, properly so called; which also is the first one in man, for it is in him from conception itself. This is the first and inmost substance from which man is formed in the womb, and also after birth: (from) his soul itself, or his first substance, man derives (his human quality). From this soul flows his second faculty, which is called the rational mind . . .

—⁴. There are therefore four faculties which follow each other: the soul; the higher or intellectual mind; the lower mind, or animus; and the sensations which are called external. All these are real substances . . . 653. 812. 917. 923.

649. The highest faculty in man, which is properly called his soul, and is not only the soul of the body, but is also the soul of his intellectual mind, is open to Jehovah God alone. Hence is the life of man . . .

918. The essential parts of brute animals are three: the soul, which is their principal essence; the natural mind, or animus; and external sensation. . . In place of an intellectual mind is their soul, which rules their natural mind, and this the body.

919. Man differs from the brutes in this: that to him is given a soul which is purely spiritual, and super-celestial; but to brute animals a soul which is lower than Heaven, and partakes of what is spiritual and natural. Hence comes the human eminence above animals; for the man soul is in the higher Heaven, and is near the Messiah Himself, and is thus immortal . . .

922. That men in this respect are viler than the brutes, is because of the fall of Adam; for then the way between the soul and the rational mind was closed, so that they cannot view Heaven . . .

925. The simplest substance of man is his soul itself, which also is the first, and the highest one. From this is born the second substance . . .

927^e. The soul is a real substance; in like manner the soul which is below it, which is called the intellectual mind, or, properly, the rational soul; and also the soul below this, which is properly the natural soul; and also the rest which are the lowest things, the life of which is properly the corporeal soul. These may be called so many souls, which succeed one another. Hence the soul, in a general sense, as in the Divine Word-passim, is the same as life.

982. In the first man, the Divine love . . . inflowed through the soul into his intellectual mind . . .

1457. (Thus) the soul, which is in the seed of the parent, cannot but breathe into the form of this body . . .

979. Every soul thus coheres . . .

981. Souls do not know to whom they are adjoined . . .

1111. The Souls of those who had been known to me, have often confessed that they had never believed there would be such a state (there) . . .

1243. Souls suppose themselves to be in the body. Ex.

1495. They desire to destroy the souls of men. 1490. 4908. E.991⁶.

1710. As man lives from his soul, that is, from the Lord through the soul . . .

1903. Souls do not know they are in the other life, without reflection being given them. Ex. 1939. 2031.

1932. That Souls recognize the things known to them (here), while they are represented to them. Ex.

1939. Souls are Spirits . . .

2027. Such as the soul (of fierce beasts) is, such is their derivative nature . . . whereas man, his soul, or more interior and inmost, is that everyone loves his neighbour as himself; but his interior or natural mind, and his corporeals, are quite contrary.

2034. (Thus) Souls think exactly as they are wont to do in the body.

2042. That Souls who are in faith can be at once among the celestials.

2201. On the exploration of Spirits and Souls.

2287. That Souls greatly marvel that they are Spirits.

2293. That Souls, Spirits, and Angels learn Truths, in a state both of delight and of sadness.

2323. In the World of Spirits, especially that of Souls . . . the bond is sometimes loosened . . .

2355. That Souls and Spirits carry corporeal things with them into the other life.

2547. That Souls are at first as it were wanderers.

— Those are called Souls who have not as yet been allotted a place in the Grand Body.

2756. On the soul.

— If by the soul is meant life, then the Lord alone is life; but if by the soul is meant the interior minds of man, then all those organic substances which are proximate, and their beginnings which follow in order, may be called souls; for instance, the natural mind is the proximate soul of the things which are properly of the body; and the spiritual mind is the soul of those things which are of the natural mind; and there is a still more interior soul in man, which is the soul of the things which are of the spiritual mind, and of which man is not aware.

[D.] 2757. Therefore that which is interior is the soul of the exteriors; for which reason each and all things which are in the world may be said to have a soul, which is the beginning: hence the soul in each thing of plants; the soul of a Thing, and so on.

2766. That . . . the souls of brute animals cannot possibly live after death. 2769.

2794. Everyone's corporeal and natural soul is formed in the life of the body, so that everyone has his soul formed by himself from the life of the body. But the spiritual and celestial soul is formed by the Lord: this is more interior and inmost, and cannot be formed by man in the life of the body . . .

2829. The life of the human soul, namely, that of his inmost and more interior mind, is not of man, but is of the Lord . . .

2837. Every (man) forms for himself his natural soul, consequently a certain natural instinct . . . The soul which he forms for himself is the natural mind, which has obtained dominion over his spiritual mind . . .

2846. On the ways by which Souls ascend from the Lower Earth . . .

4016. (Thus) the soul of man, or his inmost, can be everywhere present in its little body . . .

4259. That Souls and Spirits do not know who they have been . . . except from others who have that idea. They are then excited, and so know, but presently they do not know. (The reason for this.)

4437. On the state of Souls after death, from a dream.

4471. Evil Souls, or evil Spirits, first return into their own life . . . but when they surpass the delight of their life they are punished . . . which may take place to 20, 50, 100, 200 times, or more. But it is provided . . . that they shall not do evil to the good . . . When they have led this life for some years . . . they become nothing but the evils of their own kind . . . and they precipitate themselves into the Hell where such are . . .

4485. Souls do not come at once into their consociations . . . This is why some Souls are long in the Lower Earth . . .

4616. Various ideas as to what the soul is. 4627. 4628.

5244². This is derived from the soul of the Father . . .

5556. The soul is a man. If you say that the soul is the life itself which inflows from the Divine, this [life] is in the human form; for whatever is from the Lord is human in form . . .

6110⁶³. The seed dispersed through the body is received by the soul (of the wife) which is in her whole body . . .

E. 26. The Divine . . . which He had as a soul from the Father . . . was His life: for the soul of everyone is his life.

70³. 'The soul of man' = the truth of life. (= the truth of faith as to knowledge. 355¹².)

152². With beasts, their interior life, which also is called their soul . . .

183¹¹. For nothing can proceed from the body except from the soul through the body, since all the life of the body is from its soul.

309. The Divine which was in Him from conception He had as a man has his soul from his father; and the soul of everyone operates through the body . . .

313¹⁴. The inmost of anything whatever is what is called the soul . . .

328¹⁴. By 'soul,' in the Word, is signified the life of faith; and by 'heart,' the life of love. 622^e. 696⁷. 745².

376¹⁵. 'The soul' = spiritual life. 518³⁵.

386²⁵. 'The soul' = the intelligence of truth instructing.

617¹⁰. 'Soul' = life. 741⁶.

622⁷. 'Soul' = the exterior thought of truth. —⁸.

696⁷. For by the soul is meant the animation or respiration of man, which is also called his spirit (or breath). 745².

706²⁴. 'They that sought his life' (Jer. xlv. 30) = those in falsities.

721⁷. 'To breathe out the soul' (Jer. xv. 9) = to perish as to all truths.

1004². Inmost unition is like that of the soul and the heart; the husband is the soul of the wife, and the wife is the heart of the man; the husband communicates and conjoins his soul to the wife by actual love; it is in his seed; and the wife receives it at the heart; hence the two become one . . .

1104³. They suppose that the Lord's . . . rational soul was from the mother alone, when yet every man is rational from the soul which is from the father.

— . They do not think that the Lord's Divine is in His Human as the soul in the body . . . —⁴. —⁵, III.

1112³. Every Angel is a man: he has a soul, a body, and a proceeding . . .

1164. Grief of soul and grief of heart are distinguished as are truth and good . . .

1199². That every animal has a soul is known; for they live, and life is a soul; and therefore they are called 'living souls.' That the soul in its ultimate form, which is corporeal . . . is the animal, (may) be known from the Spiritual World, where are seen beasts of every kind, (which) are appearances of affections, (and) their soul is nothing else. 1200⁴.

1201². The soul of beasts, regarded in itself, is spiritual; for affection . . . is spiritual . . . But the souls of beasts are not spiritual in that degree in which the souls of men are; but they are spiritual in a lower degree . . .

1206². Nothing can exist unless it has a soul; all that is called soul which is essence . . . Thus is it with nature: its essence, from which it exists, is the Spiritual . . . This essence may be called a soul; because all the Spiritual is alive . . .

1207². That nature serves as a clothing to the Spiritual, is evident from the souls of beasts, which are spiritual affections, in that these are clothed by materials which are in the world.

1212². That both animals and plants have the same origin, and thence the same soul, the difference being only in the forms which receive the influx. Ex.

—³. That the vegetative soul is from the same origin as the soul of beasts, birds, and fishes . . . is manifestly evident from (those) seen in the Heavens and Hells . . . there being a plenary correspondence with the affections there, insomuch that an animal can be changed into an accordant plant, and vice versa.

1214². As the vegetative soul, from its spiritual origin is affection, it is also use.

—⁴. As use is the vegetative soul . . .

De Dom. 70. Every man is born ignorant of truth, and desirous of evil, because his soul from the father is an evil affection; but the Lord alone was born with an appetite for good and a longing for truth, because His soul from the Father was the Divine Itself, thus the affection of the Divine love, or Divine love, from which He mastered the external which was from the mother. Ath.220.

Ath. 30⁶. The Divine received to itself the Human; (for) the soul and body with every man are not com-mingled; but the soul clothes itself with the body, and thus receives to itself that which is called the human.

46. In the Creed of Athanasius they state that His Human consists of a rational soul and a body, as if the soul of every man were from the mother; but everyone's soul is from his father, and its clothing from his mother. . . . The soul of the Lord was the Divine Itself . . . and, as the body is not the man without the soul, nay, everything of the body lives from the soul, hence such as is the soul, such is the body, and the body is formed to the likeness of the soul . . . It is first said that He is Man from the rational soul and the body, as if the soul were from the mother; and afterwards that as the soul and body are one man, so the Divine and the Human are one Christ. Here is manifest contradiction. 59. 156. 192.

D. Love iv. The Divine life applies itself to the uses themselves in every series, and thereby gives life to every form; hence man has a life which is called his soul.

x³. Natural affections are the souls of animals; and the uses of the affections are the souls of plants.

D. Wis. iii. 2. As the beginning of man is seed, and this is a twinned receptacle of life, it is evident that the human soul is not life from life, or life in itself . . . It is also evident that there is a continuity of the reception of life (through the fibres from the brains into all things of the body), and that thus the soul is not here nor there, but is in every form from them, no otherwise than as the cause is in the things caused, and the beginning in the derivatives. vii.2^e.

vi⁴. By the breath-animam seu spiritum-of the lungs, is signified the understanding . . .

—⁶. If he entirely holds his breath, he cannot think, except in the spirit and its respiration.

xii. 5. That souls of life, and living souls, and vegetable souls, are animated by the life which is from the Lord through uses and according to them. Ex.

Can. God viii.7. God is the soul of the whole, from which all people and all things live and move.

Redeemer iv. 6. Divine good made His soul, and Divine truth His body. (Compare Trinity iv.2.)

7. Consequently in the Lord when recently born these two were distinct, as are soul and body; but they were afterwards united.

x. That the Divine from eternity, and the Human in time, united like soul and body, are one Person, which is Jehovah. Chapter.

Inv. 2. When man is being regenerated, the light of Heaven is instilled into natural light, and at the same time the heat of Heaven, which make as it were a new soul, through which the man is formed by the Lord.

13. That at this day the union of soul and body is not known, is proved by the hypothesis of the learned, especially of Des Cartes and others, that the soul is a substance separated from the body, in some nondescript place; when yet the soul is the inmost man, thus is a man from head to heel. Thence it is, according to the ancients, that the soul is in the whole and every part; and that in the part where the soul is not inmost, there is not the life of man. From this union it is that all things of the soul belong to the body, and all things of the body to the soul; as the Lord said concerning His Father: 'All Mine are Thine, and all Thine are Mine.' Hence it is that the Lord is God even as to the flesh (Rom. ix. 5; Col. ii. 9) . . .

[Inv.] 14. The human mind is of three degrees: celestial, spiritual, and natural. In the first degree is the soul; in the second is the spirit or mind; in the third is the body. It is the same whether you say that the mind of man is of three degrees, or that the man is . . .

15. (Thus) the body comes forth—existat—through the soul, as a tree does from its seed . . . As, therefore, the soul of Christ is from His Divine essence, it follows that His body is also.

48. That the soul is the inmost man, and thence, according to the ancients is in the whole and in every part of the body, is because the beginning of life resides in the soul . . . Therefore there is a reciprocal union, and hence the body acts from the soul, not the soul through the body. Whatever proceeds from God is of the human form . . . especially the soul, which is the first of man.

—⁴. The reason they sounded on days of gladness, etc., and over the sacrifices, was that the Divine truth descending from Heaven gladdens, and makes what is holy of worship. The reason they also sounded for wars and battles, signified that the Divine truth flowing down from Heaven with the evil—who are 'enemies'—strikes terror of death, puts to flight, and disperses.

624. The end of the Church is described by the sounding of the seventh Angel; its state next before the end, by the sounding of the sixth Angel.

681. 'The seventh Angel sounded' (Rev. xi. 15)=the influx of Divine truth through the Heavens from the Lord, and the consequent last changes.

280. The Angels know a man's love from the sound of his speech; and his wisdom from the articulation of the sound. 427².

372. Affection in thought is circumstanced as is sound in speech . . .

P. 130^e. Like a sound continually in the ear.

194². Sound is not anything unless there is something in it which distinguishes it. Sound, moreover, corresponds to the affection with man; and as there is always something in it which distinguishes it, therefore from the sound of a man when speaking is known the affection of his love; and from the variation of it, which is speech, his thought. Hence it is that merely from the sound of one speaking the wiser Angels perceive his life's loves, together with some of the affections which are derivations.

224^e. (Thus) the internal lies hidden in the tone, etc., of the external.

279^e. The sound corresponds to the affection, and the speech to the thought.

— The first changes and variations of the state and form of the sound take place in the lungs; the second in the trachea and larynx; the third in the glottis by means of the various apertures of its orifice; the fourth in the tongue by its various applications to the palate and teeth; and the fifth in the lips by their various forms. (Thus) the mere changes and variations of the state of the organic forms, continued successively, produce sounds and their articulations, which are speech and song. (The correspondence of this with the production of affections and thoughts.)

R. 224¹. When we looked down from Heaven into the world, we saw nothing, but only heard sounds, for the most part unharmonious.

484. I heard a sound as of a mill.

655^e. For affection sounds, and thought speaks.

792. By 'voice' is meant sound, and every sound corresponds to an affection which is of love, because it originates thence. It is from this that the sounds of harps, etc., from their correspondence, signify affections. Ex.

875². Speech is nothing but the form of sound; (and) sound corresponds to affection, and speech to thought; therefore affection sounds, and thought speaks. . . Take away the sound from speech, and how much speech will there be? (So with thought when affection is taken away from it.)

M. 33. Origin of the harsher sound [of the voice] with men. 218.

326¹². For there are affections which produce varieties of sounds with men . . .

353². The Voluntary presents itself by sounds.

— . Sounds, in the world, increase when they descend from heights . . . whence come thunders. (The correspondence of this.)

393. Every affection, whether of grief or joy, expresses itself by sounds.

588^e. Sounds enter the will and the affection.

817. The affection itself is expressed by the sound of the speech.

828³. If the affection of good were to descend into discourse, it would not speak, but would only sound.

837. When man becomes a Spirit . . . the sound of his speech is the sound of his affection.

839. By the angels of the Third Heaven, a man's quality is Known from the sound of his speech, etc.

855. From the Celestial Kingdom there are not heard words of speech, but sounds. Ex.

1202^e. A beast, which has no thought from the understanding, but only knowledge from affection, can do nothing but sound, and vary the sound of its affection according to its appetite.

1216. In the speech of men there are two things together: the sound, and its articulation into words. The sound is of the affection of the will; and the articulation of the sound is of the thought of the understanding . . . and the affection is known from the sound, and the thought from the words, which are the articulations of the sound.

— . The sound of the speech of the Angels in the higher parts of Heaven is heard below variously, for it increases as it progresses . . . The sound of the spiritual Angels is heard as the sound of roaring waters; and the sound of the celestial Angels as the sound of thunders.

D. Wis. x. 5. Sounds which derive little from the understanding are the sounds of singing and of music; those which derive more from the understanding are the interior sounds of speech; and those which derive still more from it are the exterior sounds of speech . . . There is a correspondence of sounds and speech with the life of the will . . . and of the understanding; (for) from the sound may be perceived the quality of the affection . . . The correspondence of the sound itself is with the general affection of love in the understanding; the correspondence of the variations of the sound, such as are those of singing and music, is with the variations of the affections which are from the love of the will in the understanding; the correspondence of the variations of sound which derive very little from the understanding, is with perception; that of those which derive more is with the variation of perceptions; and that of those which derive much, is with thought and its variations.

3195. 'He dwelt in the land of the south' (Gen.xxiv.62)=in Divine light. . . 'The south'=light, in fact, the light of intelligence, which is wisdom.

3693². 'Sun-set at noon' (Amos viii. 9)=obscurity with those in Knowledges.

3708. 'The south'=truth in light.

—¹¹. The land of the south=austrum seu meridies (Zech.vi.6)=those in the good and truth of Knowledges.

4769³. 'The south'=a state of light.

5643. 'They shall dine with me at noon' (Gen.xliii.16)=conjoined when with the medium. . . for 'noon'=a state of light, thus the spiritual state which is signified by the medium. 5672.

5692². It is noon with Angels when they are in the light of Truths.

6000⁹. 'The death which wasteth at noonday' (Ps.xci.6)=the evil in which men live openly, by which truth is destroyed. 7102¹⁰. 9642⁵.

6110. When it is noon (with the Angels) truths are furnished them (as food). 8108². 8426³.

—⁶. Noon (in Hell) is the itch of Falsities.

8750². Hence there is a correspondence there. . . of a state of truth of faith with noon. 8812³.

9340⁹. 'They of the south=meridionales' (Obad.19)=those in the light of truth.

9642. 'For the angle of the south towards the south=austrum' (Ex.xxvi.18)=even into the interior and inmost things where truth is in light. . . for by 'the south' is signified a state of light, which is a state of intelligence from truths, thus also an interior state. . . 9742.

—². 'I will say to the south' (Is.xliii.6) = to those who are in light from the knowledges of good and truth, who are those within the Church; and therefore it is said to these 'Keep not back.' (Further ill.) E.724²⁰.

—⁸. As 'the south'=truth in light, the tribes of Reuben, Simeon, and Gad were to encamp towards the south. Ex.

9648. There are four states to which the four quarters correspond. . . the south corresponds to the state of truth in its light.

9927⁶. 'The south'=the state of the truth of faith in the internal man.

10134. Hence in the Word. . . by 'noon' is signified a state of light in clearness.

—⁷. In like manner the second state of the Church is called 'noon,' in the Word.

10135. When the angels are in a state of light, it is noon with them.

10179. By the south and the north is signified truth from one boundary to the other. . . In Heaven, those in the clear light of truth are in the south.

10189². In Heaven at the right are those in the light of truth, thus those in the south.

10261^e. Those are said to be 'in the south' who are in the light of truth.

148. All in the Heavens dwell distinct according to the quarters. . . to the south and north dwell those in wisdom; to the south, those in the clear light of wisdom. 149.

150. Hence the south, in Heaven,=wisdom and intelligence in clear light.

151. The south, with infernals, is on the right.

—^e. Those in falsities of evil dwell from their south to their north.

155². Noon with the Angels, corresponds to the state of their wisdom in clearness.

—^e. Hence, in the Word, 'noon'=wisdom in its light.

513. Instructions are given by Angels of many Societies, especially by those which are in the northern and southern quarter; for these angelic Societies are in intelligence and wisdom from Knowledges of good and truth.

587³. Thus the atrociousness of the Hells decreases from the northern to the southern quarter.

—⁴. There are many Hells in the northern and southern quarter: in these are they who have been in the love of the world. . .

596. The Kingdom (in Hell) which is opposite to the Spiritual Kingdom, is in the northern and southern quarter.

J. 48. The Dutch were towards the east and south. C.J.48.

— . Some of the Papists appeared in the southern quarter.

58². Most of the Papists dwelt in the south and west. . . . In the south dwelt those who had been influential by their talents, and had confirmed themselves in their religiosity. D.5346.

61. The Judgment on the Babylonians in the southern quarter. Des.

C. J. 42. In the southern quarter (of London) dwell the wise. . .

W. 73^e. 'Noon,' in the Word,=the fulness of the Church.

121. Those in a higher degree of wisdom dwell in the south. . . Hence, by 'the south,' in the Word, is meant wisdom in light.

125. Those more in wisdom see the Lord obliquely to the right. . . These are in the south.

129. That the Angels constantly have the south on the right, etc. Gen.art.

R. 351². 'The south'=wisdom from love.

442². These live in the southern quarter in the abyss.

875. An Angel from the south of Heaven. des.

[R]. 901. 'On the south three gates' . . . By 'the south' is signified wisdom and the affection of truth in a higher degree, thus more . . . because the Lord is the Sun . . . and at His sides are the south and the north, at His right side, the south . . . and therefore those who are . . . in wisdom from the affection of truth, more, dwell in the south; and those who are in them less, in the north.

906². Every man who is in the goods and truths of the Church from the Word is consociated with the Angels, and dwells with them as to the interiors of his mind . . . those who are in the truths of wisdom, in the south and north of Heaven.

M. 2. I stood upon a hill in the southern quarter. 56.

3⁵. (Two companies of talented Spirits from the southern quarter deliver their sentiments concerning eternal happiness.) —⁶.

11^e. (All in that Heaven are employed until noon.)

55⁶. (Sentiments of those who stood on the south concerning conjugal love.)

75³. Let us bend our way to the south, where are the wiser of these (Most Ancients).

76. A hill in the confines between the east and the south.

77⁵. Whoremongers are cast into the fatuous lights of the south.

79. (Those of the age of iron mixed with clay) dwell in the confines between the south and the west; but at a great distance . . . and also deeper down.

155a⁴. The wives looked to the window in the quarter of the south.

T. 160². In front, in the south, are Societies of those who are more intelligent than the rest.

461. I was conveyed into the southern quarter, into a certain paradise . . .

476. As a child learns the rudiments of religion, he recedes from the north to the south.

D. 5233. Those in the mountains to the south were those in the greatest lumen of nature, by which they confirmed themselves against the Divine . . .

5484. In the southern quarter towards the east are those who are imperious, and who are in great offices, and do not know anything of what is certain; towards the west there, are those who are cunning through affections, as Sirens.

5503. Those who were conducted to the south, were those who had led a moral life, from the Knowledges about it, so that they had lived morally and not spiritually, because they had no Knowledges concerning the truths of faith . . . so that they were accepted.

5673. To the south (in the other life) are those who are in external light, in worldly things, and who are in riches.

E. 21. When Asia is named, the Angels perceive the south.

223². 'The south' = a state of light.

—¹⁷. 'The cities of the south' = truths of doctrine with those in the Spiritual Kingdom.

239¹⁰. 'The south' = where the truth of faith is in clearness.

298. 'The south' = Divine truth in light.

316¹⁵. 'The south' = where truth is in light.

357. 'The south' = the light of truth.

401¹⁶. 'Noon' = where are Knowledges of good.

405²³. 'The south' = where are they who are in truths of good, because in light.

—'. 'The south' = the interior or first things of the Church, and 'the north,' the exterior or last things of the Church . . . because in the Spiritual World those are in the southern quarter who are in the light of truth from the Lord; and under these, in the Hells there, are those who are in natural lumen by means of which they have confirmed themselves in falsities . . .

417². In the southern quarter (of the universal Spiritual World) dwell those who are in the clear light of truth.

418². Into the two quarters, southern and northern, the Lord inflows with Divine truth more strongly than with Divine good, whence these are more in wisdom and intelligence.

419²⁵. Those winds which are from the south disperse truths with those who are in falsities.

422³. Those Angels and Spirits who are in truths from the good of love dwell in the south and north . . . Hence those who dwell in the south and in the north, which quarters are on both sides, are in the light of truth; those in the south, in the clear light of truth . . . The light of truth is intelligence and wisdom. 600⁹.

—⁴. In the southern and northern quarter (as determined from the Lord as a Moon) are those in truths from the good of charity, which are called the truths of faith.

439³. Illustration is signified by 'the south' (Deut. xxxiii. 23).

449⁵. 'The south' (Jer. xvii. 26) = those in spiritual good and thence in the light of truth.

652². They who are in the clear perception of truth, dwell in the southern quarter of the cities, and also walk there.

734¹⁶. The endeavour to destroy truths openly, is signified by . . . 'Let us go up at noon' (Jer. vi. 4).

750¹¹. 'Thy thick darkness shall be as the noonday' (Is. lviii. 10) = that to those in ignorance but still in longing shall be given the understanding of truth and good.

971. The Spiritual Kingdom consists of the Heavens and Angels who are in Divine truth, and these Heavens are in the southern quarter and in the northern quarter.

J. (Post.) 268. See LONDON.

Coro. 38. (The Hell from the Most Ancient Church) lies in the middle southern quarter . . .

A. 1666^e. Cities sown—conserere—with salt. Ex. 2455^e.

2781⁴. They who sow beside all waters' (Is. xxxii. 20) = those who suffer themselves to be instructed in spiritual things.

3941³. 'To sow wheat' (Jer. xii. 13) = the goods which are of love and charity.

6154. 'To sow' = to implant.

9182⁵. 'A land not sown' (Jer. ii. 2) = defect of truths.

9262⁴. 'Neither ploughed nor sown' (Deut. xxi. 4) = not cultivated with the truths and goods of faith, on account of ignorance.

9272. 'Six years thou shalt sow the land' (Ex. xxiii. 10) = the first state, when the man of the Church is being instructed in the truths and goods of faith. Ex.

—³. That 'to sow the land,' or 'a field,' = to teach and learn the truths and goods of faith which are of the Church. Ill.

9274. 'Not to sow the land' (in the seventh year) (ver. 11) = not to be led by means of truths, as before.

E. 374⁹. 'To plough and sow' = to learn.

3862¹. 'To sow the fields' (Ps. cvii. 37) = to be instructed, and to receive truths.

653^e. 'It is not sown—conseretur' (Deut. xxix. 23) = no receptibility of the truth of the Church.

706¹⁷. 'To sow and reap' = the implantation of good and its reception.

Space. Spatium.

See under PLACE, and TIME.

A. 1382. Men cannot but confound the infinite Divine with the infinite of space; and they apprehend the infinite of space as nothing, as it is.

2625. Two things (here) appear essentials, because they are proper to nature, namely, space and time. Hence, to live in space and time, is to live in nature. But these two become null in the other life. In the World of Spirits they do appear as something, because Spirits fresh from the body take with them the idea of natural things; but they afterwards perceive that there are no space and time there; but, instead of them, state; and that the states (there) correspond to the spaces and times in nature: to spaces, states as to being; and to times, states as to manifesting—existere.

—². Supposes that if he were to put off the idea of space and time, and, still more, space and time themselves, he would become utterly null, and that nothing would be left him from which he could feel and think . . . when yet it is quite the contrary. 2654⁶.

2654⁶. Life is more heavenly in proportion as it is further away from the things of space and time.

3356. In the other life there is no idea of space and time, but in place of them there is state; yet all things there appear as if they were in space, and succeed one another as if they were in time; but, in themselves, these are changes of state, for this is their source. Ex.

3387³. Thus whatever is said in the Word about places and spaces . . . is an appearance of truth . . . for the idea of space and time is in almost everything of the thought with man, so long as he is in the world, that is, in space and time. Ill. 3404^e. 3857².

3938. Without an idea . . . from the things of space and time, man can comprehend nothing of Divine things . . . Without an idea of space and time, man cannot think anything at all; for, as to the body, he is in time . . . But the Angels, because they are not in time and space, have ideas of state; and hence it is that, in the Word, spaces and times = states. 7381³, Ex. 8918, Ex.

—². There is a state which corresponds to space, and a state which corresponds to time; the former is state as to being; the latter as to manifesting. These are the two things which make man. Ex. 4814³. 6983.

4043. See FORM.

4482. 'Broad in spaces' (Gen. xxxiv. 21) = extension as to truths. Ex.

5146. When the idea of space is put off, as takes place in Heaven, and also in the interior thought of man, there is put off the idea of height and depth . . .

6983. There are two things which are proper to nature which do not exist in Heaven, still less in what is Divine, namely, space and time . . . In the Divine which is above the Heavens . . . instead of space there is infinity, and instead of time eternity. To these two, the spaces and times which are in the world correspond.

7381³. The ideas of space come forth from a measuring by times; therefore where there is one there is the other.

8918. This notion of space (between the angelic Societies) comes from the distance from the good and truth which are from the Divine.

9440. The spaces and distances . . . which appear in the natural world, in their first cause and origin are changes of the state of the interiors . . .

9579. A Spirit is not conveyed through spaces, but through variations of the state of the interior life, which appear to him like progressions through spaces.

10771. They concluded these things by angelic ideas, whereby the measures of spaces and times are at once known in a just proportion relatively to the spaces and times elsewhere.

H. 17². Spaces there are circumstanced according to the states of their interiors.

169. The natural man may believe that he would have no thought if the ideas of time, space, and natural things were taken away; for upon these is founded all the thought which man has. But the thoughts are limited and confined in proportion as they derive from time, space, and what is material . . .

191. On space in Heaven. Chapter.

— . Although all things in Heaven appear in place and in space just as (here), still the Angels have no notion or idea of place and space.

[H.] 195^e. (Thus) spaces are exactly according to the states of the interiors with the Angels ; and therefore the notion and idea of space cannot enter into their thought, although there are spaces with them equally as in the world. 266³.

196. This may be illustrated by the thoughts of man, in that there are no spaces to them . . . Neither does the sight take account of spaces except from the intermediate objects . . .

198. (Thus) although in Heaven there are spaces as in the world, nothing is estimated there according to spaces, but according to states ; consequently, the spaces there cannot be measured as in the world ; but can only be seen from the state and according to the state of the interiors of the Angels.

C. J. 14^e. Spiritual light . . . does not advance through spaces like the light of the world, but through affections and perceptions of truth . . . From these are the appearances of spaces in that world.

W. 7. That the Divine is not in space. Gen.art. T.30.

— . This cannot be comprehended by a natural idea, because there is space in it ; for it has been formed from such things as are in the world, in each and all of which . . . there is space. All magnitude there is of space ; all length, breadth, and height are of space ; in a word, all measure, figure, and form are of space ; and therefore . . . it cannot be comprehended by a natural idea that the Divine is not in space, when it is said that it is everywhere.

—². Still, man can comprehend this in natural thought, provided he admits into it something of spiritual light. . . A spiritual idea does not derive anything from space ; but everything from state. State is predicated of love, life, wisdom, affections, joys . . . and a truly spiritual idea of these things has nothing in common with space ; it is higher, and regards ideas of space as beneath it . . .

—³. But as Angels and Spirits (also) see with their eyes, and objects cannot be seen except in space, therefore, in the Spiritual World . . . there appear spaces like the spaces on earth, but still they are not spaces, but appearances ; for they are not fixed and stated as on earth ; for they can be elongated and contracted, changed and varied ; and, as they cannot be determined by measure, they cannot be comprehended there by any natural idea, but only by a spiritual idea ; which, in relation to the distances of space, is the same as it is in relation to the distances of good or of truth, which are affinities and similitudes according to their states.

—⁹. They who are not willing (to elevate the thoughts of their understanding into spiritual light) cannot think except from space, even about God ; and to think about God from space, is to think about the extense of nature.

51. I entreat you not to confuse your ideas with time and space ; for in so far as there is what is of time and space in your ideas when you read the things which follow, you will not understand them ; for what is Divine is not in time and space, as will be clearly seen in the continuation . . .

69. That the Divine infils all the spaces of the universe without—absque—space.—There are two things proper to nature : space, and time. From these, man, in the natural world, forms the ideas of his thought, and thence his understanding. If he remains in these ideas, and does not elevate his mind above them, he can never perceive anything spiritual and Divine ; for he involves them in ideas which partake of space and time ; and, in proportion as he does this, the lumen of his understanding becomes merely natural. To think from this lumen in thinking about spiritual and Divine things, is like thinking from the thick darkness of night about things which appear only in the light of day. . . But he who knows how to elevate his mind above the ideas of thought which partake of space and time, passes from thick darkness into light, and relishes spiritual and Divine things, and at last sees the things which are in them and from them . . . Every man who has understanding is able to think above the things which are proper to nature . . . and he then affirms and sees that the Divine, being omnipresent, is not in space.

70. All who die and become Angels put off those two things proper to nature : space, and time ; for they then enter into spiritual light, in which the objects of thought are truths, and the objects of sight are like those in the natural world, but are correspondent to their thoughts. The objects of their thought . . . derive nothing from space and time ; but the objects of their sight do appear as if in space and time, but still they do not think from them. The reason is that the spaces and times there are not stated as in the natural world, but are mutable according to the states of their life. Hence, instead of them, there are in the ideas of their thought states of life ; instead of spaces such things as relate to states of love ; and instead of times such things as relate to states of wisdom.

—^e. As the thoughts of the Angels derive nothing from space and time . . . they do not comprehend when it is said that the Divine infils spaces ; for they do not know what spaces are ; but they do clearly comprehend, when, without the idea of any space, it is said that the Divine infils all things.

71. That the merely natural man thinks about spiritual and Divine things from space, and the spiritual man without space. Examp.

81. Abstract space, and deny a vacuum, and then think about the Divine love and the Divine wisdom, that they are the essence itself when space is abstracted and a vacuum is denied. Then think from space, and you will perceive that the Divine is the same in the greatest and in the least things of space ; for in essence abstracted from space there is neither great nor small, but what is the same.

III. See IDEA.

130. Exterior thought is in space, but not interior thought ; and where [the thought] is not in space, as in the Spiritual World, still it is in the appearance of space.

—². But these things can be but little understood by a man who thinks about God from space; for God is everywhere, and yet not in space; thus He is both within and without an Angel . . .

134. The reason man does not know his home from any quarter in himself, is that he thinks from space, thus from the quarters of the natural world . . .

155. Creation itself cannot be apprehended unless space and time are removed from the thought . . . Remove them . . . and keep the mind in an idea abstracted from space and time, and you will perceive that the greatest of space and the least of space do not at all differ . . . 283². 285.

156. Creation . . . cannot be said to be effected from space to space, nor from time to time, thus progressively and successively; but from eternity and infinity; not from an eternity of time . . . nor from an infinity of space, because there is no such thing . . .

160. As the lowest things of nature . . . are dead . . . and are fixed, therefore there are spaces there . . . (Thus) spaces are proper to nature. And, as the spaces there are not appearances of spaces according to the states of life, as they are in the Spiritual World, they, too, may be called dead.

300^e. These things cannot be comprehended unless spaces are removed from the ideas. P.46². 48.

P. 49. Many will say, How can anyone comprehend anything . . . without space and time . . . But think interiorly whether love . . . wisdom . . . or thought is in space and time, and you will find they are not; and, as the Divine is love and wisdom itself, it follows that it cannot be conceived in space and time, thus neither can the infinite. Ex.

50. As Angels and Spirits are affections . . . and the derivative thoughts, therefore neither are these in space and time, but are only in the appearance of them. They have the appearance of space and time according to the states of their affections and derivative thoughts; and therefore when anyone thinks from affection about another, with an intention that he wants to see him, or speak to him, he is at once presented. . . Space and time effect nothing towards the presence, because affection and the derivative thought are not in space and time, and Spirits and Angels are (these). (From experience.) T.64.

—⁴. Everybody knows this from what is implanted in him; for when I have said that I have spoken with any dead man in Asia, etc., no one has ever thought about any distance of space . . .

51. (Thus) the infinite and eternal, thus the Lord, are to be thought of without space and time; and such thought is possible; and those have such thought who think interiorly in the Rational; and then the infinite and eternal are the same as the Divine. . . From thought abstracted from time and space, there is a comprehension of the Divine omnipresence and omnipotence, and also of the Divine from eternity; but none at all from thought in which inheres an idea from space and time.

R. 937². For spaces there are not anything but appearances according to the likeness of minds, that is, of affections and the derivative thoughts . . .

947². In its purely spiritual sense, the Word does not derive anything from an idea of time, nor from an idea of space; for although the times and spaces in Heaven appear like the times and spaces in the world, still there are none there; and therefore the Angels cannot measure the times and spaces which are there appearances, in any other way than by states, as these proceed and are changed.

M. 50. For in the Spiritual World there are no spaces, but appearances of spaces; and these are according to the states of their life; and these are according to the states of their love.

158. Those things which from their origin are celestial, and those things which from their origin are spiritual, are not in space, but are in appearances of space. This is known in the world . . .

—². (Thus) the souls and minds of men are not in space . . . and, as they are not in space, they can be conjoined as into a one.

—³. I once thought about the essence and omnipresence of God from eternity, that is, about God before the creation of the world, and as I could not as yet remove spaces and times from the ideas of my thought, I became anxious . . . But I was told to remove the ideas of space and time, and I should see . . . and from that time I have been able to think about God from eternity, and not at all about nature from eternity; because God is in all time without time, and in all space without space; whereas nature in all time is in time, and in all space is in space; and nature with its time and space could not but have a beginning and origin; but not God, who is without time and space; and therefore nature is from God, not from eternity, but in time; that is, together with its time and space both at once. T.31³.

I. 5⁴. As God is one, so also is the spiritual Sun one; for the extension of space is not predicable of the derivations of that Sun; and essence and manifestation —crisientia—without space, are everywhere in spaces without space. Thus the Divine love is everywhere . . .

T. 27. There are two things proper to the natural world, which cause all things there to be finite, one is space, and the other is time; and as . . . spaces and times were created together with this world . . . it is proper to treat of their two beginnings, which are Immensity and Eternity; for the immensity of God has relation to spaces, and His eternity to times.

29. That God, since He was before the world, thus before spaces and times originated, is infinite. Ex.

—². The common opinion about . . . Souls . . . is that they are not in any extense, consequently, not in space and time . . . when yet they are substantial men, and live together like the men (here) upon spaces and in times, which are determined according to the states of their minds. If there were no spaces and times, that whole World . . . might be drawn through the eye of a needle, or concentrated upon the point of a hair, which would be possible if there were no substantial extense there . . . But the times there are not distinguished into days, months, etc., because the Sun does not appear to rise and set . . . They have spaces there, because all the things in that World are substantial, which in the natural world are material.

—³. (Thus) spaces and times make finite each and all things which are in both the worlds . . .

30. That God, since the world was made, is in space without space, and in time without time. Ex.

—². The reason God is present in space without space, and in time without time, is that He is always the same, from eternity to eternity; thus . . . in God and before God there were no spaces and times before the creation, but after it; and therefore as He is the same, He is in space without space, and in time without time. Hence it follows that nature is separate from Him, and yet He is omnipresent in it. Ex.

31. The infinity of God, relatively to spaces, is called immensity; and relatively to times, eternity . . . yet there is nothing of space in His immensity, and nothing of time in His eternity. Ex.

— . In God there is nothing of space and time; and yet the beginnings of these are from God.

—². As man cannot think otherwise than from ideas derived from such things as are of space and time, he cannot perceive anything of the immensity of God before spaces, nor of His eternity before times . . .

64². The reason Angels and Spirits (can become present with one another in this way) is that every affection . . . and thought . . . is in space without space, and in time without time . . .

D. 2338. Sometimes so many appear in the same space, that if they were all there, one must be within another.

3476. Therefore the notion of time and of space is not given to Spirits, except only to those who are corporeal . . .

3481. I asked them whether there is anything of space outside the universe; and also if there is space outside the universe does it not extend ad infinitum? for no terminus can be conceived if space is conceived. Thus how can there be space without space, or what is infinite, which cannot be predicated of space! . . . They then reasoned about that non-space outside the universe, that it is without end; and therefore they seemed to themselves to advance further, until at last they saw (the statues) there, who (threatened to swallow them). They were those who in the bodily life had been in such a phantasy, and had confused the Divine infinite with the infinite of space, so that they could never conceive the infinite of the Lord except by the infinite of space; and, as they cannot conceive the infinite of space, they do not admit the infinite of the Lord. D. Min. 4609.

3482. I was delivered from (this phantasy) by thinking of infinite space as not being space outside the universe . . .

3484. Forms almost without boundaries, thus without spaces and times.

3605^e. For an idea is not finite without space . . .

3973. The Angels do not know what space is; for those who are at the end of the universe are present in a moment.

4016. In the other life there is no space, nor time; thus all are so present that they are close together even if they were at the end of the universe.

5623. That in the other life they do not know what time and space are. Ex.

5624. (Still) there are spaces and times; but it is for these reasons that (the Angels) have no notion of them.

5625. (Thus) natural thought, and especially sensuous thought, cannot recede from the notion of space and time; and if it does recede it can scarcely think; for the natural man cannot think abstractedly from times and spaces.

5627. They see all things there as in the world; but still they do not perceive them according to spaces; but according to their states of life.

D. Min. 4609. The idea of the infinite and eternal [derived] from space and time, altogether perishes so as to become nothing; and hence comes disbelief in the Divine.

— . The more interiorly anyone is elevated into Heaven, the more he is elevated from the idea of time and space; and the more deeply [he is lowered] from Heaven, the more [is he lowered] into the idea of time and space; thus the more he is removed from the idea of the infinite and eternal, and consequently from faith.

Time and space are the things which bound human ideas, and make them inwardly natural; and they adhere to other ideas, of which man is unaware; and they constitute the natural man who reasons . . .

E. 514¹⁰. 'Breadth of spaces' (Is.xxxiii.21)=truths from good in multitude and extension.

870. Spaces and times appear in Heaven quite similarly as in the world; but they are only appearances of the states with the Angels; for the states of their affection and the derivative thought are presented apparently before their external senses as spaces and as times: but still they are not spaces and times as in the natural world.

1131². As nature is not life, so the two properties of nature, which are times and spaces, are not of life . . .

1212⁵. There are two things proper to nature: time, and thence what is successive; and space, and thence what is extended; but these things do not exist in the Spiritual World as things proper to it; for there they are appearances of the states of their life. Hence plants there grow in a moment, and also disappear in a moment . . .

—³. But still the spaces in the Heavens appear extended similarly to the spaces of our Earth; but as the spaces there are from an exclusively spiritual origin . . . and therefore appear according to the states of the Angels, the Angels cannot have the idea of spaces, but instead have an idea of their own states . . . It is the same with the times; for progressions through spaces are also progressions through times.

—⁵. But the idea of state, and the derivative idea of the appearance of space and time, exist solely in the ultimates of creation there, and from them; the ultimates of creation there being the lands upon which the Angels dwell. The spaces and times appear there, and not in the spiritual things themselves from which the ultimates have been created; and not even in the affections themselves of the Angels, unless the thought from them advances to ultimates. It is different in the natural world, where the spaces and times are fixed, stated, and measurable, and therefore enter into the thoughts of men, and bound them, and distinguish them from the spiritual thoughts of the Angels.

1220². That spaces and times must be removed from the ideas, in order that the omnipresence of the Lord with all and each, and His omniscience of present and future things, may be comprehended. Ex.

De Verbo 3⁷. Therefore the speech of men in every word partakes of space, time, and what is personal and material.

D. Love iii. The presence of the Lord is not like that of man, which intils space; but it is presence without space, which is that He is in the greatest and the least things; thus Himself is in the greatest things, and Himself is in the least things . . .

D. Wis. vii. 5². Hence there are spaces and times (in the Spiritual World) . . . but they are appearances. Ex. . . When they see spaces, they do not think about them from space.

xii. 3². The presence of the Sun of Heaven is not in an extense of space and time; but that of the sun (here) is in that; for the extense of space and time was created with nature. Hence it is that the presence of the Sun of Heaven is omnipresence.

Can. God iii. 13. It is vain to think what there was before the world, and also what there is outside the world; because before the world there was no time, and outside the world there is no space.

Holy Spirit ii. 2. Before the creation, God was not in external space, thus neither after the creation to eternity.

5 M. 17. The light and heat (of our sun, cause that love and wisdom may have) as it were times and spaces; (yet) love and wisdom have them not, but only affect those who are in times and spaces . . .

Inv. 11. The Lord is in space, and in an extense; but not by space and the extense.

A. 5. It has been granted me to speak with Spirits and Angels. 68. 70. 322. 4923^e. etc.

11. In the fifth state (of regeneration) the man speaks from faith . . .

69. Man . . . could have spoken with Spirits and Angels . . .

174. To speak by the province of the mouth is common to the celestials. It was granted to perceive their cogitative speech. 180.

180. The celestial Angels, who sat at my head . . . did not speak, except tacitly . . .

202^e. Yet the celestial Angels speak together, like others, about various things; but with celestial speech, formed and derived from love, which is more ineffable than the speech of the spiritual Angels.

241. The sight (of the Most Ancients) was merely an instrumental thing: hence their speech was such . . . For if anyone pays close attention to the meaning of the words of a speaker, he . . . as it were does not hear the words . . .

322². Spirits speak together so acutely, subtly, sagaciously, and distinctly . . .

607². The Most Ancients spoke not so much by words . . . but by ideas, like the Angels, which they could express by innumerable changes of the countenance, especially of the lips, in which there are countless series of muscular fibres which at this day are not set free . . . They could express in a minute what would now require an hour . . . and that more fully and clearly . . . than is possible by words . . . Many others, not of this Earth, now speak in a like manner.

608. With external respiration came the speech of words, or of articulate sound, into which the ideas of thought are determined. 1120.

831³. Sirens can speak exactly as if from me. 1983. D.2744. 2752. 2764^c. 3728.

904. 'God spake to Noah' (Gen. viii. 15) = the presence of the Lord with this man of the Church.

— . The Lord speaks with every man ; for whatever a man wills and thinks that is good and true is from the Lord. . . Everything good and true which the Angels with man inspire is of the Lord ; thus the Lord is continually speaking with man ; but quite differently with one man than with another. With those who suffer themselves to be led away by evil Spirits, the Lord speaks as if absent, or from afar, so that it can scarcely be said that He is speaking ; but with those who are being led by the Lord, He speaks more presently ; which may be sufficiently evident from this : that no one can ever think anything good or true except from the Lord.

—³. In proportion as the Lord is present, in the same proportion He speaks with man . . .

940². (This Jew) applied himself to my left ear . . . as if he would speak with me ; but he did not speak with a sonorous voice, but inwardly in himself, yet so that I heard . . .

950. (The Spirits from Gehenna) spoke undulatorily . . .

957. Those who have contracted the nature of speaking one thing and thinking another (are expelled, racked, knocked backwards and forwards, with a violent collision of the parts, and rent asunder, so that they believe themselves torn into little bits).

968. They had the idea that they must not speak with the devil, but flee from him. But they were instructed that it does no harm to those whom the Lord protects. Ex.

1114. Angels and Spirits, when the Lord concedes it, can meet all whom they have Known or heard of . . . and speak with them. Des.

1118. The speech (of the Most Ancients) was not articulate . . . but tacit ; and was produced not by external, but by internal respiration. . . By such speech they could much more fully express their sentiments and ideas than can possibly be done by articulate sounds . . . 7361. D.3317. 3322.

1119. Their internal respiration inflowed silently into a certain external speech, and thus into a silent speech, which was perceived by the other in his interior man.

1378. Much more is this the case with the speech of Spirits, which is interior speech.

1384². (Therefore the celestial Angels) do not admit speech about truth ; but say that it is so . . . But the spiritual Angels . . . speak about truth and good.

1388. His quality is known, even if he speaks nothing

. . . Even men know what another is thinking, from his speech, etc. although his speech witnesses differently.

1391. Communications (between Spirits) are made both by their speech together, and by ideas accompanied with representations . . .

1410. When anything was true, they said, 'Jehovah said,' or 'Jehovah spake,' which signified that it was so. But after significatives had been turned into representatives, the Lord did actually speak with them ; and when it is then said, 'Jehovah said,' or 'spoke,' with anyone, it = the same as before.

1505. (Self) reigus in all the particulars of his speech, etc.

1580. The internal man here speaks to-*alloquitur the external.

— . It is known from the Word that many have spoken with Spirits and Angels . . . but now it is not believed that anyone can speak with them . . . 1636, Examp.

1635. The speech of Spirits with me has been heard and perceived as distinctly as is speech with man ; nay, when I have spoken with them in a company of men, I have observed that just as I heard the men sonorously, so did I hear the Spirits, insomuch that sometimes the Spirits have marvelled that their speech with me was not heard by others ; for there was no difference whatever between them as to the hearing . . . Human discourse passes in through the ear . . . but the discourse of Spirits . . . by an internal way, into the same organs. 4652². H.248, Ex.

1637. The speech of Spirits with man is in his vernacular, which they speak as readily and skilfully as if they had been born in the same land. (Continued under TONGUE.) 1876. D.2137.

—². All Souls can at once understand the speech of all in the universal world, exactly as if they had been born in those countries ; for they perceive whatever a man is thinking.

1639. The speech of words is the speech proper to man, and in fact is that of the external memory ; whereas the speech of ideas of thought is the speech of Spirits, and in fact is that of the interior memory . . . From this memory I have often spoken with Spirits, thus in their Own language, that is, by ideas of thought . . . 1876.

[A.] 1640. Spirits have spoken with me from the various situations in which they were according to their situation in the Grand Man, that is, according to their state.

—². From their speech I could perceive their quality; for from their speech . . . it is manifestly evident of what genius and disposition they are; also of what persuasion, and of what affection; so that if they are deceitful, even if there is no deceit while they are speaking, yet the genus and species of the deceit are perceived from every word and idea . . . so that there is no need of much exploration; for in every word and idea there is an image of it.

—³. It is also perceived whether the idea of their speech is closed, or open; also, what is from themselves, what from others, and what from the Lord . . .

—^e. Before a Spirit speaks, it is known from the thought alone what he intends to speak; for the thought inflows more quickly than the speech.

1641. Spirits speak together—colloquantur—as men do; and those who are good, with all the familiarity of friendship and love . . . and this in their own speech, by which they express more in a minute than a man can in an hour. For their speech is the universal of all languages, being by ideas, which are the primitives of words. They speak upon subjects with marvellous acuteness and perspicuity, by as many series of reasons following in order . . . They adjoin persuasion and affection.

—². Sometimes they speak by representations. Des.

—³. Spirits are not aware that they speak with one another with speech of such surpassing excellence . . . unless it is given them by the Lord to reflect upon it; for this speech is natural to them . . . as with a man who fixes his attention on the meaning . . . and who sometimes does not know with what speech he is speaking.

1642. The speech of angelic Spirits is still more universal and perfect (than that of Spirits); and the speech of Angels is more universal and perfect still. Ex. D. 2139.

1643. The speech of Angelic Spirits is incomprehensible . . . The Thing [spoken of] is presented representatively in a wonderful form. Des. 1876.

1645. The speech of Angels is ineffable . . . and is not intelligible to man in any way . . . nor to Spirits . . . Their speech is not of Things represented by any ideas like those of Spirits or angelic Spirits; but is of ends and the derivative uses, which are the beginnings and essentials of Things. The angelic thoughts are insinuated into these, and are varied there with indefinite variety; and in each and all things of that speech there is interior delight and happiness from the good of mutual love from the Lord, and beauty and delectation from the derivative truth of faith . . .

1646. The speech of the Angels sometimes appears in the World of Spirits, thus before the interior sight, like a vibration of light, or of resplendent flame; and this with a variation according to the state of the affections of their speech. It is only the generals of their speech . . . which are thus represented.

1647. The speech of the celestial Angels is distinct from the speech of the spiritual Angels, and is even more ineffable and inexpressible. It is the celestial things of ends into which their thoughts are insinuated, and they are therefore in happiness itself; and, wonderful to say, their speech is much more abundant; for they are in the very fountains and origins themselves of the life of thought and speech. 2157².

1648. There is a speech of good Spirits, and of angelic Spirits, which is a simultaneous speech of many, especially in gyres, or choirs. Des. . . Such was the form of Songs anciently; and such is that of the Psalms of David.

1649. A flowing way of speaking, like the rhythmical or harmonious form of Songs, is natural to Spirits. They speak so among themselves, although they are not aware of it. Souls come at once into the habit of speaking in this way. I have been initiated into similar speech, and it has at last become familiar. The reason their speech is such, is that they speak in Society, which for the most part they are unaware of: a very clear indication that all are distinguished into Societies; and that all things are consequently in the forms of the Societies.

1680^e. There are many who can speak well [of others] from a habit contracted in the world; but it is instantly perceived whether the mind accords . . .

1707³. Unless there were this influx (of truths from the Lord) man could not think, and so could not speak.

1745². When in a state of temptations, [the Lord] spoke with Jehovah as with another; but in so far as His Human essence was united to His Divine essence, He spoke with Jehovah as with Himself. . . An Angel (also) sometimes speaks, not from himself, but from the Lord; and he then knows not but that he is the Lord . . .

1757. The speech of Spirits with man is effected by means of words; but the speech of Spirits among themselves, by means of ideas . . . not obscure ones like those of man, but distinct ones, like those of speech. . . After death, the ideas of thought become discrete, so as to serve for distinct forms of speech . . .

1758. The speech of Spirits is diverse: each Society or family of Spirits can be distinguished from others by the speech; nay, every Spirit can; much as it is with men; not only by the affections which make the life of the speech . . . and by the accents; but also by the tones, and by other marks not so easily described.

1759. The speech of celestial Spirits cannot easily inflow into the words with man; for it cannot be fitted to a word in which there is anything which sounds harshly, or in which there is a doubling of the harder consonants, or in which there is an idea from memory knowledge—scientifico; on which account they rarely inflow into the speech otherwise than by affections, which soften the words like a flowing stream or aura.

— . The speech of Spirits who are intermediate between the celestial and spiritual is sweet, flowing like the gentlest atmosphere, soothing the recipient organs, and softening the words themselves: it is also rapid and sure. The flowingness and pleasantness of the speech is from the celestial good in their ideas . . . and there is nothing dissentient between the speech and the thought. All the sweet harmoniousness in the other life is from goodness and charity.

—^e. The speech of the spiritual is also flowing; but is not so soft and gentle. It is especially these who speak.

1760. There is a flowing speech of evil Genii also, but solely to the hearing outwardly; inwardly it is strident, because from the simulation of good . . . There is also a speech of such Genii devoid of the flowing quality, in which the dissent of the thoughts is perceived as a silent creeping.

1761. These Spirits . . . inflow not only with speech, but also with the reply. Ex. (See SPIRIT.)

1762. There are Spirits who do not speak; but who have expressed their sentiments by changes induced on my face. Des.

1763. There has also been heard a simultaneous speech of many Spirits, undulating like a roll, and inflowing into the brain with a varied determination.

— Also a speech of certain Spirits which is terminated in a fourfold manner, as if to the tone and sound of threshing . . .

— There have been heard those who spoke with a sonorous voice, but as it were inwardly in themselves; but still it came to the hearing as speech.

—². Others spoke by a belching forth of the words as from the belly; they are such as wish to give no attention to the sense of a Thing; but are forced to speak by others. 4656, Ex.

— I have heard some who spoke with a raucous or cracked sound . . .

— And also those who could not speak sonorously; but as if they had a cold: they are from those who elicit the secrets of others with an injurious end . . .

—³. There are little Spirits, who, although few, speak like a vast multitude, as it were thundering . . .

—^e. But these species of speech are comparatively rare. These, wonderful to say, are heard as loudly and sonorously by one who has the internal organs of hearing open . . . as are the sounds and speeches of men on Earth; but not one whit by those in whom they are not opened.

1764. Once Spirits spoke with me by means of mere visual representatives: flames of various colours, lights, clouds rising and falling, etc.

1822. Perception is nothing but a certain internal speech . . . All internal dictate, and also conscience, is nothing else.

1876. The speech of Spirits among themselves is not one of words, but of ideas, such as are those of human thought without the words; and therefore it is the universal of all languages. But when they are speak- ing with a man, their speech falls into the words of the man's language . . . When Spirits are speaking together—colloquuntur—among themselves, they cannot utter a single word of human language . . . Some have retired, and tried; but on returning they said that as those words are grossly material they are below their sphere . . .

1953. The ear cannot know, still less perceive, the speech which it takes in; it is the interior hearing which . . . apprehends, and the interior sight or view which perceives; thence, through the hearing, there is apperception of the sense of the speech.

1970^e. All confirmed by living speech, exactly as by human speech.

1972. The sight of my spirit has rarely been opened to me so far (as the Second and Third Heavens); but it has been given me to know what they were speaking by a certain perception . . . and frequently through intermediate Spirits. (See 3346, and 3886, below.)

1980. (Dreams excited by what angelic Spirits were speaking about among themselves.) 1981.

2129². The speech of the Spirits penetrated distinctly through these sounds.

2271. 'He added to speak unto Him' (Gen. xviii. 29) = thought; for to speak, or speaking—loquutio—is nothing but that which flows from thought . . . Thus to think is signified by to speak.

2287. 'To speak' = to think; but here, to perceive, because predicated of Jehovah.

2294. Spirits lead the infants to think and speak . . . H. 343.

—^e. (This is) to train them . . . not to think and speak from others.

2301. Infants of celestial genius think, speak, and act more softly . . . but those of spiritual genius, not so softly; but (with) something vibratile as of wings.

2303. Angelic Spirits . . . spoke with me in angelic speech, not distinguished into words.

2304^e. He spoke with his brother who had died adult . . .

2470. When Angels and Spirits are speaking with a man, their ideas—by which they speak among themselves—inflow into the words of the man's language, and so conjoin themselves with them that they know not but that they are speaking the vernacular proper to the man . . .

2476. From the interior memory one can speak . . . (there) with all in the universe.

2477. For Spirits speak among themselves about such things in a manner far surpassing what man can believe, or even conceive; but each according to his own affection.

[A.] 2588⁷. Speeches which are heard refer themselves to a certain interior sight, into which they are transmuted.

2603². When (these Gentiles) were in their state of affliction, their speech was attended with a sort of collision, and thus was distinct from that of others. But when . . . they were taken up to the paradises, they no longer had such speech, but one almost angelic.

2619. 'To speak' = to think. (See SAY, here.) 2929.

2626. 'As God had spoken' (Gen. xxi. 2) = as He willed; for 'to speak' = to think; and for the Divine to think is to will.

2733. The speech of Spirits is illustrated by representatives, which fully express the sense, and many things in a moment.

2745. (Such wives) begin by speaking much.

2751. They supposed I was a Spirit, because I spoke with the speech of Spirits.

2799¹. When anyone there speaks what he knows to be false, there at once come down over his head as it were little swords, and terrify. D. 4309.

2896². All things (to the Most Ancients) were representative . . . and from them they thought of celestial and spiritual things: in this way . . . they were able to speak with the Angels . . .

2951. 'To speak' = to think, and also to will; thus to inflow. 2965.

3037. 'To speak' = to perceive; and also to will.

—². When it is said of Jehovah that He 'speaks,' in the internal sense it means that He wills; for whatever Jehovah speaks, He wills.

3076. 'To speak' = to will. 3510.

3151. 'To speak words' (Gen. xxiv. 33) = to instruct. 3152.

3167². Only what could enter through chinks, and give the faculty of thinking and speaking.

3213. From these representations upright Spirits are able to know what the Angels are speaking among themselves. . . Angelic ideas and speech cannot be presented before Spirits in any other way . . .

3336². From this is man's thought; and, from thought, his speech.

3342. All the speech of Spirits and Angels is effected also by means of representatives. Ex.

—². All the speech perceived by the ear, when it ascends towards the interiors, passes into ideas not unlike those of visual things, and from these into intellectual ones; and thus there is effected a perception of the meaning of the words. (This shows) that man has such speech after the separation of the body; because he is in the same while he lives [here] . . .

3343. The speech of the Angels of the interior

Heaven is still more beautifully and pleasantly representative; but the ideas . . . are not expressible in words . . . Spiritual things are expressed by modifications of heavenly light . . . and celestial things, by variations of heavenly flame . . . Man comes into this interior speech after the separation of the body, provided he is in spiritual good . . . for he has this speech interiorly in himself, although unaware of it.

3344. The speech of the Angels of the Third Heaven is also representative, but is such as cannot be apprehended by any idea . . . This idea also is inwardly in a man who is in celestial love . . . and, after the separation of the body, he comes into it, as if born into it . . .

—². In a word, by representatives adjoined to ideas, speech becomes as it were alive; least of all with man, because he is in the speech of words; but more so with the Angels of the First Heaven; still more so with those of the Second; and most of all with those of the Third . . .

3346. For many years it has been granted me to speak with Spirits and Angels almost continually; with the Angels of the First Heaven in their own speech; sometimes with those of the Second Heaven in theirs; but the speech of the Angels of the Third Heaven has appeared to me only as a radiation of light, in which there was a perception from the flame of good which was in it.

3347. The Angels compared (human) thought and the derivative speech to the external form of man (and the various degrees of internal speech to the innumerable forms which are within it, in successive order).

3393². (Thus) man's speech and gesture are only images of the things which come forth within man . . . so that the speech and gesture are the thought and will in form.

3419². Those of the Ancients who understood representatives . . . were 'the wise;' for thereby they could speak with Spirits and Angels; for the angelic speech, which, being celestial and spiritual, is incomprehensible to man, when it descends to man . . . falls into representatives and significatives such as are in the Word.

3482. The speech in the Word . . . is the angelic speech itself, but ultimate; for angelic speech which is spiritual, when it falls into human words, cannot fall into any other speech than such as that . . . The Ancients had no other speech, because they had communication with Spirits and Angels . . .

3489². For in the other life they think and speak according to their internals alone . . .

3573¹. For it is believed to be of civil prudence to speak, etc. differently from the thought and intention . . . which, with the Most Ancients, was an enormous crime.

3610². There is nothing of the Divine in their life except that they can think and speak.

3632². (Thus) the speech which flows from the thought . . . is not such as is in the thought.

3679². A sensuous man supposes that the mouth and tongue speak from themselves . . . when yet it is the thought which speaks through the organs; for the speech is nothing else than the thought speaking.

—⁵. Hence the speech (of Spirits and Angels) is not from the forms of words, as with man, but from the forms of Things.

3727. Man's thought, speech, and action, which are ultimates of order, are nothing else than truths from good . . .

3741². (Thus) thought inflows into the organic forms of the tongue, and produces speech.

3792. 'To speak,' in the historicals of the Word, = to think. 5000. 5227. 5259. 5272. 5423. 5446. 7222.

3857⁶. The Lord spoke according to their concept.

3862. (Thus angelic) speeches, being thence, are variegations or modifications of heavenly light in which is heavenly heat, and therefore they are ineffable, and of such variety and fulness as to be incomprehensible.

3869². For the interiors of a Thing are sometimes within the words of man's speech (as in the word hearken), because it is the spirit of man which . . . perceives the meaning of the words of speech; and his spirit is in a certain communion with Spirits and Angels, who are in the beginnings of words.

3886. The speech—sermo—of the celestial Angels is not heard by the spiritual Angels, but is perceived under the form of a beating of the heart, and this for the reason that the speech of the (former) is not intelligible to the (latter); for it is effected by means of affections, but that of the spiritual, by means of intellectual ideas.

4044. How the thought can act into the organs of speech . . .

4046². When I asked who they were, they did not want to speak. . . They do not speak willingly. At last they were compelled to speak. (They were Spirits of the dura mater.) From speech with them it was given me to know their quality. 4047. D.1691.

4048. Interior Angels spoke through him.

4051². (In that Society) all speak unlike, but think alike. 5189. D.3822.

4104². When a regenerated man dies, he comes into like thought, and can think and speak with the Angels, and this without instruction, which would be impossible unless he had had such interior thought here.

4126. 'To speak from good even to evil' (Gen. xxxi. 24) = to speak good and think evil.

4180^e. For human speech is not adequate to express these things.

4197². 'To speak with the language of Canaan' = to apply one's self to the Divine.

4264². When the speech of Angels has fallen into the World of Spirits, it has fallen into various numbers. 6175.

4292¹. The speaking—loquutio—of man represents his thought; and his action, his will; the speaking and action are externals, and the thought and will are internals, of man.

4327. With the evil . . . there is no longer any involuntary sense which manifests itself in the speech, etc.; but there is a Voluntary which counterfeits the Involuntary . . .

—². At this day (these) are the most wicked of all . . . they are very numerous . . . they speak sweetly as if endowed with charity . . .

4387^e. Correspondences are circumstanced almost as when anyone is speaking in a foreign language, and the other instantly understands his meaning . . . So is it with the internal sense . . . which coincides completely with the universal language, in which are the Angels, or with the spiritual speech of their thought. Their speech is spiritual, because their thought is from the light of Heaven.

4406. (Correspondences in man's ordinary speech.)

4442. 'To speak with him' (Gen. xxxiv. 6) = to consult.

4478. 'To speak' = to will; also to inflow; here (ver. 20) to persuade.

4495². When I have spoken with Angels, I have seen numbers as it were written before the eyes . . . and have perceived that the very Things of which they have spoken fall into such numbers.

4528². These paradisiacal things . . . are representatives which descend from a higher Heaven, when the Angels (there) are speaking among themselves intellectually about truths of faith. The speech of the Angels there is effected by means of spiritual and celestial ideas, which to them are forms of words, and continually by means of series of such representations of inexpressible beauty . . .

4652. The thought of a man while speaking is nothing but the speech of his spirit; and the apprehension of the speech is nothing but the hearing of his spirit. While man is speaking, thought does not appear to him as speech, because it conjoins itself with the speech of the body, and is in it . . .

—². That it is the spirit which speaks and hears, has been very evident to me from colloquies with Spirits: when their speech was being communicated to my spirit it fell into my interior speech, and thence into the corresponding organs, and there ceased in an endeavour . . . Hence their speech has been heard by me as sonorously as the speech of man. . . Hence it is evident how Spirits spoke with the prophets . . .

[A.] 4657^e. Whispered speech is heard there louder than open speech. D.1149.

4658. They were logicians and metaphysicians . . . who had not perfected their Rational thereby: their speech was slow, and sounded mutely.

—³. I told him that a little boy speaks more philosophically, analytically, and logically in half an hour, than he could describe in volumes; for the reason that all things of human thought and the derivative speech are analytic, the laws of which are from the Spiritual World.

4677¹⁰. Each and all things which the Lord spoke were representative of Divine things, consequently of the celestial and spiritual things of His Kingdom, and thus were adapted to the apprehension of men at the same time as to the understanding of Spirits and Angels; and therefore the things which the Lord spoke infilled and do infil the universal Heaven.

4799. Spirits from another orb . . . said that they had spoken among themselves by means of variations of the face, chiefly by means of variations around the lips; and that they had expressed affections by means of the parts around the eyes . . .

— . That speech in general can be expressed by means of the lips, appears evident to me from the manifold series of muscular fibres folded together which are in the lips . . .

—². Such speech prevails there because they cannot dissemble . . .

4803. They who correspond to the mouth want to be continually speaking; for in speaking they find the highest pleasure. While they are being perfected, they are reduced to this: that they speak nothing else than what is advantageous to their companions, to the community, to Heaven, and to the Lord. The delight of speaking in this way is increased with them in proportion as the desire of regarding themselves in their speech perishes . . . D.669.

4807. The Lord spoke by means of representatives and significatives . . . For to speak by means of these is to speak before the world and Heaven at the same time . . . Such speech is Divine, because it is universal, and hence is proper for the Word.

5006¹. I have spoken with almost all I had known . . .

5056. He spoke in a cracked way.

5121. All revelation is either from speech with Angels through whom the Lord speaks, or from perception.

—². Very many have had revelations from speech without perception, even those not in good.

5128². See ACTION. —⁴.

5182. See SOCIETY.

5187². They are forced to speak faster than they can think. Ex. The slow are thus inaugurated into thinking and speaking more quickly. D.1014. 1015. 1030. 1124a.

5125^e. Hence angelic speech is unlimited and relatively universal. 5253², Ex. 5287.

5228. Perception is . . . the speech or thought of the Angels who are with the man; when this speech or thought inflows, it becomes a perception that it is so, or is not so . . .

5249². Many may wonder what the Angels speak about among themselves . . . Such things as are in the internal sense of the Word. Enum.

5302. Man is not man because he can speak, etc.

5337². Thought may be said to proceed when it becomes speech. . . Thought puts on a different form when it becomes speech, but still it is the thought which so proceeds; for the words and sounds which are put on are mere additions . . .

5378. (The renal) Spirits . . . were silent; yet afterwards they spoke; not as a number, but all as one.

5380. They speak in a hoarse voice, as if cracked.

5383. (They explore other Spirits) by leading them to speak, which is done there by means of an influx . . . If the train of the induced speech is easy, they judge that they are such . . .

5432². When they speak these things they do not speak them from their interior man . . .

5434². (Unless all things are abstracted from the idea of persons) the thought and derivative speech cannot be universal, and comprehend many things simultaneously, as with the Angels.

5464. When speaking with others they see these things; but when speaking with themselves, thus with their interior man . . . they see the contrary.

5481. 'Returned and spake to them' (Gen.xlii.24)= influx.

5492^e. (Thus) angelic thought and speech are spiritual; and human thought and speech are natural.

5557. There are Spirits through whom others speak, and who scarcely understand what they are saying; yet they speak much. Those become such who (here) have only babbled, and have thought nothing about what they were saying, and have loved to speak about all things. There are troops of them. Some of these female Spirits relate to the membranes . . . some to the cuticles . . . for they are only passive forces. D.1721-1726.

5561. Other Spirits speak through those (who relate to the bones), and they themselves know but little what they are saying; but still they speak, placing delight in this alone. Into such a state are reduced those who have led an evil life, and yet have had some remains of good stored up in them . . .

5568. These (infernals) gnash the teeth when they speak.

5578. The (Hebrew) text was continuous, in imitation of heavenly speech.

5653. 'To speak to him' (Gen. xliii. 19) = consultation from doctrinals.

5718. (Spirits who want to dominate) spoke with me from above . . . Their speech was like a flowing stream, because they had excelled in fluency.

5721². Such speak there as in the world, with authority and gravity, and as if from what is just . . .

—⁴. When this appearance of what is just is taken away from them, they speak with another tone.

5752. 'To speak' = influx. 5754. 5797. 5970. 6447. 6511. 6984. 7003. 8128. 8824. 9817. 10691.

5862. The things which are determined from the thoughts into speech flow ordinately by general influx, according to the correspondences with the Grand Man . . . and therefore the Spirits who are with man have nothing in common with them, and thus do not speak through the man's tongue, etc., for this would be obsession. 6192. 6211.

5977². Genii place delight in being silent ; but Spirits in speaking.

6000. Revelations take place (also) by means of speech within man, or by speech outside of him from Angels seen, or by speech outside him from Angels not seen.

6040². For spiritual speech is such ; for so the ideas of thought are abstracted from persons, and are determined to Things . . . 6653. 6804².

6078. If food is taken between speaking and hearing, the vessels which receive the chyle are opened . . . 8352³.

6202. These Spirits speak among themselves about such things as are adverse to the man, (causing) him to feel troubled, sad, anxious . . . D.4597. 4644. 4645. 5570. 5778. 5942.

6212. With some (of the prophets there was an influx from the World of Spirits) into the speech itself . . . and then they did not speak from themselves . . . but from the Spirits who occupied their bodies. —⁴, Des. —⁵.

—^e. There were other influxes with the prophets . . . the Spirits merely speaking to them ; for the most part inwardly in them . . .

6319. Thus when man speaks of bread, etc., the thought of the Angels is about goods . . .

— . I once dreamed a common dream, (which) coincided with what the Angels had spoken about among themselves.

6486. I heard Angels speaking among themselves about the Providence of the Lord. The things they spoke I understood, but can describe but few of them, because their speech was continually joined to heavenly representatives . . .

6495². To prevent (such a man) from speaking as he thinks, he is kept in bonds . . .

6513. 'Speak, I pray' (Gen. i. 4) = solicitation.

6566. 'To speak' = influx and thence reception.

6578. 'To speak upon the heart' (ver. 21) = . . . influx into the will, and thus trust.

6598. Such speak much from the memory, and thus appear to others as wise.

6609. The thoughts and speeches of the Societies within which was my thought have sometimes been represented to me by clouds . . .

6617. Angels perceive the life with a Spirit or man the moment they hear him speaking.

6618². An Angel spoke with them by means of changes of state ; but they could not understand the things which he spoke . . .

6695. I have spoken not only with the inhabitants of other Earths, but also with the Spirits and Angels from them . . . To everyone who longs for it, it is conceded to speak with them.

6810. Many of the inhabitants of Mercury speak with Spirits . . .

6814. The speech of words, being material, the Spirits of Mercury are averse to ; and therefore I could speak with them only by means of a species of active thought. D.1455.

6923. The Spirits of Mercury spoke with me, but through intermediate Spirits ; for their speech is as quick as thought, and does not fall into human speech except through intermediate Spirits. They spoke in a volume, and yet so readily and quickly. Their speech, being that of many together, was apperceived as an undulation ; and, what is remarkable, it fell towards my left eye, although they were to the right. Ex.

6943. Naked spiritual things cannot be expressed in the words of human speech.

6982. 'I am not a man of words' = that (truth Divine) has not speech. . . For, in order to be heard, what is Divine must become human (by) passing through the Heavens, and (then) it is presented in a human form, and becomes speech, which speech is uttered by means of Spirits, who, in that state, are called the Holy Spirit . . .

6985. 'For I am heavy in mouth, and heavy in tongue' = that the voice and speech from the Divine is neither heard nor perceived. . . 'Tongue' = speech, because it is the organ of speech. . . To be heard, is predicated of the voice ; and to be perceived, of the speech.

6987. The mouth, with the lips, corresponds to interior speech, which is of thought. . . Man has active thought while he is speaking; it may be called thought speaking; whereas the thought is passive which man has when not speaking. . . and it is the active or speaking thought which is signified by the mouth. . . Moreover this thought speaks in its own way, and by the activity of this speech it excites the corresponding organs of the body.

—³. Moreover, the Angels in Heaven speak differently from Spirits: the former have a speech from intellectual ideas. . . whereas Spirits have a speech from the ideas of imagination. . . Hence in one idea of the thought of the Angels there are very many things which Spirits cannot utter—eloqui—by many series of their own ideas, besides many things which they cannot express at all.

—^e. But, when a Spirit becomes an Angel, he is in angelic speech; just as a man, when he becomes a Spirit, is in the speech of Spirits, from a like cause.

6996². Even if man heard his attendant Spirits speaking with each other, he could not perceive [the meaning]; for the speech of Spirits is devoid of human words, being the universal of all languages. What is more, Spirits cannot hear Angels [speaking among themselves]; and if they heard them they could not perceive [the meaning]; for the angelic speech is still more universal. Nay, the Angels of the Inmost Heaven can be still less heard and perceived, because their speech is not a speech of ideas, but is one of affections of celestial love. Now as these speeches are so remote from man that they cannot possibly be heard or perceived by him, what must the Divine speech be, which is infinitely above the speeches in the Heavens! It is called Divine speech, but the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord's Divine Human is meant. It is therefore evident that, in order to be heard and perceived, this must pass to man through mediations, the last of which is through a Spirit who is with the man, who either inflows into his thought, or speaks by an audible voice.

—³. For the things which man speaks are presented quite differently with Spirits; and the things which Spirits speak, quite differently with Angels. . .

6999. 'I know that speaking he will speak' (Ex. iv. 14) = preaching; for 'to speak,' when said of doctrine, here represented by Aaron, = preaching, for this belongs to doctrine.

7008. 'To speak' = confession and preaching.

7063. 'Aaron spoke all the words which Jehovah spoke to Moses' (ver. 30) = the derivative doctrine from the Divine; for 'to speak,' when predicated of doctrine. . . = utterance and preaching.

7072. The very speech of Spirits and Angels is full of representations.

7077. The angelic Spirit spoke (with the Spirits of Mercury), by means of angelic ideas, much more readily than they. . . Afterwards, I saw another Angel speaking with them. . . and afterwards he spoke with them by means of changes of state, which they said they did not understand. . .

7089². The Word in the internal sense is still more profound; for most things which are thought and said in the Heavens do not fall into the words of human speech. . . Yet, as material things correspond to them, they can be set forth by means of material things, thus in natural speech, but not in spiritual speech, for spiritual speech is not one of material words, but of spiritual words, which are ideas modified into words, in the spiritual aura, and represented by variegations of heavenly light.

7215. 'Moses spoke thus. . .' (Ex. vi. 9) = exhortation by the law Divine; (for) 'to speak' = exhortation, because he spoke to them that which had been commanded him by Jehovah.

7220. 'Speak to Pharaoh. . .' (ver. 11) = admonition to those who infest; (for) 'to speak,' when from Divine command, = admonition. 7228. 7243.

7222. 'Moses spake with Jehovah' (ver. 12) = the law from the Divine and the derivative thought; (for) 'to speak' = thought.

7226. 'Jehovah spoke to Moses and to Aaron' (ver. 13) = instruction anew from the law Divine, and at the same time from doctrine; (for) 'to speak' = instruction anew. 7241.

7240. 'Jehovah spoke to Moses. . .' (ver. 28) = command. 7286.

7243^e. 'All that I speak to thee' (ver. 29) = the things which inflow from the Divine.

7270. 'Thou shalt speak all I command thee, and Aaron shall speak to Pharaoh' (Ex. vii. 2) = the reception of the Divine influx, and communication. Ex.

7357. Those in Hell. . . can speak nothing but things false; and therefore when any such Spirit speaks, as happens when they appear in the World of Spirits, it is at once known that it is false. III.

—^e. For everyone speaks according to the affection of his love; and no one can speak contrary to it except from simulation . . . as the evil are wont to do when they speak truths. But these truths, which are spoken in this way, are falsities with them. On the other hand, those in truth from good cannot help speaking truths.

7359. Spirits (from Mars) applied themselves to my left temple, and there breathed their speech on me; but I did not understand it . . . It was like a very soft aura. . . When it entered through the mouth . . . and through the Eustachian tube into the brain . . . I understood their speech . . . I observed that while they were speaking with me my lips were moved, and also the tongue a little, which was on account of the correspondence of interior speech with exterior speech. Exterior speech is that of articulated sound, which falls upon the external membrane of the ear, and, by means of little organs, membranes, and fibres within the ear, is conveyed into the brain. D.1541.

7360. (Thus) the speech of the inhabitants of Mars is different from the speech of the inhabitants of our Earth, namely, in that it is not sonorous, but almost silent, insinuating itself into the interior hearing and sight by a shorter way; and, being such, it is more full and perfect, fuller of ideas of thought, and thus approaches nearer to the speech of Spirits and Angels. Moreover, the affection itself of their speech is represented in their faces, and its thought in their eyes . . .

7361. Such also was the speech of the Most Ancients on this Earth . . .

7381^e. Hence it is that the things which the Angels speak among themselves are incomprehensible to man, and are also ineffable.

7390. In the other life, it is from a law of order that he is presented present with whom anyone wants to speak . . .

7498. 'To speak' = communication.

7618, 7619. 'As Jehovah spoke by the hand of Moses' (Ex.ix.35)=according to the prediction by the medium of the law from the Divine. . . 'To speak by the hand' of anyone=mediately. Ill.

7740. 'Thou hast rightly spoken' (Ex.x.29)=that so it is.

7746. Nevertheless, angelic Spirits perceive everything which (these Spirits of Mars) are speaking, because no thought can be withdrawn from them . . . D.3884.

7802. It is common in (Jupiter) for Spirits to speak with the inhabitants . . .

—². To speak with Spirits and Angels, was also common on this Earth . . .

7809. (In Jupiter) Spirits speak with man; but not man with Spirits, except only these words . . .

7830. 'Speak to all the assembly . . .' (Ex.xii.3)=influx, with information.

7933. 'As Jehovah hath spoken' (Ex.xii.25)=according to the promise in the Word.

7959. 'As ye spake' (ver.31)=according to their will. 7961.

8021. The speech (of one of the chastising Spirits of Jupiter) was harsh-stridens, the words being very little discrete from one another . . . (Compare 8027.) D.1648, Ex.

8024. They afterwards spoke still more continuously and fully, and now the face could not concur with an accordant motion; but I felt an influx into the brain, and that it was acted upon in a similar way. D.1651.

[A.] 8025. Lastly, they spoke so that the discourse fell solely into the interior understanding. Its volubility was like that of a thin ether. I perceived the influx itself, but not distinctly its particulars. They said that there are men on that Earth with whom they speak in this speech; and that they are those who are carried into Heaven immediately after death. D.1652.

8026. These kinds of speech are circumstanced like fluids; the first kind like flowing water; the second like a thinner water; the fourth like the atmosphere; and the fourth like a thin aura. D.1653.

8031. The Spirits of our Earth speak many things, and think little . . .

8128^e. Thought from perception is internal speech, to which external speech corresponds; and therefore, in the internal sense, the former is meant by the latter.

8167. 'To speak'=influx and consequent reception, thus also thought.

8180. 'To speak'=influx and consequent perception.

8248. The inhabitants of Jupiter use also the speech of words, but not so sonorous as with us. The one kind of speech assists the other; and life is insinuated into the speech of words by means of the speech of the face.

—^e. It is evident that the Most Ancients could not have the speech of words, because the words of language were not infused immediately, but were invented and applied to Things, which could not be done except in course of time.

—². It is not allowable there to speak one thing and think another. S383^e. H.498. P.231⁴.

8261³. Hence angelic speech is harmonic, falling into numbers.

8383^e. The Spirits of Jupiter were astounded . . . that it is possible for men to speak one thing and think another, which with them is impossible.

8441. 'To speak' (Ex.xvi.10)=instruction through influx. 8444. 8446. 8493.

8443³. The angelic speech of the higher Heavens appears to those below as light, and also as the resplendence from light; whereas the speech of the Angels of the lower Heaven appears as a bright cloud, in various forms . . .

8632. Their Angels do not even speak harshly.

8734. The speech of Spirits in general is formed from the ideas which are of thought, which fall into words according to their fulness and affection; and, as the entire idea of a Thing is thus presented and communicated, Spirits can set forth more within a minute than man can within an hour; for every idea of the Thing, such as it is in the thought, is fully transmitted into the thought of the other.

8772. 'To speak,' when from the Divine, =influx. 8777.

8782. 'The speech (of Jehovah)'=Divine truth.

8834^e. Angels speak so; for they attribute thought to truth from good, abstractedly from person . . . (Thus) angelic speech is the speech of wisdom.

8870². They who speak otherwise than they think . . .

8885⁴. For they learn from infancy to speak differently from what they think . . .

8920. 'To speak'=influx and communication, hence also reception.

—³. (Refs. to passages on angelic speech.)

8931. 'I have spoken with you from Heaven' (Ex. xx.22)=all things of the Word through influx from the Divine through Heaven . . . For that which Jehovah speaks is Divine truth, thus is the Word which is in the Church; and that which He speaks passes through Heaven. Ex.

8948. Granted to speak with the Spirits of Saturn.

8949. When the inhabitants of Saturn come of age, they speak with Spirits . . .

8985. Abstract speech is angelic speech. Ex.

9013⁷. In the other life the evil are allowed to speak what is evil and also false; but not what is good and true; since all there are compelled to speak from the heart . . . Those who do otherwise are . . . hidden away in the Hells.

9049⁷. The Lord, when in the world, spoke—as everywhere in the Old Testament—at the same time for the Angels in Heaven and for men in the world; for His speech was in itself Divine and heavenly, because from the Divine, and through Heaven; but the things which He spoke were presented by such things in the world as corresponded.

9086². For whatever the Lord spoke, He spoke from the Divine; and, when [speech] is from the Divine, there is an internal sense in every particular. 9166^c. 9198². 9212^c.

9104. Conjunction is effected by a state of longing to speak with another.

9202. Not only thoughts, but especially affections which are of good and truth, speak in Heaven . . . and, if ardent, they cry out. D.4821.

9213^e. He who incites another to confirm his [the inciter's] truths, causes him not to think or speak from himself, but from him; and, when anyone thinks and speaks from another, the truths which are with him are disturbed, and yet he is not amended . . .

9235. The inhabitants of the moon do not speak so much from the lungs as those of other Earths, but from the abdomen, from some air there collected; because the moon is not encompassed with an atmosphere like that of other Earths. D.3242a.

9237. Spirits and Angels often speak with the inhabitants of the moon . . .

9283. The things of the mouth = those of the thought, because man's speech flows from the thought; for man has speaking thought, and thought not speaking. It is the speaking thought with which the speech makes a one; and it is the thought not speaking with which the speaking thought and the derivative speech makes a one with the sincere and just, but not with the insincere and unjust. For the thought not speaking is man's higher or interior Intellectual proceeding from his will itself; whereas the speaking thought is his exterior Intellectual formed by the interior . . .

9333². Whatever man speaks, etc. from his earliest infancy, adds itself to his life, and makes it; and it cannot be exterminated, but only removed.

9396². For at this day scarcely anyone speaks with Angels and Spirits . . . when yet . . . to speak with Spirits and Angels was common with the Ancients and Most Ancients, because they were interior men: for they thought in the spirit almost abstractedly from the body: whereas modern men are exterior, and think in the body almost abstractedly from the spirit . . .

9398. 'All things that Jehovah hath spoken we will do and hear' (Ex.xxiv.7)=the reception of the truth proceeding from the Lord's Divine Human, and obedience . . .

9407². Take human speech as an example. This, in its first origin, is the end which the man wants to manifest by the speech: this end is his love . . . and from it flows the man's thought, and at last the speech

. . . That the end is the first of speech . . . the thought the second of speech . . . and that thence follows the speech of words. Ex. Moreover, a man who attends to the speech of another, does not attend to the words of the speech, but to the sense . . . and he who is wise attends to the end . . . These three are presented in the speech of man, and to these the speech of words serves as an ultimate plane.

—¹³. Divine truth (may be supposed to be circumstanced) as is the speech which proceeds from a man; but it is not speech; but is the Divine infilling the Heavens . . .

9438. Those in Heaven can speak and have intercourse with Angels and Spirits not only from the Earths in this solar system; but also with those from the Earths outside this system . . . and also with the inhabitants themselves whose interiors have been opened, so that they can hear them speaking from Heaven. In like manner can a man while he lives in the world to whom it has been granted by the Lord to speak with Spirits and Angels; for a man is a Spirit and an Angel as to his interiors.

—². But it is granted to no one to speak with Angels and Spirits as a Spirit and Angel, unless he is such that he can be consociated with them as to faith and love; nor can he be consociated unless his faith is in the Lord, and his love is to the Lord; for (when he has been thus conjoined with Him) he is safe from the attack of evil Spirits. . . This is why there are few at this day to whom it is granted to speak with the Angels.

9457. 'Jehovah spake' = information . . . 10702. 10707.

9522. 'To speak,' when by Jehovah, =influx; thus also conjunction; for where there is influx, there is also conjunction.

9543. (In the Celestial Kingdom) they speak among themselves by means of the goods which are of love, and not by means of the truths which are of faith, as do those in the Spiritual Kingdom.

9905³. It is said, in the angelic languages, because the Angels speak among themselves from the essence itself of a Thing perceived inwardly in themselves, thus according to its quality; and the discourse thence flows forth into what is conformably sonorous, being audible solely to the Angels. Examp.

9968². They who are on high . . . can not only see those who are below, but can also speak with them.

10177⁴. Hence from the speech, etc. of the Angels, is clearly perceived their quality as to love.

10215. 'To speak,' when by Jehovah to Moses, = illustration from the Lord through the Word. 10234. 10250a. 10328.

10234. When anything new and distinct . . . is to be set forth, it is said, 'Jehovah spake unto Moses.'

10237^e. Spirits and Angels speak by spiritual ideas . . .

10280. 'To speak and say,' when by Jehovah, = instruction. Refs. 10525.

10362. 'To speak a word' (Is.lviii.13)=to think such (evil) things.

[A.] 10384°. In this Earth, where bodily and earthly things are so much loved . . . it would be dangerous to them to speak with Angels.

10409°. Their speech falls between the teeth with some hissing.

10418. 'To speak,' when by Jehovah, = perception and instruction. Refs.

10444. 'To say,' and 'to speak,' when concerning confirmation by the Divine, = foresight and providence.

10551. 'To speak with Moses' (Ex. xxxiii. 9) = to clearly perceive from within, (because) Moses was in the Tent.

10554. 'Jehovah spoke to Moses face to face' (ver. 11) = Divine things conjoined in the Word; for 'to speak face to face' = to be conjoined . . . for 'to speak' = perception, and 'face to face' = mutually.

10587. Concerning their speech in (the Fourth) Earth, they said that they join in conversation through an internal way, and not, like others, through an external one; and this by the medium of the atmosphere, and of the sight, which is done in this way: they think within themselves, and the ideas of their thought are communicated to the other by a certain inflowing—illapsus—into the interiors of the ears, through a way . . . called the Eustachian tube . . . through this canal the respiratory air inflows—illabatur—with a thin sound, and so the speaking thought is communicated. . . . When they are speaking among themselves in this way, they also move the lips, both in general and in particular, and these little motions advance towards the eyes, especially towards the left eye, and there their interior thought and its life manifest themselves. (So that their speech is effected by means of both the atmosphere and the sight.) D. 327S.

10614°. Interior things in order are in the external . . . as, with man, will is in thought, and thought in speech.

10697. 'To speak' = instruction.

10699. 'Jehovah spoke' = what was revealed.

10704. 'To go forth and speak' = communication.

10709. They said, further, that when they are speaking among themselves, they advance, for the most part, to the ninth use; and that there are some in the universe who, in speaking, advance to the fifth use; some to the seventh; to the tenth; to the fifteenth; to the twentieth; and even to the fiftieth. Ex. and Examps. Wonderful to say, when anyone speaks in this remote way, they at once know to what degree without counting it. They who are in cogitative speech, in which are the inhabitants of that Earth, and many others who in like manner speak by means of the face and lips, and by what is sonorous varied according to the ideas of thought, at once perceive of what subject it is so said; for the thought itself explicates and publishes itself more fully by such speech than by the speech of words, which is relatively material. D. 3901, further ex.

H. 2. For everyone in Heaven speaks from thought; for there is cogitative speech, or thought speaking, there.

143°. For there are many things in human speech from the Spiritual World. Examps.

168. The Angels who speak with men never speak by the natural ideas proper to the man . . . but by spiritual ideas . . . but these are turned into natural ideas when they inflow with men; neither the Angels nor the men being aware of this.

209. This is why the Angels of a lower Heaven cannot speak with those of a higher one.

234. On the speech of the Angels. Chapter.

— The Angels speak among themselves exactly as do men, (about . . . things domestic, civil, moral, and spiritual). There is no difference, except that they speak together more intelligently. (Continued under ANGEL.)

235. Angelic speech is equally distinguished into words as human speech; it is also uttered and heard equally sonorously . . .

236. Hence the Angels know the quality of another from his speech. (Continued under ANGEL.) W. 280.

238. As the speech of the Angels corresponds to their affection, and the love of Heaven is love to the Lord and towards the neighbour, it is evident how elegant and delightful must be their speech; for it affects not the ears only; but also the interiors of the mind. (Continued under ANGEL.)

239. The speech of the Angels is also full of wisdom, because it proceeds from their interior thought . . . Love and wisdom conjoin themselves in their speech, which is consequently so full of wisdom that they can express by one word things which man cannot in a thousand. (Continued under ANGEL.)

240. As the speech of the Angels proceeds immediately from their affection . . . they can express in a minute things which a man cannot in half an hour; and can also present in a few words things which have been written on many pages. 269.

241. The Angels in the Celestial Kingdom speak in like manner as do those of the Spiritual Kingdom; but the former from a more interior thought. As the celestial Angels are in the good of love to the Lord, they speak from wisdom; and as the spiritual Angels are in the good of charity towards the neighbour . . .

they speak from intelligence . . . Hence the speech of the celestial Angels is like a gentle river, soft, and as it were continuous. But the speech of the spiritual Angels is a little vibratory and discrete. Moreover, the speech of the former sounds much from the vowels U and O; and the speech of the latter from the vowels E and I . . . The speech of the former is also devoid of hard consonants, and rarely passes from one consonant to another except by the interposition of a word which begins with a vowel.

242. In angelic speech there is a certain musical harmony—concentus, which cannot be described; and which arises from the fact that the thoughts and affections from which is the speech, put themselves forth and diffuse themselves according to the form of Heaven . . .

243. A speech like that in the Spiritual World is implanted in every man; but in his interior intellectual part. But as this speech with man does not fall into words analogous to the affection as it does with the Angels, man is not aware that he is in it. Yet it is because of this that when man comes into the other life, he is in the same speech with the Spirits and Angels there, and that he knows how to speak so without anyone teaching him.

244. In Heaven all have speech, but it varies in the speech of the wise being more interior, and fuller in variations of affections and ideas of thoughts; and in the speech of the less wise being more exterior, and not attended with such an impletion. The speech of the simple is still more exterior, and consequently consists of words from which the sense is to be drawn in the same way as when men are speaking among themselves. There is also a speech by the face which ceases in what is sonorous modified by ideas; a speech in which the representatives of Heaven are mixed with ideas, and also from ideas to the sight; a speech by gestures which correspond to the affections, and which represent like things as do their words; a speech by generals of affections and by generals of thoughts; a thundering speech; and others.

245. The speech of evil and infernal Spirits is in like manner [perfectly] natural, because from affections, but from evil ones and the derivative filthy ideas. . . The speeches of Hell are opposite to the speeches of Heaven; and therefore the evil cannot endure angelic speech, nor the Angels infernal speech, which to them is like an evil odour which afflicts the nostrils. The speech of hypocrites . . . is like the speech of Angels as to the words; but as to the affections and derivative ideas is completely opposite; and therefore their speech, when its interior quality is perceived . . . is heard as a grating of teeth, and strikes horror.

246. On the speech of the Angels with man. Chapter. —. See ANGEL, here.

—². I have told the Angels that they may suppose they are speaking with me in my vernacular, because it is so apperceived; when yet it is not they who are speaking, but I, as may be evident from the fact that Angels cannot utter a single word of human language . . . (Their reply.)

—³. I have spoken with Spirits about the same thing; but they did not want to believe that the man speaks; but that they speak in him . . .

249. To speak with Spirits is rarely granted (now), because it is dangerous. (Continued under SPIRIT.)

250. To speak with Angels of Heaven is conceded only to those who are in truths from good, in the first place to those who are in the acknowledgment of the Lord and of the Divine in His Human . . .

251. The influx of the spiritual Angels with man is into . . . all that part of the head beneath which is the cerebrum . . . but that of the celestial Angels is into that part beneath which is the cerebellum . . . and all the speech of Angels with man enters through these ways into his thoughts. By this I have apperceived what Angels have spoken with me.

252. They who speak with the Angels also see the things in Heaven . . . and through them the Angels see the things on Earth. (Continued under ANGEL.)

—². As (the Most Ancients) acknowledged the Divine under a human form, thus the Lord, they spoke with the Angels as with their own [associates] . . .

253. Rarely, since those times, has anyone spoken with Angels; but some with Spirits. Ex.

254. The Lord did not speak with the prophets, as with the Ancients, by an influx into their interiors, but by Spirits who were sent to them. Ex. (See L. 52.)

255². When Angels or Spirits turn themselves to a man, they can speak with him at any distance: they have spoken with me from afar equally as sonorously as when near. But when they turn themselves away from the man, and speak among themselves, the man hears nothing of what they are speaking, even if it were close to his ear.

—³. Many of them can simultaneously speak with a man, and a man with them (by an emissary). Ex.

256. No Angel or Spirit is allowed to speak with a man from his own memory. (Fully quoted under MEMORY.)

266². The speech of the Angels is a speech of wisdom; for it flows immediately and spontaneously from their thought, and this from their affection; so that their speech is their thought from affection in an external form. Hence it is that nothing draws them away from the Divine influx . . .

269. The speech of the Angels is consonant with the affections, and every word—vox—with the ideas. (Continued under VOICE.)

292². If Spirits knew they were with man, they would speak with him . . . When they are not speaking with man, they do not know that the things they think, and also those which they speak among themselves, are from him; for they speak among themselves from man . . .

299. These Spirits love things undigested . . . and they speak there among themselves from their evil affection: the affection of their speech inflows with the man . . .

327. Their speech was like the sound of a pipe; of one tone . . .

331. Infants there speak without any practice; but at first from general affections not yet much distinguished into ideas . . .

[H.] 334. They learn to speak from their educatress; their first speech being only a sound of affection, which by degrees becomes more distinct as ideas enter; for ideas of thought from affections present all angelic speech. M.411.

355. The scientifics in the natural memory are (there) quiescent, and only the rational things thence serve for thought and speech.

438^e. As soon as any Spirit speaks to—alloquitur—them, they vanish.

489⁶. When (the sincere and open) speak in Heaven, their bright faces become somewhat obscured; but, after the speech, the same things which they have spoken appear simultaneously in their faces.

503^e. (In the second state after death, will and speech almost make one.)

504. Spirits . . . speak from their affection; for their speech is from it.

551². When let into their internals . . . they can no longer speak truths, but only falsities, because they speak from evils; for to speak truths from evils is impossible . . .

—(f). That all in Hell speak falsities from evil. Refs.

552. The quality of a Spirit is then Known from his speech, etc.

553². The speech of the infernals is as from anger, hatred, or revenge; for each one speaks from his own falsity, and utters sound from his own evil.

U. 23. Affectations of elegance of discourse and erudition hide the Things themselves . . . for the speaker—loquens—keeps the mind in them . . .

38. For everyone in the other life speaks spiritually, or by spiritual ideas, in proportion as he has believed in God; and materially, in proportion as he has not believed in Him.

S. 21. The Most Ancients . . . spoke with the Angels, and spoke with them by means of correspondences.

97³. The Lord speaks with man only in what is full; and the Word in the sense of the letter is Divine truth in fulness. Sig.

Life 15. It is because (the understanding can be elevated into the light of Heaven) that man can speak.

F. 48. With a man (whose understanding has been closed by religion) an Angel cannot speak; because the one does not understand the speech of the other.

W. 26. As . . . all things of Heaven relate to one God, the angelic speech, by a certain harmonious concord flowing from that of Heaven, ceases in a one . . . T.S², Ex.

70². (It is because the Angels have ideas derived from states instead of from space and time) that spiritual thought and thence spiritual speech differ from natural so much that they have nothing in common except in respect to the interiors of Things, all of which are spiritual. 163^e.

247. From this faculty of rationality it is that man can . . . speak.

255². As beasts cannot think analytically, and see a lower thought from a higher one, they cannot speak, but only utter sounds in accordance with the knowledge of their love.

257². Man, by his natural mind elevated to the light of Heaven, can think, nay speak, with Angels; but then the thought and speech of the Angels inflow into the natural thought and speech of the man; and not contrariwise: and therefore the Angels speak with the man in a natural language.

295. (It was found) that there was not a word of spiritual speech which was like a word of natural speech . . .

418. (Thus) no one is to be judged from wise speech . . . that is, not by wise speech separated from life, but by wise speech conjoined with life.

427². Those in spiritual (as distinguished from celestial) love, have wisdom inscribed on the memory, and therefore they speak about Divine truths.

—³. As (those in the Third Heaven) do not speak at all about the truths of wisdom . . . they appear simple; yet when they hear anyone speaking, from the sound they perceive all things of his love, and from the speech all things of his intelligence.

P. 50⁴. When I have told that I have spoken with a dead person in Asia . . .

104^e. Unless man had an external and an internal thought . . . he could not speak, but only make a sound, like a beast.

134. No one is reformed by speech with the dead. Gen.art. 134a.

135. Still, speech with Spirits is possible—datur, but rarely with Angels . . . and, when it exists—datur, they speak with the man in his vernacular, but only a few words. But those who speak by the Lord's permission never speak anything which takes away the freedom of reason, nor do they teach . . .

194². Therefore from the tone of a man when speaking is Known the affection of his love; and, from the variation of it, which is speech, his thought . . .

224³. In the Spiritual World, there is a communication of the affections, and derivatively of the thoughts, from which it is that no one can speak otherwise than as he thinks . . . Sometimes hypocrites may speak otherwise than they think, but the sound of their speech is heard as quite discordant with the interiors of their thoughts . . . (Compare 231⁴.)

227. Whatever a man speaks, etc. from the will, is appropriated to him, and remains. Ex.

231⁴. The fourth kind of profanation is by those who speak pious and holy things . . .

279⁸. The state of the lungs in speaking and singing. Ex. . . The sound corresponds to the affection, and the speech to the thought.

285. (Thus) the Lord's presence . . . is in the most singular things . . . of speech . . . Remove (rationality and freedom) from any smallest singular, and you could not . . . speak it as a man. —².

287. Everything which man . . . speaks is from influx . . . 292.

308². As all speech flows from thought, as an effect from its cause . . . it follows that all that also inflows which man speaks . . . although derivatively, or mediately.

321³. A few, who from the heart long for it, sometimes receive some answer . . . by means of silent speech in the thought, rarely by open speech. (The nature of this answer.)

R. 5. For no Angel ever speaks with man separate from Heaven; for there is such a conjunction there of each with all, that each one speaks from the communion, although the Angel is not conscious of it. For Heaven . . . is as one man, whose soul is the Lord; and therefore the Lord speaks with man through Heaven . . . 943².

294. In the natural world, man has a double speech, because a double thought, exterior and interior; for a man can speak from interior, and at the same time from exterior, thought; and he can speak from exterior thought (alone) . . . But, in the Spiritual World, a man has not double, but simple, speech; for there he speaks as he thinks; otherwise the sound of it grates on the ear . . .

—². They said that not to be able to speak except as one thinks . . . must be hard upon those who have not thought rightly about God and the Lord. (This was denied by the Protestants and Papists present; but it was found they could not speak the words, One God, Jesus, Divine Human. Des.) T.111.

462². See ENCHANT.

463⁵. The interior operations of [the act of] speech. Ex.

472³. For the speech of the Lord through the Heavens, when it falls down to lower parts, is heard as thunder; and, as He speaks through the whole of Heaven at once, thus fully, they are called 'seven thunders.'

692^e. A sensuous man speaks in a lofty tone about worldly and civil things; but he cannot speak about God and Divine things except from the memory only.

816². When Angels speak with man, they never speak with him from Heaven: the voice which is heard thence is from the Lord through Heaven. When Angels are permitted to speak with a man, they send one from their Society, who is near the man, and they speak with the man through him . . . as was the case with the one who now spoke with John.

831². To speak, or inflow, from Divine zeal. Sig.

872^e. Its being said that 'death and Hell were cast into the lake of fire,' is in accordance with angelic speech, in which the person is not named; but that which is in him, and makes him.

875². (So) speech is nothing else than a form of sound; (and) the sound corresponds to the affection, and the speech to the thought . . .

—³. The Angels spoke about these things spiritually; and spiritual speech embraces thousands of things which natural speech cannot express, and which cannot even fall into the ideas of natural thought.

943². For the Lord spoke with John through Heaven, and He spoke with the prophets through Heaven; and through Heaven He speaks with everyone with whom He does speak . . .

—³. I will explain this mystery. The Lord speaks through Heaven, but the Angels there do not speak; for they do not even know what the Lord is speaking, unless some of them are with the man, and though then the Lord is openly speaking from Heaven, as with John . . . For the Divine influx through Heaven is like that of the soul through the body . . .

M. 5. (In these various rooms they spoke about various subjects respectively. Enum.)

36. Therefore speech . . . does not flow forth from the thought, but from the love through the thought.

42⁵. When the husband spoke, he spoke at the same time from his wife; and when the wife spoke, she spoke at the same time from her husband; for such was the union of their minds, from which speech flows . . .

75⁶. The Angel said, Hear now the speech of the Angels of this Heaven: that it is a speech of wisdom; because they speak from causes.

153^e. After death, they speak openly in favour of adulteries.

153b². Then speech with God ceased.

218. (The difference between women and men as to speech.)

267. The Angels said, You are meditating on what we are speaking about.

—⁴. Those are in the phantasy of their concupiscence who . . . indulge their imagination too much, by speaking with themselves.

268². Their speech had a hissing sound.

293⁵. Of these we never speak.

444⁷. I spoke to this evil Spirit from behind him (and he heard the opposite things to what I said).

500⁶. The light of Heaven . . . opened the interiors of their minds, by which they were made to speak as they thought interiorly . . .

510³. Their speech is dry, parched, and sad.

514³. As they are mere concupiscences they do not love to speak; and if they do speak, they only mutter and murmur various things . . .

521². I strained my ear to hear what the satyrs were speaking together about; for, in the Spiritual World, speech can be heard at a distance . . .

I. 7³. Influx into speech is effected from the will through the understanding . . .

15⁵. The reason man can think and speak, is solely because his understanding is separable from his will, and is capable of being elevated into the light of Heaven; for the understanding thinks, and thought speaks. T.588².

—⁷. Hence (a beast) cannot speak.

B. 52. For, before God and the Angels, man's speech sounds from the affection of his love and faith.

T. 147. As spiritual things are seated in their minds lowest, and nearest the speech, they speak from them . . . and then know not but that they speak and teach from a belief in them . . .

[T.] 371^f. The conjunction of thought and speech (is not alternate, but mutual). Ex.

565². Sensuous men reason skilfully, because their thought is near their speech, almost in it . . . and because they place all intelligence in speech from the memory only.

593^e. From one speech they know his thought, as to whether it is infernal or heavenly . . .

289. On the harmony of the Angels, even as to the simultaneous speech of many.

481. On the speech of Spirits.

— For speech is only a series and composition of ideas, which with a man in the body falls into words such as belong to his idiom . . .

— That the apostles could speak in every speech was from Spirits. Ex. (See 205a. 972. 990.)

528. To speak by the face . . .

540. The speech in Jupiter.

624^e. Genii speak little; but think. 639.

894. On the speech of the Angels of the interior Heaven.

934. Swords and sharp points appear whenever a Soul speaks differently from what he thinks. Ex.

1031. A kind of quadrupedal speech. 1127.

1105. For some weeks, celestials with me . . . have not spoken, but only thought . . . they rarely speak . . . Now they have spoken with me . . . but inwardly, without sound. It is a speech like [common] speech without its sound; and indeed now by means of words, which is rare, a sign that in this way they begin to speak with Souls, after death . . .

1108. The speech of the celestials, when they are speaking from Heaven through Spirits is gently flowing . . .

1109. When Spirits are speaking from the celestials, it is very distinctly heard whether they are speaking from Heaven, or with anything from themselves along with it. Des.

1123. The speech of this Earth is scarcely intelligible to the Spirits of Jupiter. Ex.

— As these are celestial . . . they have an as it were imaginative speech. Ex.

1124. Spirits who are only speakers—loquentes—cannot emulate those who only think; because all their thought is in their speech, both while they are speaking, and also while they hear others speaking . . .

1124a. There are also those who both think and speak; but when the speech is dissident from the thought, the fact is clearly perceived . . . and therefore the first thing to be done is to unite them by various methods of torture.

1146. Although Angels do not manifest themselves to man by means of speech . . . I have heard them speaking . . . but through good Spirits . . . Their discourse was quick, flowing like soft water. There are indeed words, but as it were continuous. Des. When I answered, I noticed that my speech was broken . . .

1148. When Spirits afterwards spoke, in speech distinguished into words, the difference was so great that they were suffused with shame . . . When they were assisted by the Angels, so that they might speak in consort with them, there was as it were a stream which encompassed them . . .

1168. There are Spirits who can speak as volubly as celestial ones, and yet are evil. Ex.

1169a. Such are they who speak otherwise than as they think.

1315. Angels sometimes speak with those in the deepest Hell. Ex.

1342. Uninstructed Spirits suppose they speak with me with their lips. Ex.

1470. On the speech of the celestial Angels. Gen.art. 5554.

1524. The inhabitants of Saturn have almost no speech; but signify what they think and will by the face, especially by the eyes; and thus instruct the little children.

1587. That it is common and proper to man to speak with Spirits and Angels. Ex. 2541.

1647. The things I have learned . . . from speech with Spirits and Angels are from the Lord alone. Ex. (See 4034, below.)

1657. On the speech of Spirits of Jupiter with me by means of the lips and gums. Ex.

1658^e. The sound of the speech inflows through the Eustachian tube.

1659. They wanted to be called Angels because of the nature of their speech; but were shown that evil Spirits also can speak in this thin and imperceptible way . . .

1661. An Angel spoke with me through Spirits, which was done from the interior towards the exteriors . . . in order that they might know that speech, so long as it is [by] Spirits, is by a way from what is exterior; and that the speech of the Angels is by a way from what is interior . . .

1662². Souls (suppose) that they have spoken from their own memory; and, indeed they do sometimes so speak, but from the interior memory, through which are excited the things in the corporeal memory.

—^e. As (Spirits) speak from the life of their loves . . . many things can be so excited by other Spirits . . .

1770. When a Spirit fixes his attention on the walking of a horse, and speaks at the same time, he is heard exactly as if the hoofs of the walking horse were speaking . . . To whatever sound they apply their attention and direct their hearing with imagination, as to the blows of hammers, and other things, the speech is heard in like manner; not that the speech is there; but such is the fallacy that it cannot be known otherwise than that it speaks. (See Ad. 3/7535, where the speaking of Balaam's ass is explained in this way.)

1888. There are very many species of the speech of Spirits. Particular kinds of speech are as indefinite in number as are Spirits; for every one can be known by his own speech, as can men; and the individual [kinds of speech] of each Spirit are also many, because they are changed according to the spiritual states . . .

1889. (Four kinds in general of the speech of Spirits, both evil and good. Des.)

1957. On the speech of Spirits with Moses and the prophets. Ex.

2046. Thus all the affections can be Known by the Angels from the speech alone.

— The speech of the deceitful is tacit; in every sound is an image of the deceit . . .

2099. Men and Spirits are compelled to think and speak what the Lord permits; for whether I have wanted it, or not, I have had to think and speak; and in like manner Spirits, who are compelled to speak contrary to what they think; nor is it possible for them to desist; for they are associated in a Society with others, and are thus carried away as in a stream of thinking and speaking . . . When it is not given to reflect, everyone supposes, whether man, Soul, or Spirit, that he speaks from himself . . .

2100. They to whom perception is given . . . can know who within the Society, and who without it, inflow into the thoughts and speech . . . and to whatever word of the speech a number may concur; but a Spirit to whom it is not granted . . . supposes that he alone is speaking . . . and, to convince him, the nearest Spirits who concurred, and spoke through him, show themselves; and, when these latter suppose that they speak from themselves, others, more remote, must show themselves, who confessed that they have spoken through them; so that there is a kind of chain—as in the body—of many forces (which concur) to a single word . . . And the case is similar with every man. 2966. 2969. 3495 (more fully). 4041.

2137. That all languages derive their origin from the speech of Spirits. Ex.

2138. Thus the speech of Spirits is a universal speech . . .

2139. And thus the speech of Angels, which is still more universal, is as it were the mother of the speech of Spirits . . . 2142a.

2140. It follows that there is a still more universal speech, to wit, that of the more interior and the inmost Heaven, which is not intelligible to Angels of the interior Heaven, still less to Spirits, and men . . .

2141. And thus the Lord alone is Speech-sermo, and the Word.

2142. Continuation concerning the speech of Spirits.

— Spirits speak by means of the primitive ideas of words . . . Such as is our thought, apart from words, such is the speech of Spirits among themselves. Ex.

—e. But Spirits cannot observe that they speak with a spiritual speech . . .

2145. They speak also in simultaneous Society. All the speech of Spirits and Angels is in Society. Ex.

2146. While a Spirit speaks (he supposes) that he alone is speaking, yet there are others who are speaking the same things simultaneously. It may be called simultaneous speech . . .

2172. On the sweet speech of celestial Spirits. Ex.

2180b. The things which are spoken in Heaven fall into those things with men which correspond. Ex.

2210. Angels cannot speak with man except through intermediate Spirits. Ex. 2285.

2227. Angels can know the quality of others . . . from affections without speech; for they often speak by means of affections alone. Ex.

2251. I have spoken with Spirits by means of ideas alone, and they understood as well as with words. Examps. . . Sometimes [I have spoken] merely by means of subtle thoughts, and they were better perceived than if I had spoken in words. Some do not love to speak; but they are so quicksighted that they at once perceive the meaning . . .

2285. The speech of Angels is not one of words, names, and such things, which are particulars; and it is not intelligible to Spirits; because it contains only those things which the speech of words involves. Nor could Angels understand me when speaking, except through intermediate Spirits, through whom the ideas of particulars were transferred into universal ones.

2308. Spirits supposed that they speak articulately among themselves . . . but they do not speak by means of articulations of words, still less by means of sound; but by means of ideas like those which are formed by means of words . . .

2309. As they spoke with me sonorously and with words, they supposed that their speech with each other was similar; but it is not so. Ex.

2341. Sometimes I have spoken . . . without perceiving what I was saying, which is a sign that I was not speaking in the Society [I was in], but in some other Society of Spirits; for he who is in the Society perceives what is said . . .

2371. They spoke with me by means of mere euphories, and their variation; thus silently.

2382. Those afar, hear and perceive the things I speak more exquisitely than those who are near. Ex.

2419. I wondered how it happened that now this Spirit spoke, now that, at various distances, one taking up what another ended; and sometimes [doing so] in the middle of his discourse. Ex.

2607. That men and Spirits are not those who speak; but they suppose it is themselves who are speaking. Ex.

2608. They all speak my vernacular . . . and it seems to them that they know my language from themselves . . .

3631e. The mode of speaking, in the Word, is natural, not artificial . . . as if the person himself were speaking; and it is not said that he spoke thus . . .

2632. The speech of interior Spirits appears to my view like little blue and white clouds. Ex.

2697e. The speech and ideas of the Angels are the continual beginnings of the speech and ideas of interior Spirits; and, through this, of the speech and ideas of lower Spirits, or of men.

[D.] 2752. Spirits can speak from man, from his material, and from his natural, memory . . .

2758. On the speech of the Spirits of the interior sphere. 2797.

2786. The Lord speaks in Heaven with the Angels, with different ones distinctly, in person, and thus with a number simultaneously. Ex.

2797. When (the good Spirits in the interior World) spoke among themselves, I could not understand anything; but there was with me a delightful silence attended with the perception that they were speaking among themselves. . . I (then) spoke with them in silence, so that nothing from the sphere of evil Spirits came to them . . .

2799. How the speech of man is ruled by means of Spirits. Ex. . . The speech follows from the thought . . .

2868. Speaking-loquutio-among-cum-Spirits exists in various ways. There is a speech very like human speech and language with a manifest action into the tongue and organs of speech; also a cogitative speech, like thought speaking, up to this purer speech, which is of the interior thought, the thought of which I have not perceived [the meaning of] except by a kind of exhalation as it were . . . Thus there are very many intermediate kinds of speech, in many of which I have spoken.

2869. As to this exhalative speech, the Spirits who are very high above the head perceived it very distinctly, and spoke the things so thought. Moreover, they perceive that there was with me an exhalative of speech, and I observed that the Spirits were led to speak by it; thus and no otherwise could they speak . . . and when I told them that they can speak nothing else than what they are led to speak, thus not from themselves, they were indignant.

2937. The speech of Spirits is a speech of the thoughts; thus is a speech of the interiors.—In the other life, thoughts speak, thus the interior man, as my thought has spoken during the whole time for more than three years; and if a single word should be said which dissents from the thought, it is at once perceived . . . especially by the interior Spirits, who have a speech still more interior, namely, of the intentions.

2957. Spirits have spoken through me, exactly as if they were I.—It has often happened that when anyone has spoken with me, Spirits have spoken through me. (It is just as if) I perceive another man speaking through me. . . The Spirit has confessed that he spoke through me, nor did he know otherwise than that he was my body . . .

2966. Spirits do not speak from themselves. Ex.

2969. The cause why spirits suppose that they speak of themselves (when they really speak from others). Ex. 2970.

3015. On an ideal speech of sleep.—They spoke with me in a state midway between sleep and waking, by such ideas as cannot possibly be expressed . . . This speech of sleep belongs to evil Spirits of the interior World, or to interior evil Spirits in sleep, and therefore it is inexpressible, but contains nothing in it. Rep.

3046. For cogitative heavenly speech is insinuated by the Lord . . .

3050. The true speech of Spirits. Gen.art.

— The speech of words is not the speech proper to Spirits; but it is proper to men, or to the corporeal memory. But the true speech of Spirits is proper to the interior memory. . . It is thought, communicative thought. Ex. . . In a word, it is a communication of ideas, a single one of which cannot be set forth in many words . . . Such is the speech of Spirits among themselves. In a word, it is not words, but the ideas of words; for every word has an idea which is of much extension. Ex.

3051. Among themselves, Spirits do not know that there is such a speech. Ex.

— I now perceive that this speech of Spirits is in man, and that it rules the speech of words. (Why man does not know this.)

—^e. I also perceive that in company such speech of Spirits appears as if it were the faculty of speaking by words.

3052. The case is the same with angelic speech in a higher degree. Ex.

3071. Choirs are such that all speak together . . .

3072. The case is different with Subjects who speak. Ex.

3073. (When) one speaks with another, it is perceived as if he speaks into whom the thought and attention [are directed].

3096. They who relate to the saliva, speak tacitly with a certain splitting (or cracking). Ex.

3128. On speech among-cum-Spirits.—Speech among Spirits appears to them exactly like the speech of men among themselves . . . Yet there is a difference such as is that between the speech of the mouth and the speech of the thought . . . besides that speech among Spirits is fuller . . .

3130. Therefore the speech of Spirits flows into the [hearing] of man from within, and therefore no man hears it, although it appears to him and to the Spirits that it is similar, thus that men might hear it . . .

3134. Spirits speak those things which others think interiorly. Ex.

3171. He said that in evil life he had been cautious in speaking . . . and therefore ought not to have to undergo such a penalty . . . But he had been cautious for the sake of his own honour . . .

3176. When Angels speak through Spirits, the Spirits are as it were in a stream of ideas, so that few of the heavenly ideas can come to me into words and through words. It is according to the Spirits.

3332. A Spirit shown that he could not speak from himself, but only according to the object presented to him through my thought.—When I fixed my gaze on a fly, he had to speak about a fly . . . and was thus instructed that he does not speak from himself; and so, next, that he could not desist from speaking.

3356. That the thoughts and speeches of Angels and of angelic Spirits fall into parables. Ex.

3402. (This Spirit) did not want to speak . . . But when I thought and spoke, he excited all the men or Spirits whom I had Known . . .

3485. For all speech is of particulars.

3490a. (These Spirits) did not speak by the lips.

3532. As to the speech (of these common people), many were held in speaking together, and not one differently from another . . . in order that they might thus be initiated. I afterwards heard from them . . . a sonorous speech in Society, but grosser; and then also a quicker one . . .

3558. Sometimes . . . others were speaking, and what they spoke was conveyed to me, not by speech . . . in a certain general way . . .

3631. The speech of the interior Spirits could not be communicated to me without Subjects. Ex.

3633. As a Subject supposes that he speaks from himself, he supposes that those who speak through him are nothing . . . And they who speak through him . . . suppose him through whom they speak to be nothing . . .

3637. There is a speech of words to which the man who is speaking or hearing does not attend, but only to the sense of the words . . . In this speech are the lower Spirits among themselves, and they know no otherwise than that they speak by words, when yet it is by ideas . . .

—e. Therefore the speech of Spirits is universal, such as is the thought of man apart from the speech of words.

3701. Sirens, when near me, could speak as if they were elsewhere . . .

3759. There are vessels in man's memory . . . and therefore Spirits cannot speak otherwise than according to the direction of the vessels. Ex. Moreover, Spirits are vessels, and they then excite man to speak, and they are excited by interior Spirits.

3857^e. Therefore with those who speak to themselves, and think abstractedly, that is, speak in thought, Spirits know no otherwise than that (the things so thought of are actual facts). (The effects of this.)

3883. I perceived that I too could speak by such things that others could not understand, [in the same way as do some of the people of Mars], and also have so spoken with angelic Spirits . . . But this is done when the ideas are withdrawn from the forms, so that it was only sometimes that I was permitted so to speak; but afterwards not: afterwards, when I spoke, it was a speech of representatives with ideas, so that it was understood by others.

3889. I compared (this private speech of the people of Mars) to the speech of soothsayers on this Earth, who speak with their fingers, or with inverted words . . .

3976. When a Spirit speaks differently from what he thinks, it is at once perceived, and therefore he is driven to speak nothing but what he thinks; for otherwise he cannot be among any Society, but is at once cast out, and mutilated. . . If a Spirit thinks evilly, he is allowed to speak evilly . . . for thus he speaks what is true . . .

4018. The representation of angelic speech by clouds. Examps.

4034. Evil Spirits are held in speaking those things which are to be observed by me. Examp. . . Some female Spirits wanted to abstain from speaking (but could not) . . . So that even those things which I have learned through evil Spirits I have learned from the Lord alone, although the Spirits spoke. It is otherwise when good Spirits have spoken; for they have said openly how the case is.

4035a. (The mucus Spirits) spoke with me also as if in the gullet, without sound, and solely with a vibrating wind; and said that such was their speech with man inwardly.

4041. The deceitful Spirits above the head, by mere thought and its circumduction, led the Spirits above me to speak, which they supposed to be altogether from themselves . . . It was thought alone [which did it], that is, a mere direction of the vessels of the memory, which caused them to speak as of themselves. From this it was evident how Subjects are acted upon to speak, by thought alone, which follows the Subject, and he speaks it out. This was shown by others, who led the deceitful also to speak . . .

[D.] 4042. While the vessels of the memory are being directed, the Spirit who is speaking cannot speak otherwise. Ex.

4102. The Spirits around me spoke together the whole night . . . so that there was a perpetual speech, and reasoning, so that I could not help being awakened . . . and their speech inflowed through things which were represented in a dream . . .

—e. On other occasions, they seem to speak together among themselves exactly like men; for they do not reflect that it is done by ideas. With me they speak exactly as does one man with another.

4128. In my sleep, angelic Spirits spoke with me by representations such that in my sleep I plainly perceived what they signified; so that I was altogether in the same speech, which was not speech, but a vision attended with a manifest perception of the matter . . . and I answered by a like intuitive speech. But when awake I could not understand a whit . . . I wanted to remember it, but could not, because they were such things as do not fall under the sense which is expressed by means of speech. 4567a, Examp.

4146. The speeches of the Angels fall into representations such as are in the Word. Examps.

4184. On the Word of the Lord from angelic speech. —Angelic speech is such that each thing which they think and speak is alive. Ex.

4190². When anyone thinks and speaks within the sphere of generals, it is as if he did it from himself . . . But when one thinks and speaks that which does not pertain so much to a general sphere, it is not as if from himself; and, according to the differences of the removal of the sphere, it is perceived and heard as more or less remote from him . . .

4194. They who suppose themselves abler than others . . . are sent among those who constitute the cartilaginous skin of the left ear . . . and are compelled to speak from them . . . They then speak in a cartilaginous way, with an unvarying sound, and sometimes foolishly . . .

4201. What the Spirits spoke (about the Divine Providence) cannot be described; for their speech is at the same time representative . . .

4208. On the speech of angelic Spirits. Gen.art.

— The speech of angelic Spirits was perceived, but not heard or understood: it was perceived only by the sense of sight as a resplendent vibration. Ex.

4209. All the speech of the evil Spirits of the interior sphere is closed. Hence there is nothing living in it: it is a speech as of closed ideas . . .

4210. It was granted to speak with angelic Spirits, but through intermediate ones . . . but only the generals reached me. It was also granted to speak with them by generals . . . but they perceived the distinct and singular things in them.

4211. As to the speech of the Spirits in the World of Spirits, they have their ideas founded on material and corporeal things . . .

4212. The interior Spirits do not make their ideas material in this way; but they make the Things themselves material, and then they adjoin ideas to them, which is a speech of ideas so wonderful that it can scarcely be described.

4256. The speech and thought of the Angels are ineffable . . . they are from uses, which are ends . . . 4267.

4264. Man thinks and speaks . . . according to all the most secret analytical rules; and, when he is in thought, he thinks not a whit about rules . . . and therefore the unlearned can think and speak as well, and often better, than the learned . . .

4279. Evil Spirits also can speak what is good, and thus be of service. Ex.

4281. The speech (of these female Spirits of ancient times) was that of those who had very little life left; it was as if uttered through a pipe of one tone, quite like organs through which others speak . . .

4310. A certain one wondered, because a Spirit had spoken well about faith, and was then grievously punished; but he was told that in the other life no attention is paid to what anyone speaks, but to what he thinks . . . There is there a cogitative speech which is perceived, and which affects those who are present . . .

4342. On the interior memory, and the speech from it.—The language or speech of Spirits is the universal one of all languages. When they are speaking among themselves, they cannot produce the name of any man, nor a word of human language; yet when they are speaking with me, they suppose it is from themselves ; but it is from my corporeal memory, in which their ideas inflow into names and words. They tried to utter the name Abraham among themselves, but could not, for their speech is not of words, but of the ideas which have been formed in the originaries of the words. (Thus) nothing whatever of a word, and still less of the name of any man, kingdom, or region, can pass to Spirits ; but it perishes with man ; and only the sense passes, which is such that while it may be obscure to the man, with the Spirits it becomes distinct and divided up into ideas. When Spirits [are thinking or speaking] about any person, city, or the like, of which they had had an idea in the world, they merely present the idea of it—that is, they present all things which they had heard, seen, or conceived about that man, kingdom, or city—and this idea is sometimes simultaneous, and is sometimes divided up into many parts—and thus comes their speech, and also a full perception. In this way I also have often spoken with Spirits, in their speech, and have distinctly perceived all things, more things in a moment than could be uttered in an hour, because it comprehends in its bosom as much as does the internal sight and the thought . . .

4345. Spirits are not aware that they speak from the interior memory. I asked a certain Jew what his name had been, and where he came from. He cogitated, and said he did not know, and was indignant.

4365. Whom he delicated with his poisonous speech.

4382. Angelic Spirits spoke with me . . . in angelic speech, not much distinguished into words.

4405. For the speech of Spirits is such that while they express anything, they also present such things [as they are speaking of] as it were to be seen, but in ways which cannot be described. They present affections . . . by variations of lights, and so on. This speech is perceived very quickly, so that more can be expressed in a moment than by human speech in hours.

4411. The speech of Angels is very expressive and very significant, and is effected also by wonderful variations of light. Ex. . . I have sometimes spoken with them in this speech.

4567a^e. There is such a speech with man (as that of angelic Spirits) as to his interior thought, of which he is unaware ; and he comes into such speech after death ; and innumerable things can be expressed and apprehended by it which can in no way be expressed by the speech of the body.

which cannot be expressed in the speech of the Second Heaven.

4744. (Wolff) spoke slowly with a kind of heaviness. Ex.

4821. Once when I had spoken with a certain Spirit, and wanted to signify it by an affection of love, he said that he heard me speaking many things, when I had not thought, nor uttered a word, nor had had any idea. He said he had heard me speaking many things about that matter, expressed in words sonorously. Afterwards, when I put my hand to my temples to stroke them, I was told from Heaven that that also was heard there as speech according to all the affection which was in me at the time. . . The reason was that in the [Second] Heaven they think and speak by ideas made words, or by forms of ideas flowing down into words ; and because in the Third Heaven they speak by affections, in an inexpressible manner, and this sonorously. . . All the affections of a good man are heard in Heaven . . . And silent thought, when it is from what is good and true, is better heard in Heaven as sonorous speech, than thought speaking aloud.

4861. Those become Genii who in the world have spoken little, but have loved to think . . .

4865. The speech of Spirits and Angels is articulate, and of words, but still it is, so to speak, an entirely natural language. Ex. . . Such corresponding affections are felt manifestly, in the bodies of Spirits and Angels ; and, when they speak, they enunciate the words articulately according to their meaning from those affections, and thus the speech and the affections make a one.

4867. But Angels, . . . who apperceive innumerable things with themselves and with others in a single affection, and also in a single idea of a Thing, enunciate according to the likeness of the affection . . . so that all things which they feel and think are simultaneously included. This angelic speech is not perceived by Spirits, except by a certain General apperceptible in the sound. Hence it may be evident how elegant, beautiful, delicious, and delightful is the speech of the Angels ; for the affections with them, which are expressed by their speech, being from the Lord, are heavenly.

4868. But in Hell the speech is ugly, shameful, and filthy, because so do they feel the affections in themselves.

[D.] 4869. Spirits can commit their speech to paper (both written and printed) . . .

4871. Infernal speech is not intelligible to the Angels, because the affections in Hell, from which is their speech, are opposite and most filthy. Not a single one of their words can be enunciated by the Angels . . . (See D. 5559, below.)

4997. Spirits who take away from others the faculty of speaking.

—². Spiritual speech is such as is proper to the Spirits and Angels . . . in the Spiritual Kingdom: this speech is such as is the interior thought of man . . . without words of human speech, for man thinks without them . . . In the other life this thought becomes speech with him . . . hence it is that all Spirits can be consociated as to speech . . . It is sonorous, and as it were of words, but the words are what are called intellectual ideas. It is thought speaking, such as is the interior thought from hearing when it passes into visual thought. When Spirits are in this speech, they know nothing about natural speech; and, when they are in natural speech, they know nothing about spiritual speech . . . This speech can be written. I have seen papers made from this speech, and letters (of the alphabet); but I could understand nothing of them unless I was in the spirit separate from the body. The letters are similar [to ours]. This spiritual speech corresponds to the pulmonary respiration; for this speech passes out from the affections of Spirits, but from those spiritual ones which correspond to the respiration; and thus it flows spontaneously out of the Spirits, and is natural and universal . . .

—⁴. Celestial speech is that of the affections of love, and corresponds to the cardiac, as spiritual speech does to the respiratory things. But this speech is incomprehensible, and yet is the universal speech of all: it is in man, in his inmosts when these have been opened to the Lord by love. Ex. But, as said, their speech is incomprehensible as to the interior affections; but still is intelligible as to the derivative words; for the will speaks through the understanding; and what is intellectual affects the spiritual . . .

5116. I was admitted among the celestial . . . They spoke nothing, but continually acted. Des. . . They speak among themselves in this way, and also by intellectual ideas, not by such as are with the Spiritual Angels, but by such as make a one with the affection in which they are, with ineffable variety. [The meaning] is apparent from the sound in general, and from the sound of the single words, and the variation therein. 5519. 5587^e.

5519². The celestial do indeed speak among themselves, but by a cogitative speech which enters by an internal way, and thus becomes audible in a certain way.

5521. Their speech is not sonorous as with the spiritual; but is like a soft undulatory [tremor] which is audible.

5554. On the speech of the celestial Angels.—It has been granted me to understand their speech by an example. A certain woman loved her husband; but was withheld by others by means of speaking—loquelas, sometimes persuasive ones which bound only the affections of others, which is done by withholding, by insinuating other affections, and by impeding the communication, and by substituting other affections which inflowed more strongly into the exteriors . . .

5558. From this may be evident the quality of the speech of the Angels who are in celestial love, that it is most delightful and most beautiful, for they speak from their love; and also the quality of the speech of the wise Angels, that it is full of ideas of wisdom which do not fall into the ideas of Angels not so wise; and also the quality of the [speech] of the simple when not in the company of the wise.

5564. Spiritual speech is universal, from ideas; but its sound, or Articulate, flows from the affection itself which is natural to the [speaker], so that the affection expresses itself by the sound, that is, the Articulate, with them, just as every affection has natural gestures with it. Consequently, the sound of the speech, that is, their words, flow from the whole Spirit. The ideas are of the affection; and these too are in like manner formed in the Spiritual of his body.

— . But the things which Spirits speak among themselves, cannot, for the most part, be expressed in natural language or speech; for it does not fall into the words, nor into the sensuous ideas of thought which man has when in the body. In the body are generals.

5565. The like is the case with the speech of the celestials relatively to the speech of the spirituals. In the speech of the celestials there is such wisdom that it cannot be expressed in the spiritual speech, nor even an idea in it be apprehended. A certain person (it was the London Spectator) who doubted this, was sent into the company of the celestials, and he then perceived the things they were speaking; but when he returned to his own [associates], who were spiritual, he could not express anything, not even by ideas of thought. He said that the things they had spoken were most full of wisdom.

—^e. It has also been found that spiritual speech does not fall into the natural speech which is with man.

5585. On the speech of Spirits.—The speech of Spirits is natural [that is, not artificial]. It is from their interior memory, the ideas from which become words such as accord with the Things themselves, and which are the initiations of natural words. There are such ideas with man, although he is unaware of it, and he speaks from them in the other life. This, therefore, is the universal language; for everyone can speak in it with another, without previous instruction.

—². This speech is heard as sonorously as speech in the world: but solely by a Spirit, and not by a man.

—³. This speech falls into the words of human language while a Spirit is speaking with a man; just as [a man's] interior ideas fall into the speech of his words.

—⁴. When a Spirit turns himself to such a man, spiritual speech perishes; and he (knows only) the man's speech; nor is he aware that there is any other speech.

—⁵. Some [men] also speak from ideas, but now more rarely, for the quality of their good and truth is then perceived. But if anyone has genuine truths in a connected form, he can speak from ideas dexterously; and the better anyone is instructed, the better he can do it. But beware of this speech: it is interior. I have sometimes spoken with Spirits and Angels in such speech by ideas.

5586. A certain Spirit turned himself to me, and spoke in my language, and, when he had spoken to Spirits in the spiritual language, he observed the differences in that the speech of angelic Spirits is sweet . . . because their interior ideas are full of truths from good. When they are speaking together from ideas, evil Spirits do not understand their speech.

—². The speech of the evil is filthy, and good Spirits do not want to hear it.

—³. The speech of the celestials is external: for they do not speak about anything else—aliter—than those things which they see, and not those which they hear. 5587, Ex.

—⁴. These things have been written in the presence of a Spirit who had no ideas, but spoke solely from the interior memory without ideas; so that I am not able to describe them from thought . . .

5587. On the speech of the celestials and of the spirituals. Gen.art.

5588. The speech of Spirits is from the ideas of the speaking thought, which ideas, with man, are devoid of words; for when a man is speaking he thinks only the sense of the Thing he is speaking about. This speaking thought . . . when divided up into ideas, presents the speech of Spirits, and it is from the interior natural memory. For with the spiritual there are internal which are closed, and they therefore speak about truths and goods.

5589. This (interior natural) memory is pictorial—imaginativa, being formed from the visible things in the world, and when it is made active through the influx of light from Heaven, it presents that speech. Ex. . . Hence it is that the speech of Spirits is natural speech, and also universal speech . . . Into this speech every man comes of himself immediately after death; and, when he speaks then, he knows not that he has ever spoken in any other way; so that the common speech of Spirits is in every man. . . This speech is one of words, but of entirely different words, which are formed according to the nature of the Thing, and articulated by sound, so that the articulated sound is the expression of everything which belongs to the Thing; and it differs from the speech of brutes in that this is continuous, whereas that of Spirits is discrete. Ex.

5589a. (Spiritual speech) can be expressed in sound in the world, distinctly and articulately, but no one there can understand it, because it is the Spiritual of speech, and not the Natural in which man is.

— . This speech differs from the interior thought of the man, and even of the Spirit; for it is exterior . . . and therefore, in the other life, those who are rational . . . and those who speak from the memory only . . . speak similarly . . .

5589b. Preachers, too, speak so, from their doctrine, without interior ideas . . . just as in the world . . .

5589c. In a word, their speech is equally as natural as are hearing, sight, etc.

5590. The speech of Spirits with a man falls into the man's words. Ex.

5591. All can be together and speak by means of the common speech of Spirits, the celestial with the spiritual, and the spiritual with Spirits of every kind . . .

— . The thought does not shine forth otherwise than through the speech of words, just as in the world.

— . Angels cannot endure infernals when speaking . . . and infernals cannot endure Angels when speaking. Ex.

5592. There is, besides, a speech by ideas accompanied

[by words], and also [one] devoid of ideas accompanied [by words]. . . The (former) is sonorous, and exists in either (natural) or (spiritual) words. The (latter) is also twofold, both kinds being silent and devoid of words; one of these is of the thought, and the other is of the affection. When intellectual ideas of thought are presented, all things the man or Spirit knows about that Thing appear; but in the middle, and thus in the light, is the Thing which is the subject. Ex.

[D. 5592]². When a man or Spirit speaks, all things he knows about that thing are presented present in an order according to the form of Heaven in which he is if he is good . . . whence such speech extends itself widely if the man or Spirit knows much, and if the things he knows are truths from good. . . But, if they are not, the speech extends itself towards Hell, and its form is different . . .

—³. But speech from affections without intellectual ideas is still more full. Ex. . . Such speech is obscure to man, and also to the spiritual. . . It differs according to the quality of the affection as derived from truths. Ex.

5593. By that speech from ideas and from affections one Spirit cannot have converse with another unless he is in like truths and like affections from truths. Ex.

— . Such speech is very beautiful in Heaven, because it is from the whole Angel. Ex.

— . In Hell the speech is of hatred and revenge, or is the delight of adultery . . .

—^e. Few are in this speech, because there is contrariety; and also because few have thought rationally and spiritually from real truths and goods in the world.

5594. By the silent speech of ideas I have often spoken with Angels and others; and I could express even material things without words, by merely thinking about them . . . and they at once knew everything. Ex.

5595. Spiritual speech is in many words of human speech. Ex.

— . The speech of the Most Ancients was such . . .

5596. When a Spirit turns himself to another Spirit, or to a man who is speaking fully or cogitatively from ideas or affections, he is altogether in the like perception and meaning. Ex.

5630². We answered that the speaking native to man is by the speech of ideas. . . and not by the speech of terms.

5643. Spiritual speech. Examps.

—^e. Such is the speech of ideas, when genuine; and therefore the evil cannot endure it, because they have a contrary speech of ideas . . .

5770. On the speech of Spirits and Angels.—When Spirits have spoken with me, in my own vernacular, or in other languages in which I am skilled, they did not know that they speak differently among themselves, because their speech falls, with me, into my language, and is thus presented in words; when yet they themselves, with themselves, are thinking from their own speech . . . But, when they turn themselves from me, they speak among themselves in their own speech without reflecting about it, because it is natural and implanted . . .

5771. But . . . some speak more fully from ideas, and some less fully. Ex.

5772. (Although Spirits cannot enunciate any word, or name, of natural language) they can enunciate them in their own speech, which is of the Thing or thought about the person; the ideas about him, when collated together, present the word . . . It is the idea about that person which is enunciated.

5773. All their speech flows from the Thing itself, and from the affection of the Thing, and is expressed as in the world; and, as there is the like speech with all, it therefore comes from the inmost of every man, and is produced according to his idea of the Thing. But still it is the affection speaking, that is, the affection varied, formed, or divided up, which is the speech; and all affection is from the interior life.

—^e. The evil cannot speak about the Things of Heaven, and express them in words from internal affection . . .

5778³. When Spirits and Genii were speaking among themselves in their own language, I heard nothing of what they said; but only when they spoke with me . . .

5785. For the Rational is what speaks in the other life.

5787. On the speech of Spirits.—The speech of Spirits is according to the nature of the Thing, and the words and the sound in like manner; for the nature of each Thing is inscribed on man; as the nature of the ether on the eye, and so on . . . for man has been created according to the image of all things of the world, and the nature of the Thing and that of a sound according to it is consequently in some words of language in the world . . . hence it is that in the other life everyone can speak with others. Moreover, the vowels, as a, e, i, o, u, are according to the nature of the Thing, as is evident from the celestial Angels; v involves all things, and so on. The reason men do not speak in the world according to the nature of the Thing, but by various and diverse languages, is that man is not born into the nature of the Thing, but into ignorance of all things; and he learns to speak, which cannot be done according to the nature of the Thing. Ex.

—². The Angels in the Heavens speak according to the nature of the Thing in Heaven; but those who are in externals, according to the nature of the Thing in the world; and still they are understood, because there is a correspondence. But this latter speech is on that account material.

5883. Hence it was evident how innumerable are those who attend solely to the speech, and not at all to the reasons . . .

5941². When (those of the Celestial Kingdom) are by themselves, they speak little; and, when they want to say anything, they first show it. Ex.

5943. On the exterior and interior speeches of the Angels.—When I have been in Society with the Angels, and it has been given to know their kinds of speech by experience, [I have found that] there are four kinds of speech, just as there are four kinds of Angels: a material speech of visual things, and an interior speech of visual things; these are speeches of the understanding, or of the thought: there is a speech of the affections of the body, and a speech of the affections of the heart ; these speeches are of the will, or of the affection. Des.

— They who could be in the speech of affections of the body have spoken with me. Des. I, being in the Natural, did not hear the words, but I perceived the affections which they enunciated in words. This speech is not intelligible to those who are in visual things alone.

— They were told that there is also a speech of the heart, which is a speech of love to the Lord ; and [they who speak it] afterwards spoke with them, and they said that they could not hear the words, but that they perceived the things which were spoken in their affection, as I had done when the former spoke.

—². As to the former speech, it [is] indeed like the speech of visual things as to its consonant literal words, but still each letter is enunciated differently, namely, according to the affection ; and it also differs in the fact that other words are not intelligible to those who are in visual things only.

— The speech of visual things is to speak and express those things which are seen with the eyes, and to describe them, and this according to visual and intellectual ideas ; as houses, palaces, gardens, etc. This speech is both exterior and interior ; the exterior is material, or sensuous ; the interior is natural, or intellectual.

—^e. I afterwards heard Spirits speaking with Angels of the interior Heaven. They said they heard the speech with their ears, but did not perceive it, because in their words were expressed the things of interior wisdom ; and, as they did not understand these, they did not understand the words.

6063. On writings and speech in the Spiritual World.—That the speech and writing there are quite different from those in this world, may be evident from, 1. When they write there, one letter signifies an entire word, and it is a general word which embraces many things in itself . . . For example, in the word bono, the b signifies glory and majesty ; o, with ; n, the evil . . . when n signifies the good, there is a pointing above it. 2. All the vowels signify something which conjoins, as with, in, and so on. The vowel i signifies what is from the interior, and so on. 3. They speak in the same way. For example Vita vallem signifies Stand off far, Be off, and so on. (Compare J. (Post.)324.)

6084. On the speech of the Third Heaven.—Spiritual speech cannot be understood at all by anyone who is in a natural state ; but natural speech can be understood by Spirits who are in a spiritual state, but solely according to correspondences ; and in like manner conversely, but in that case spiritual speech falls into natural speech . . .

—². The spiritual cannot understand celestial speech, or that of the Angels of the Third Heaven, because their speech is the speech of the affections. When I wondered at this, an Angel thence spoke with them, and they did not understand anything, by which it was confirmed that the Angels of the Third Heaven have a higher speech.

6090. On spiritual language or speech.—That this has nothing in common with human languages, has been evident to me from the words of that language, which are not at all intelligible to any man . . . It is implanted in his spiritual man, and not in his natural man, as may be evident from these two words. They say, Vita vella, Be far away ; and Be off quick ; and also from the word Scapuleja, which signifies to cast out of doors. I have not yet learned whence come the words of that language ; they do not derive them from the sound of the affection, but from the significations of the vowels and letters ; the ideas of thought fall into such unfoldings of the lips. Their writing is discrepant from their language.

D. Min. 4557. Spirits speak among themselves by ideas. Ex. 4617, Ex. 4647, Ex.

E. 8. For that which an Angel speaks is from Heaven ; for when an Angel speaks with a man such things as are of Heaven and the Church, he does not speak as a man does to a man when bringing out of his memory the commands of another ; but that which the Angel speaks inflows with him continually, not into his memory, but immediately into his understanding, and thence into words. Thus all things which the Angels said to the prophets are Divine, and not at all from the Angels.

14². Therefore the celestial Angels do not speak about the Things of faith . . .

140⁵. The ass did not speak, but Balaam did hear the speech as if from it. (I too) have heard horses as it were speaking.

148⁵. For spiritual speech is not like human speech : there all things are expressed according to the ideas about the Things and the persons [spoken of], and these ideas fall into words.

325⁶. (Why 'much speaking-multiloquium' (Matt.vi.7) was forbidden by the Lord.)

326. Why there is a certain musical harmony in all angelic speech. Ex.

556. The Persuasive resides in the Sensuous . . . for a sensuous man is in self-confidence and faith . . . and in all things he speaks are this confidence and faith ; and, as his speech sounds from these, it fascinates and infatuates the minds of others. . . This is very manifest in the Spiritual World, where a man speaks from his spirit . . . and his spirit speaks from affection . . . J.(Post.)26.

587⁶. 'To speak,' and 'to go' (Jer.x.5)=to live . . . spiritually.

[E.] 696². The reason the Angels have a speech which is incomprehensible to man, is that their speech is from a view of the Thing and the consequent wisdom when abstracted from such things (as person, space, time, and matters), and thus is indeterminate relatively to the things of the natural world.

794. 'To speak great things' (Rev. xiii. 5) = to teach evils which destroy the goods of the Word. . . 'To speak blasphemies' (id.) = to falsify the truths of the Word.

810². I have heard the lovers of Falsities speak exactly like those who are studious speakers of truths. Ex.

817. 'He spake as a dragon' (Rev. xiii. 11) = with like affection, thought, doctrine, and preaching to those who separate faith from charity. 'To speak' = affection, thought, doctrine, and preaching. Ex.

— . Affection itself alone cannot speak, it can only make a sound, and sing; neither can thought itself alone speak except as an automaton; for affection vivifies every word of speech . . .

825³. When a man shuns evils because they are against God . . . he is taught by the Lord every day what to do, and speak . . .

828³. The reason the Angels of the Third Heaven appear simple, is that they cannot speak about the things of Heaven and the Church; for with them these things are not in the memory, whence is all speech, but in the life, and thence in the understanding not as thought, but as the affection of good in its own form, which does not descend into discourse; and if it were to descend, it would not speak, but only make a sound.

831². As spiritual love is the love of truth (the Angels of the Second Heaven) speak about the things of Heaven and the Church . . .

—³. These speak Divine truths, because they are inscribed on the memory with them; and thought from the memory speaks.

855. All in the Celestial Kingdom speak from love . . . and such speech . . . is heard (below) as thunder. . . . But all in the Spiritual Kingdom speak from thought which is of the understanding . . . and such speech . . . is heard (below) either as a voice, or as a musical harmony; or else it appears before the eyes as a bright white cloud, or as a flaming like that of lightning.

874². I have heard many there speaking so wisely that I believed they were from the interior Angels of Heaven, yet they became devils. Ex.

959^e. All (in the Spiritual World) speak from the heart . . . 985^e.

1050². Active thought . . . corresponds to speech; the speech is a correspondence . . . The action of the thought into the speech and the organs of speech is influx.

1202^e. As man can think rationally from his spiritual mind, he can also speak; for to speak is of the thought from the understanding, which can see truths in spiritual light . . .

1216. In the speech of man there are two things together: the sound, and its articulation into words. The sound is of the affection of his will; and the articulation of the sound is of the thought of his understanding. These two are conjoined in human speech . . .

J. (Post.) 268². In the north (of the London there) dwell those who are not lettered, and who are in the highest freedom of speaking, which they love.

De Verbo 3². When I have been sent among the spiritual Angels, and have spoken with them spiritually, what I have spoken I have retained in my memory; but when I returned into the natural state, and wanted to bring it forth . . . I could not . . . there were no words, nor even ideas of thought, by which I could express it . . . And, wonderful to say, while I was in that Heaven, and spoke with the Angels, I knew no other than that I was speaking in like manner as I speak with men. Yet it was afterwards found that the thoughts and speeches were so unlike that they could not be approximated, consequently that there is no ratio between them. —⁵.

—³. There is a like difference between the Spiritual and the Celestial. (Shown by some Angels of the Middle Heaven who spoke with some of the Third.)

—⁴. It has sometimes been granted me to be among Angels of the Middle and of the highest Heaven, and to hear them speaking among themselves. Ex. . . Afterwards, it was given me to understand that although I could not speak out or describe those things by any spiritual or celestial word, I could describe them in the words of natural language, even to rational apprehension; and I have been told that there are not any Divine arcana which cannot be perceived and expressed naturally, although more generally and imperfectly . . .

—⁷. As to these kinds of speech: the speech of men is like their ideas of thought; for these become words when they go forth into speech; and therefore the speech of men in every word partakes of space, time, and what is personal and material. The speech of the Angels of the middle Heaven is also like their ideas; for the words of their speech express them. And the speech of the Angels of the highest Heaven is all from the variation of affections. But while they are speaking with the spiritual Angels, they speak similarly; but not when among themselves. (Thus these) speeches differ so that they have nothing in common. They differ so that a man cannot understand any word of an Angel; nor an Angel any word of a man. I have heard the speech of the Angels, and have retained the words; and have afterwards examined to see whether any word coincides with any word of the speech or languages of men, and there has not been one. This spiritual speech is present in all; it is implanted in every man, and he comes into it as soon as he becomes a Spirit. (Continued under WRITE.) D. Wis. vii. 5³.

26. The Spiritual Angels enunciate or utter the words of their speech according to the ideas and from the ideas of the Things which they signify; as, when they enunciate horse, or chariot, they enunciate them by a word which signifies, as horse from ideas of the understanding; and chariot, from ideas of doctrine from the Word . . . so that they speak from correspondence concerning the things which they see, in like manner as men. In a word, they impose names on them from correspondence.

—². Therefore it is now disclosed to them that they have correspondences in the words of their speech, which previously they had not known . . . In a word, the words of the speech of their language are all formed from correspondences. (For instance) they write horses harnessed to a chariot merely with an l: this letter expresses it; (and) they write the understanding of doctrine in like manner by an l, but they are then in higher thought. Hence it is evident that there are correspondences in the words of their language. But few of them attend to this, as do few in this world attend to spiritual light when the light of the understanding is spoken of, etc.

Spelt. Zea.

A. 333^e. Wheat, barley, beans, lentils, millet, spelt, are such things as = bread, but with a specific difference. Bread in general = good, thus different species of good are signified by the things mentioned; more noble species of good by wheat and barley, and less noble by beans and lentils, as is also evident from these words in Ezekiel: 'Take thou to thyself wheat and barley, and beans and lentils, and millet and spelt, and put them into one vessel, and make them into bread for thyself' (iv.9,12,13).

3941⁵. 'Wheat, barley, beans, lentils, millet, spelt' (id.) = kinds of good and thence of truth.

7601². These goods and truths which are reserved are signified by 'remains' . . . These are treated of in these two verses, and are signified by 'the flax and barley being smitten . . . and the wheat and spelt not being smitten, because they were hidden' (Ex.ix.31,32).

3116^e. Then by reason of the good he would be spewed out from Hell, and by reason of the evil, from Heaven.

Sphere. Sphaera.

A. 925². The correspondence (of odours) may be evident from the spheres in Heaven . . . There are spheres of love and faith there which are manifestly perceived. The spheres are such that when a good Spirit, or an Angel, or a Society, approaches, their quality as to love and faith is at once perceived, even from afar . . . To these spheres correspond the spheres of odours in the world . . . for spheres of love and faith (can be) turned into spheres of sweet and pleasing odours. 950. 1514.

1048. A sphere exhales from (a man's, or a Soul's) nature = indole, that is, from all the several things in him. This sphere is such that from it is perceived the faith and charity in which he is. This sphere . . . becomes visible as a rainbow. 1053, Ex.

1080. They thus acquire two spheres . . . one interior, full of hatreds; the other exterior, simulative of good. These spheres fight with each other, (and) when the exterior sphere is taken away . . . they rush into all wickedness. When it is not taken away, hatred lurks in every word; this is perceived; hence their punishments.

1124. There exhaled from (the antediluvians) a sphere of a cadaverous stench . . .

1270^e. When (the antediluvians) were in the World of Spirits, the constitution of the sphere there was changed.

1316². That which is regnant in a man manifests itself (there) by a sphere, which is perceived by all around him. This sphere is such because it exhales from all the several things in him. The sphere of one who regards himself in everything . . . absorbs everything which is of advantage to him, thus all the delight of the Spirits around him, and destroys all their freedom . . .

1383. On spheres in the other life. Gen.art. 1504, continued. D.3333, Gen.art.

1398. The (evil) Spirits could not stay in the sphere of the Angel . . . Yet the sphere of that Angel had been tempered by consociations of others, (otherwise) they would all have been dissipated.

1504. The sphere (of the unconscious activity of a man's interiors) extends to a distance; and sometimes . . . is presented before the senses.

1505. How these spheres . . . are acquired. Examp. —. This makes a sphere (there), which is perceived . . . when the Lord permits.

—. Therefore there are as many spheres as affections, and compositions of affections.

—^e. One's sphere is his image extended outside of him: it is an image of all things in him. Ex.

1506. One who had acquired a sphere of (self) excellence. The Spirits fled . . . and he himself filled the whole surrounding sphere . . .

1507. (Another) had contracted a sphere of supereminence and authority. A dark cloud was seen to go forth from him, and cover the Spirits over. . . They could not stay; for they were deprived of all freedom . . .

1508. Those endowed with high rank cannot help acquiring a sphere of authority . . . In those gifted with faith and charity, this sphere of authority is wonderfully conjoined with a sphere of goodness . . . But these have not a sphere of commanding; but only the sphere natural to them . . . which they (afterwards) put off . . . (See D.2699, where this sphere is further des., and Solomon is mentioned as an example.) D.3167.

1509. (A sphere of doing nothing from the luxurious. Des.) The effect of their sphere on me was to . . . induce torpor. Des.

1510. Every Spirit, and still more every Society . . . has its own sphere . . . which is a sphere of principles and persuasions. Genii have a sphere of cupidities.

—. The sphere of principles and persuasions is such that when it acts into another it makes truths as falsities . . . 1511.

—². Such spheres are denser according to the nature of the Falsities.

—. These spheres cannot at all agree with the spheres of Spirits who are in truths: if they approach each other, there arises a repulsion. If the sphere of falsity . . . prevails, the good come into temptation . . .

—. A sphere of incredulity. Des. D.3335. 3520, Ex.

—. Also a sphere of those who believe only what they apprehend by the senses.

1511. So Genii, by their sphere, produce exactly the effect that evil is good.

1512. Spheres of phantasies . . . appear like clouds. Des.

—. From those in hatred and revenge exhale spheres which cause swooning, and vomiting. 1513, Examp.

—^e. These spheres are . . . poisonous. Their poisonousness and grossness are tested by dull blue bands: as these vanish, the sphere is diminished.

1514. (Examps. of the odours of various spheres. See ODOUR, here.) 1517. 1519.

1515. (The deadly stench of the sphere of Sirens. Des.)

1519. Spheres of Angels are sometimes presented visible as beautiful atmospheres . . .

1520. The spheres of Spirits are not constantly perceptible. They are also tempered in various ways, in order that the quality of Spirits may not always be exposed.

1614^e. This is the sphere which reigns in the universal Heaven.

1631^e. They exhale a sphere of stinking teeth.

1666. Unclean things exhale from them when they approach a sphere of good Spirits.

1667⁴. Until man acquires spheres (of cupidities and Falsities) evil Spirits serve; but as soon as he acquires them, they pour in upon him . . . for they are then in his very sphere . . .

1695². From the very sphere of a man who is confirmed in truth and good, evil Spirits know . . . what answer they will get . . .

1876². The words were below their sphere.

1983³. How powerful in its effects is the sphere of Sirens.

2027². Their sphere is one of self-regard—intuitiva sui.

2034⁵. The interiors are there manifested by the sphere diffused from them.

2121. (The state of the interior sphere of the World of Spirits before the Last Judgment.)

2122^e. Such fill the exterior and interior sphere of the World of Spirits.

2196². Divine things are above the sphere of the understanding of human rational truth.

2295. When the infants are in . . . the angelic sphere, they cannot be infested . . .

2307^e. I perceived from his sphere his disposition to domineer, etc.

2333². When the sense of the letter ascends . . . to the sphere in which Angels are . . . 3954.

2343⁶. They filled the sphere with mere scandals.

2401³. An impious sphere exhales from the life of their will and derivative thought . . .

2466². When celestial and spiritual things descend from Heaven into a lower sphere . . . they present a marriage. 2728^e. 2729.

—. But, when they are perverted in the lower sphere . . .

2489. The things of the interior memory manifest themselves there by a certain sphere, by which the Spirits are Known at a distance . . .

—. This sphere comes forth from the activity of the Things in the interior memory.

2551. The Angels are encompassed by a celestial and spiritual sphere which is full of the Lord; (thus) they are in Him.

2694². (How a sphere of perception is acquired.)

2851¹². There is an interior sphere in which such Spirits and Genii are. Sig.

3216. When Angels are speaking about doctrine, the idea of a city appears in a lower sphere . . . (See also 3217. 3218.)

3398². When infernals approach a sphere where are good and truth, they feel their own Hell . . . 3938⁶.

3489². When the Lord is named (there), a sphere of contempt and aversion is exhaled from them . . .

3645. I have perceived the Divine sphere of ends and uses. . . Everything flows forth from this sphere, and is ruled through it.

3646². Thus man can be in the Divine sphere of ends and uses, which . . . constitutes Heaven; but beasts can be in no other sphere than one of earthly ends and uses.

3660^e. Hence they are in the Divine sphere of the Lord, and of His ends and uses.

3938⁶. Love to the Lord and the neighbour makes all the sphere of life . . . there; (and these) cannot breathe in such a sphere . . .

4041. The heavenly form in the lowest sphere. Des.

4054. The brain, like Heaven, is in the sphere of ends which are uses . . .

— . As soon as (these Spirits) approach, their sphere operates. Des.

4126². All thought is (there) communicated by a certain sphere—a spiritual sphere—which proceeds from the other, and manifests the quality of his . . . will and thought; and therefore conjunction is effected according to the sphere.

4221. A corporeal sphere exhaled from him.

4299². The misty and dark sphere which exhales from the evils and falsities of the infernals, appears like a mountain, or rock, under which they are hidden.

4311². A sphere exhales from such a man's interiors which Spirits perceive as plainly as a man does a stench . . . 4464².

4330³. When they came into the sphere of their thoughts, they began to breathe with difficulty.

—^e. For there are spheres of thoughts and affections there, which are mutually communicated according to presence . . .

4464². If a man's life has been in . . . hatreds, revenges, adulteries, avarice, deceits, luxury, etc. the spiritual sphere which encompasses him is as foul as is the sphere of the odour from carcasses, ordure, etc. The man who has led such a life carries this sphere with him after death; and, as he is wholly in this sphere, he cannot be anywhere but in Hell . . .

—³. But those who have had delight in benevolence, charity, and most especially . . . in love to the Lord, are encompassed with a grateful and pleasant sphere, which is the heavenly sphere itself, and therefore they are in Heaven.

— . All the spheres which are perceived (there) arise from the loves and derivative affections in which they had been . . .

— . A man's ends determine his life . . . thence, especially, is his sphere. This sphere is perceived in Heaven most exquisitely; because the universal Heaven is in the sphere of ends.

4626. When any Spirit is approaching, even distantly and secretly, his presence is perceived, when the Lord grants, from a spiritual sphere; and from it is known the quality of his life, affection, and faith . . . 5189, Examp.

— . These spheres, when the Lord pleases, are turned into odours. Ex. 4628, Examps.

4750. The sphere of the love of the celestial Angels is tempered (by other Angels), otherwise it would cause those to whom they are sent to swoon; for the sphere of their love penetrates to the marrows.

4949^e. The sphere which encompasses such appears like thick sediment.

4951. They are covered with a cloud, which is the sphere of wickedness exhaling from them.

5061^e. When they perceive the sphere of one whom they had hated, they become infuriated.

5130². All are there Known, as to their faith and love, from their spheres . . .

— . That which reigns universally with anyone produces this sphere . . .

— . A sphere of faith from charity is the sphere which reigns in Heaven . . .

5179. Their sphere induced anxiety (because) it did not agree with the spheres of the Spirits with me.

— . A conversation about spheres.

— . There are many spiritual spheres around a man . . . Some spheres from the Spiritual World are around a man which agree with his life, and through these spheres he is in Society with Spirits of a like affection. Hence arise many things . . . for example, what is ascribed to fortune, (which is really) from a spiritual sphere.

5199². The good and truth of the Angels . . . are also perceived from the spheres which are from them.

5207². (The law which governs the proximity of the sphere of falsity in the other life. See FALSITY, here.)

5221. Scarcely anyone can know (this), unless he is in a spiritual sphere . . .

—^e. Angels and good Spirits are in a spiritual sphere (and therefore) to think of such things is delicious to them; whereas to one who is in a natural sphere, and still more to one in a sensuous sphere . . . such things are irksome.

5246². The sphere which encompasses one in temptation, or vastation, appears like a mist exhaled from dirty places.

5249². To think of such things is very delightful to them, for they are in the Divine sphere of the Lord, thus as it were in Him. Des.

5387. Who and of what quality anyone had been, is plainly perceived there from the sphere of the life of their affections and thoughts. Examp. 5432³, Examp.

5689². (A thing) is clothed for use in a lower sphere . . . with such things as are in the lower sphere, in order that the internal thing from which it proceeds may act in the lower sphere.

[A.] 5707². For what is interior is in a purer sphere, and what is exterior is in a grosser one; and that which is in a purer sphere is capable of receiving distinctly a thousand things more than that which is in a grosser sphere. Examp.

5714^e. When his sphere operated, it induced a great oppression in the stomach.

5715. An unclean sphere corresponding to the disease at once adjoins itself . . .

— Through those Spirits was communicated the sphere of the exhalations from (their Hells). (Its effect on the body.)

5949³. The sphere of a man's whole life which exhales from him is from (what is regnant in him). Examp.

6159². This (deceitfulness) is perceived from their sphere.

6200. The Spirits who were in a more subtle sphere . . .

6203. The Hell in the sphere of which the man then is . . .

6206². When a man appropriates an evil, he acquires a sphere of that evil, and to this sphere there adjoin themselves Spirits from Hell who are in a sphere of the like evil.

— The spiritual sphere with a man or Spirit is an exhalation flowing forth from the life of his loves . . .

— All (there) are conjoined or dissociated according to the spheres, even Societies. Opposite spheres collide, and repel each other. Hence the spheres of the loves of evil are all in Hell, and the spheres of the loves of good are all in Heaven; that is, those who are in them.

6312. There are Hells which are in a more subtle sphere. Des. . . This sphere inflows into the external sensuous sphere from the back part where are the involuntary things. Hence the sensuous sphere is so strong.

6365. (An infernal) cannot endure the sphere of celestial love . . . To him this sphere is like a burning fire.

6477. For years I have observed a general sphere of influxes around me. Ex.

6493. When an evil accident happens, it is because the sphere of such Spirits has prevailed. Evil Spirits have found out how to produce a sphere which causes misfortunes . . .

6495^e. In the Spiritual World, man is in the sphere of his interiors.

6571^e. This is evident from the sphere which exhales from such from afar; for their quality is perceived from it. This sphere is like a spiritual evaporation from all the several things of the life.

6602. That the spheres of the thoughts and affections extend themselves around into the spheres of remote Societies. Examp.

6603. These thoughts and affections enter (merely) the universal sphere of the affection and derivative thought of those Societies. . . For the spiritual sphere in which all Societies are is various with each, and when thoughts and affections enter into this sphere, the Societies are not affected. All thoughts and affections enter into the spheres of Societies with which they agree. Ex.

6612. (This) may be evident from the density of the sphere in which are sensuous Spirits; and from the purity of the sphere in which are Angels.

6657. Around every man, and every good Spirit, there is a general sphere of endeavours from Hell, and a general sphere of endeavours from Heaven. Ex. . . These are general spheres: there are also particular spheres around every man. Ex. . . Hence man is in equilibrium . . . S209, Ex.

6926. They go outside the sphere of this solar system . . . 6927.

7358. Outside the sphere where are Spirits of our Earth.

7454². Every Spirit, and still more every Society, is surrounded by a sphere of its own faith and life—a spiritual sphere. By this sphere their quality is known; for it is perceived by those in perception, sometimes at a considerable distance, even when they are hidden, and not communicating by thought or speech.

— This spiritual sphere may be compared to the material sphere which encompasses a man's body, which is a sphere of effluvia . . . and is smelled by keen-scented beasts.

—³. (Thus) if infernals were near those in Divine worship, they would infest them by their sphere; for (the latter) would perceive something abominable.

— From what has been said about (this) spiritual sphere . . . it is evident that there is nothing hidden . . . of whatever a man had thought, spoken, or done (here); for these are the things which constitute that sphere.

— Such a sphere pours from a man's spirit even while he is in the body; and his quality is thereby Known. III.

7482. While Spirits of Mars occupied the sphere of my mind . . .

7678^e. (The Divine truth) may be illustrated by the sphere of charity and faith which proceeds from the Angels . . . 9407¹³.

8063. Every truth has its own extension, which is sometimes manifested by a sphere . . . The sphere of the extension (there) is to the surrounding Societies. Wherever the sphere extends itself, so far there is communication. (Continued under EXTEND.)

8067. The things a man . . . entirely believes and loves are perpetually in his thought and will . . . as manifest from the spiritual sphere around a Spirit. Ex.

8206. Falsities and evils cannot enter into the sphere where are good and truth. Sig.

8210². The falsities pouring from their evils then constitute a sphere around them, which appears like a dense cloud, or water.

8630. Spheres, called spiritual spheres, continually emanate from every Society; they pour out. These spheres are from the activity of their affections and derivative thoughts.

—². The consociations (there) are all made according to the spheres. Ex.

—, Each province in the Grand Man has its own distinct sphere . . .

—^e. Hence there is an oppugnancy between the spheres.

8750². In the inmost sphere of Heaven there is a certain progression according to the Divine heavenly form . . .

8794. Extension into Heaven (only) to the spiritual spheres of good. Sig. and Ex.

—³. Every Angel, Spirit, and man has a spiritual sphere, which is according to his extension into Societies . . . not into the Societies themselves, but into the spheres of their good.

—^e. The dominant love constitutes the sphere of everyone's life, and it extends itself according to its quality and quantity.

8837. By the spiritual sphere of good ceasing below. Sig. and Ex.

8945⁵. When the sphere of their life does not agree (with the Societies into which they are admitted) conflict ensues . . .

9109. When a (merely) natural man comes into the spiritual sphere, which is the sphere of life of the internal man, he is insane. —².

—^e. Such are in pain and blindness when elevated into the spiritual sphere.

9297^e. Their truths are Known from their faces . . . and the good itself . . . also from the sphere pouring from them.

9303⁵. Three things with an Angel make a one: his internal . . . his external . . . and the sphere of the life of his affections and thoughts, which pours out from him to a distance.

9407¹³. The Divine sphere which proceeds from the Lord, called the Divine truth, is universal, filling the universal Heaven . . .

9466. A sphere of affections of good and truth is presented before (their) eyes by colours, the specific things by objects variously coloured; and also before the nostrils, by odours.

9498. The power of the Divine sphere. Sig. and Ex.

—, The Divine truth . . . must be conceived as a sphere from the Sun, decreasing in ardour . . . as it recedes . . . Within this sphere, but far from the Sun . . . is the angelic Heaven. This sphere extends itself also outside of Heaven, even into Hell; but those there . . . turn it into the contrary.

9499. 'The sides of the ark' = the Divine sphere encompassing Heaven in its ultimates. Ex.

9502. Through the Divine sphere of good and truth which encompasses and encloses Heaven in general and particular has Heaven been created . . . and through the same it is conserved . . .

9533. The termination of the sphere of good from the Divine good. Sig. and Ex. 9535.

9534². The Divine sphere which encompasses and guards Heaven is a sphere of Divine truth conjoined with Divine good; but the sphere which guards Hell is a sphere of Divine truth separated from Divine good. Ex.

—³. (Thus the former) sphere ceases where Heaven ceases; and (the latter) sphere begins where Hell begins; and in the intervening space there is a conjunction. Sig.

9538. Firmness is in the natural sphere. Sig. and Ex.

9606. The conjunction of the one sphere with the other. Sig. and Ex.

—, In Heaven, spheres conjoin; for spheres proceed from every Society, and from every Angel. These spheres exhale from the life of each one's affections of good and truth, and pour themselves out thence to a distance . . . The Angels and Societies are conjoined, and also disjoined, according to these spheres. Ex.

—^e. So far as these spheres derive from the Lord, they conjoin; so far as from an Angel's proprium, they disjoin.

9608. Plenary conjunction in the ultimates of the spheres. Sig. and Ex.

9623. Plenary conjunction of one sphere with the other. Sig. and Ex.

9728. The sphere of good through which there is conjunction. Sig. and Ex.

9735. The power of the sphere of Divine good. Sig. and Ex.

9874². Not only Heaven, but all the Societies, and also each Angel . . . are encompassed with the Divine sphere, which is the good and truth proceeding from the Lord . . .

9882. The sphere of Divine good through which there is conjunction from the higher part of Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

9883^e. The conjunction of the sphere of Divine good in the extremes of Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

9896. The conjunction and conservation of all things of Heaven through the sphere of Divine good in the externals of the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

9931. What is perpetual and impressed on hearts according to the heavenly sphere. Sig. and Ex.

10130². The love constitutes the whole man there, and the derivative sphere of life flows forth from him like an exhalation or vapour, and encompasses him, and makes as it were himself around him . . . like the effluvium around plants . . . and beasts . . . Such an effluvium pours out of every man . . . But (after death) this effluvium . . . is not material . . . but is a spiritual effluence from his love, which forms a sphere around him . . .

—³. As this sphere is communicated to others, and is transferred into them . . . and is received by them according to their love, it gives rise to many wonderful things there. Enum.

10177¹. From the spheres of their affections . . . their quality as to love is perceived.

10187. For evils cannot endure the sphere of good. Des. and Sig.

10188. The sphere of Divine good through which there is conjunction and conservation. Sig. and Ex.

[A. 10188]². The sphere of Divine good infills universal Heaven, and extends itself into Hell ; for it is like the sphere of the sun's heat . . .

— . This Divine sphere has been likened to radiant circles . . .

— . They who suffer themselves to be led by the Lord . . . are in the sphere of Divine good . . . (others) are in the same sphere, but their interiors are closed so that they do not feel the influx . . .

— . Hence the external sphere of Divine good is dulled in Hell, yet the internal sphere remains, which is not received . . . but still the Lord rules the Hells through it.

—³. The reason why there is a sphere of Divine good. Ex.

—⁴. Moreover, from every Angel proceeds a sphere from his love ; and also from every good or evil Spirit, according to their loves ; but the spheres proceeding from these do not extend themselves far ; but the Divine sphere into the universe ; for it proceeds from the inmost, which is the all in all the successives.

—^e. Concerning these spheres. Refs.

10190. Thus the Divine sphere round about is a sphere of the good of love from the Lord as a Sun from the east even to the west, and a sphere of truth from good from the south to the north. Thus the sphere of Divine good in the midst is like an axis, and the sphere of Divine truth thence proceeding is on both sides. Sig.

10312. Anxiety was felt, arising from a collision of the spheres. Ex.

H. 17. Spiritual spheres of life proceed from every Angel and Spirit . . . by which their quality is known. Ex.

— . The spheres which go forth from the Angels are so full of love that . . .

49. All the Societies communicate by an extension of the spheres.

— . The sphere of the life is a sphere of the affections which are of love and faith. This extends itself into the Societies. Des.

—(b). A spiritual sphere, which is a sphere of the life, flows forth from every man, Spirit, and Angel. Refs.

76. The things above the sphere of nature.

79². When elevated into the interior sphere of Heaven.

384². The sphere exhaled from Hell is like a perpetual endeavour to dissolve and violate marriages.

409. When good Spirits perceive this delight . . . from the sphere of an Angel's love . . . they come into a sweet swoon.

494. (Spirits recognise others) by the sphere of their life, when they approach.

538. The sphere of falsity from evil flowing from Hell. Des.

— . From Heaven was perceived a sphere of truth from good bridling (it). Hence an equilibrium.

— . This sphere from Heaven was perceived to be from the Lord alone, although it appeared to be from the Angels. Ex.

574. From each Hell is exhaled a sphere of the cupidities in which are those there. When this sphere is perceived by one in like cupidity . . . he is filled with delight. Ex.

591. A spiritual sphere encompasses everyone, which pours forth from the life of the affections and derivative thoughts . . . Hence such a sphere of life flows forth from every Heavenly Society, and from every infernal one, consequently from all of them together, that is, from the whole Heaven, and the whole Hell. (The equilibrium thence resulting. Ex.)

595. The sphere flowing from the Hells is wholly a sphere of endeavours to destroy the Divine of the Lord . . .

—². The Divine sphere proceeding from the Lord is a perpetual endeavour to save all . . .

S. 97⁵. The Divine external sphere of the Word. Sig.

— . The sphere of the Word from the Lord's Divine good and truth. Sig.

W. 291². The spiritual Sun is like the sphere . . . which encompasses each Angel, whereby his presence is presented . . . and which is not the Angel himself, but is from each and all things of his body, from which substances continually emanate in a stream . . . These substances . . . excite the atmospheres . . . and thus present a perception as of his presence . . .

— . Thus it is not a different sphere of affections and derivative thoughts . . . which goes forth and is continued . . .

—^e. There is such a sphere around every Angel, because there is one around the Lord ; and that sphere around the Lord is in like manner from Him, and is their Sun.

292. (The spheres around Angels and Spirits, and the general spheres around Societies, I have seen as thin flame, gross fire, bright cloud, and black cloud ; and I have perceived these spheres as odours) by which I have been confirmed that a sphere consisting of substances set free from their bodies encompasses everyone in Heaven and in Hell.

293. A sphere pours forth (also) from every thing in the Spiritual World. Enum. It is similar in the natural world. Ex. The natural world derives this from the Spiritual World, and the Spiritual World from the Divine.

305. (Natural substances and matters) have brought [with them] by continuation from the substance of the spiritual Sun . . . the sphere which encompasses the Lord ; (and) from this sphere, by continuation from the Sun . . . have originated the substances and matters from which are earths.

P. 196. The delight of these affections . . . encompasses everyone there as his atmosphere ; and all are conjoined according to these spheres exhaled from their affections through their thoughts . . .

R. 232. The Divine sphere which encompasses the Lord is from His Divine love and Divine wisdom simultaneously ; and is represented in the Celestial Kingdom as rubescent . . . in the Spiritual as cerulescent . . . and in the Natural as viridescent . . .

462². (In the second kind of enchantment) the spiritual sphere of their mind dispelled the spiritual sphere of the other's mind, and suffocated it.

M. 44¹. The virgins perceive from their sphere, etc. their quality as to the love of the sex.

92. A universal conjugal sphere proceeds from the Lord, and pervades the universe . . . The reason such a sphere of the marriage of good and truth proceeds from Him, is that it is also a sphere of propagation . . . and this is the same as the Divine Providence for the conservation of the universe . . . 222, Gen. art.

—². As this universal sphere . . . inflows into its subjects according to their form . . . the male receives it . . . in the understanding, and the female . . . in the will . . . and, as this sphere is also a sphere of prolification, it follows that thence is the love of the sex.

140². That a sphere of lasciviousness pours out from the unchaste, is evident from the Israelitish statutes . . .

171. A wife is conjoined with her husband through the sphere of her life which goes forth from her love. Ex.

— . From every man there pours out a spiritual sphere . . . which applies itself to the natural sphere which is from the body, and they conjoin themselves.

— . A natural sphere continually flows out from the body . . . from man, beasts, trees, fruits, flowers, and metals . . . So in the Spiritual World; but the spheres . . . there are spiritual . . .

— . The spheres which emanate from Spirits and Angels are inwardly spiritual, because the affections . . . and derivative interior perceptions and thoughts are in them. This is the source of all sympathy and antipathy, and of all conjunction and disjunction; and presence and absence there are according to them . . . and therefore these spheres cause the distances there.

— . What these spiritual spheres operate in the natural world is known to some. The inclinations of married partners towards each other are from this origin. Unanimous and concordant spheres unite them; and adverse and discordant ones disunite them . . .

—². Every part both within and without man renovates itself . . . and thence is the sphere . . .

— . This sphere encompasses a man . . . thinly on his back, and densely on his breast; and the latter conjoins itself with his respiration. (The effect of this on consorts.) 224.

—³. The spheres which go forth from every part of a man, and which are continued amply around him, conjoin or disjoin consorts not only from without, but also from within . . .

—^c. The sphere of love going forth from a wife who is tenderly loved, is perceived in Heaven as sweetly fragrant . . .

222². Many spheres proceed from Him. Enum. . . But the universal of them all is the conjugal sphere. Ex.

—³. This conjugal sphere infils the universe, and pervades it from primes to ultimates. Ex.

—⁴. This sphere is more universal than the sphere of (natural) heat and light. Ex.

223. This sphere is received by the female sex, and through it is transferred into the male. Ex.

224. Where there is love truly conjugal, this sphere is received by the wife, and by the husband through her alone. Ex. (This is the test of this love. —^c.)

225. Where there is love not conjugal, this sphere is received by the wife, but not by the husband through her. Ex.

— . This conjugal sphere . . . is Divine in its origin; in its progress into Heaven . . . is celestial and spiritual; with men is natural; with beasts and birds animal; with worms merely corporeal; and with plants is devoid of life. Moreover it is varied in each subject according to its form.

— . As this sphere is received immediately by the female sex, and mediately by the male, and is received according to the forms, it follows that this sphere, which is holy in its origin, can, in the subjects, be . . . turned into the opposite. The sphere opposite to it is called meretricious with such women, and scortatory with such men; and, as these are in Hell, this sphere is thence. But this sphere, also, is of much variety . . . and every man attracts such a species of it as is in congruity with himself . . .

—^c. Thus a man who does not love his wife, receives this sphere from some other source . . . yet this also is inspired by her . . .

238². This propagative or plastic force in seeds . . . and in souls . . . is from the conjugal sphere . . .

321². The sphere of love from the wife, and the sphere of understanding from the husband, constantly flows forth; and this [sphere] perfects the conjunctions, is around them with its pleasantness and breathing, and unites them.

355⁵. For a universal sphere of generating and propagating the celestial things of love, the spiritual things of wisdom, and the derivative natural things of offsprings, proceeds from the Lord, and infils the universal Heaven and the universal world; and this heavenly sphere infils the souls of all mankind, and descends through their minds into their bodies down to the ultimates, and gives the force of generating . . . with those who suffer themselves to be restored to the primeval state.

386. Two universal spheres proceed from the Lord to conserve the universe . . . a sphere of procreating, and a sphere of protecting the things procreated.

— . The proceeding Divine is called a sphere, because . . .

— . All that which flows forth from a subject, and encompasses and environs it, is called a sphere; as the sphere of light and heat around the sun; the sphere of life from a man; the sphere of odour from a shrub; the sphere of attraction from the magnet.

—². The universal spheres here treated of are from the Lord around Him, and proceed from the (spiritual) Sun. (Thus) proceeds a sphere of heat and light, (that is,) a sphere of love and wisdom, to operate ends which are uses. This sphere is distinguished by various names, according to the uses. Enum.

387. These two universal spheres make a one with the sphere of conjugal love and the sphere of the love of infants. Ex.

388. These two spheres inflow universally and singularly into all things of Heaven and of the world, from primes to ultimates. Ex.

[M.]391. The sphere of the love of infants. Ex. D.1906.

392. This sphere affects both the evil and the good. Ex.

393. This sphere affects, principally, the female sex . . . Ex.

394. This sphere is also a sphere of innocence and peace. Ex.

395. The sphere of innocence inflows into infants, and through them into the parents. Ex.

396. It also inflows into the souls of the parents, and conjoins itself with the same sphere in the infants . . . Ex.

400. The sphere of the love of procreating progresses in order . . . Ex.

434. There is a sphere of scortatory love, and a sphere of conjugal love. Ex. 435, Ex.

436. These two spheres meet each other in both worlds: but do not conjoin themselves. Ex.

437. Between these two spheres there is equilibrium; and man is in it. Ex.

439. Each sphere bears delights with it. Ex.

455. The sphere of the lust of fornicating . . . is intermediate between the sphere of scortatory and the sphere of conjugal love, and makes an equilibrium. Ex.

T. 29³. His Sun . . . consists of the Divine essence, which goes out as a sphere from Him. I.5.

44. The Divine love is Known from its sphere, which pervades the universe . . .

— This universal sphere affects . . . those who receive this love of God . . .

—². The same Divine sphere operates into inanimate things . . . but through the (natural) sun . . .

56. His omnipotence operates within the sphere of the extension of good, which sphere is infinite: for this sphere intils the universe from the inmost. (Its operation ex.)

308. There continually proceeds from the Lord a Divine celestial sphere towards all who embrace the doctrine of His Church, and obey Him . . . and want to be instructed by Him.

— From this celestial sphere arises a natural sphere, which is one of love towards children; which sphere is most universal, affecting (both animate and inanimate things). Ex.

— From the influx of that celestial sphere into the natural world come forth (the wonders of plant life, and the singing of birds). Ex.

331. The reason evil and good cannot be together . . . is that in the Spiritual World there exhales from every one the sphere of his love, which . . . causes sympathies and antipathies. By these spheres the good are separated from the evil. D.1847.

410³. The affections and thoughts there make a spiritual sphere around them, which is felt in various ways. But (here) this spiritual sphere is absorbed by the material body; and it encloses itself within the natural sphere, which then pours out of the man.

433². The spiritual sphere which reigned in those feasts (of eharity) was a sphere of love to the Lord and of love towards the neighbour. (Its effects on them.)

— For there emanates from every man a spiritual sphere . . . which interiorly affects his associates, especially at feasts: it emanates through the face and respiration.

521. If you could feel the sphere of life pouring from everyone's native disposition . . .

619. (Effect of) the spheres (there) which flow forth from modern Christianity . . .

—². One sphere . . . takes away faith in the Divine of the Lord's Human. Ex.

—³. A second sphere, which takes away faith, is like a black cloud in winter. Ex.

—⁴. A third sphere is that of the conjunction of faith and charity, which is so strong that it cannot be resisted; but at this day is abominable. Ex. This sphere invades men (here) also, and extinguishes the conjugal torches between truths and goods. Des.

—⁵. The Angels complain of these spheres, and pray to the Lord to dissipate them; but . . . they cannot be dissipated so long as the dragon is 'on the earth' . . .

—⁶. These three spheres are like tempest-driven atmospheres . . . and, being spiritual, they invade minds and drive them.

—^e. The spheres of spiritual truths there are as yet few . . . which is the reason why those Truths are so inconspicuous with men . . .

652³. There is a sphere elevating all to Heaven which continually proceeds from the Lord, and infils the universal spiritual and natural worlds; it is like a strong current . . . which secretly carries along a ship. All who believe in the Lord and live according to His precepts enter this sphere or current . . . But they who do not believe, do not want to enter it . . .

D. 152. On the general sphere of Spirits (before the Last Judgment). Ex.

— The sphere of Spirits is now so perverted . . .

—³. How this general sphere operates into human minds.

167. (This) general life . . . diffuses itself, and constitutes a sphere, which is called the sphere of activity, and [extends] itself into the more subtle things of nature. Every Genius and Spirit has his own sphere of activity . . . so, therefore, have all of them together . . .

210. On the general spheres . . . from the things of God Messiah's Kingdom. Ex.

— The rational sphere.

211. There are also spheres of evil Spirits, (which) are turned into infernal ones at the Last Judgment. Des.

255. On the more interior sphere. Des. 258.

262. Tranquil spheres, to be called spheres of ignorance. Ex.

297. There is a certain sphere exhaling not concordant with my thought. Ex.

973. On spheres of activity of Spirits and Angels. Gen.art. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980.

1584. A sphere of spiritual effluvia (from Spirits).

1839. On a circumfused spiritual sphere, and its operation into Spirits. Ex.

— . A number of Spirits, or Societies, together form a general sphere. Examp.

1846. That activities of sphere encompass men. Ex.

— . There is not the smallest particle which has not its own sphere around it: and the conformable parts constitute a general sphere conformable to the parts.

— . There are spheres of all things . . .

1847. The sphere of the Lord . . .

1886. On the sphere of hearing. Ex.

1900. On the spheres of Spirits. Ex.

1901. (The amending of a person's sphere.)

2002. There can be no particular without a general . . . Thus it is the general sphere which affects . . . Man cannot speak, etc., unless there be a certain universal sphere of thoughts. Ex. 2003, Ex.

2004. Whence are the spheres which rule the thoughts.

2005. 2007.

2006. There are indefinite varieties of general spheres . . . 2008.

— . The spheres proper to Angels, etc., are not mixed with the Lord's spheres . . .

2087. (There is a sphere of Spirits round man, he being like a solid point in the middle of it, just in the same way as the terraqueous globes are surrounded by their atmospheric spheres. But when the corporeal things are laid aside, man is in that sphere in the same way as is a Spirit.) Further des.

2089. In the atmospheric sphere, incongruous things are dispelled, and so the sphere by its own forces reduces all things to equilibrium. Examp. Spiritual spheres are the cause of this. (Examp. of a spiritual sphere being purged in the same way.)

2150. There are spheres which have limits, which Spirits cannot pass. Ex.

2323. The sphere of their activity does not extend far: but ceases at once at a small circumference. Ex.

2532. Deceits occupy this interior sphere . . .

2565. Insanity reigns in the interior sphere of the World of Spirits. Gen.art.

2651. In the interior sphere of upright Spirits.

2685. All the genera and species of Spirits have their own spheres, into which only like ones can enter. Ex.

— . All are distinguished not only according to such exterior spheres, but also according to their interior ones . . .

2691. A bloody sphere. Des. 2692. 2694, Ex.

2703. In order that a man or Spirit may be in an Angelic sphere, it is necessary that . . .

2740. On the sphere of those who are worldly (there), and desire to command others. (Its potent effects on others).

2745. Within the sphere of the speech, that is, in the sphere of the thoughts within the speech, in which are interior Spirits . . . They can transmit themselves into that interior sphere, and thus get out of the society of those in the exterior sphere.

2758. On the speech of the Spirits of the interior sphere.

2760. In the interior sphere of nature are thousands of such as are evil . . . as to the interiors of nature.

— . In the interior sphere are the ends which cease in the world and self . . .

2764. On a sphere of persuasions of evil exercised by some Spirits. Ex. 2765.

2766^e. Thus the sphere of a certain love conjoins chickens with their mother.

2902. Persuasion forms a sphere, into which evil Spirits cannot enter. Examp.

2976. On general spheres. Gen.art.

— . The four spheres of faith, enum. The opposite spheres are also four. 2977. 2978.

2979. One general sphere contains other general spheres. Ex. 2986, Ex.

2981. One sphere also succeeds another.

2982. Of the Spirits in one place, each can be in a different sphere . . .

2983. The corporeal sphere. Ex.

2992. On the sphere of activity of infants.

3132. Spheres . . . are presented by odours. Ex.

— . Spheres of terror, sadness, etc.

3133. Evil Spirits cannot bear a sphere of faith; and therefore the perception of spheres is taken away, diminished, or increased by the Lord . . .

— .² When they want to explore the angelic sphere . . . it so penetrates into the interiors of the Spirit that he is turned into such things . . .

3180. Certain Spirits, or Societies, cannot live in the next purer sphere. Ex.

3333. On spheres. Gen.art.

— . The only sphere known to man is odour . . .

— . Another sphere known to man, is that he desires this or that food . . .

3334. But in the other life there are spiritual spheres so perceptible that . . .

— . Such spheres are innumerable, being as many as there are Spirits, and Societies.

— . A general mixed sphere of a number of Spirits is at once discriminated by the Angels . . .

3336. There is a perceptible sphere of every phantasy; and while a Spirit is mute, and hardly thinks at all, it is perceived by others. They are not aware that they have such a sphere . . .

3338. When I was extracting what I had written about spheres, not being in perception from a sphere,

I did not know what a sphere is, neither did the Spirits around me . . .

[D.] 3339. Animals sensate from spheres what they would never perceive in any other way; so that there are spheres in the nature of Things which are quite unknown to man, but which reign with beasts. Thus a dog . . . Knows his master among a thousand from a sphere of subordination and of friendship . . . This is ascribed to elluvia . . .

—^c. Animals have a sphere of knowing the quarters of the world . . . 3340.

3340. Animals have also a sphere of gladness . . .

—^a. All animals have spheres of knowing what to eat . . .

—^e. Animals have a sphere of times; as swallows, etc.

—^a. Birds have a sphere of building their nests . . . They have a sphere of bringing up their young.

3341. Such (corporeal and natural) spheres reign with animals; but do not exist with man, because he is in phantasies, (otherwise) he would have these lowest spheres, and also a sphere of Knowing his associate the moment he saw him, that is, his quality . . .

3342. As to the sphere of faith, he would Know their quality as to faith, like a Spirit, at their first coming . . . These spheres are human.

3343. Such spheres are of the Lord alone; for they descend from the sphere of faith in Him; from and through this, all the other spheres are distinguished, and they flow forth from it; and therefore spheres of odour correspond . . .

3344. There are also visual spheres, distinct from those spheres which are of odour; (as) a sphere of grace (visible) as a golden yellow atmosphere . . .

3345. A sphere seen as of mere human flesh. (It was) one of human affection; thus truly human.

3349. Angels do not know they are in a sphere of the perception of faith, unless the Lord grants them to perceive it. (This is) because they are in it, (just as) gardeners do not perceive the sphere of the odour of flowers . . .

3350. The odours of those in outermost things . . . are spheres flowing forth from them. Examp.

3395. On a sphere of persuasion.

3405. By his phantasies he perverted the spheres.

3485. (The extraordinary sphere of Dippel.) Des.

3489. They perceived my previous quality from my sphere.

3540. On the general sphere of those who suppose Spirits to be like the atmosphere. Des.

3546. One infant, or Angel, can drive away myriads of Spirits; for they cannot endure the sphere of mutual love . . .

3637. Man's interior man is in this sphere.

3640. The evil who are in the interior sphere . . .

3660. (His sufferings) when he came into the sphere of angelic Spirits.

3727. The bodily fluids have not their up and down according to the sphere outside the body . . .

3799. A sphere of abominable adultery exhaled from them.

3817. When I smelled the dung of horses, upright Spirits complained . . . because there at once occurred a sphere of reasonings from natural things . . .

—^a. Thus . . . the objects of odours and of the other senses, and also the objects of various thoughts, as also phantasies, all form spheres, to which correspond spiritual and celestial things, consequently their spheres which affect Spirits according to their quality; for spheres are as it were the atmospheres in which Spirits live.

3821. Evil Spirits want to throw me under the wheels of carriages . . . the sphere of their endeavour is constantly such . . .

3894. When I ate butter, certain Spirits . . . could not bear it, because . . . it gave rise to a sphere of goods . . . So (tea pleased them) solely because they derived thence a sphere of there being what is less spiritual. So with many other things I ate and drank . . .

4127. How the evil in the interior sphere are infested and tortured.

4128^e. The state of the happy in the interior sphere.

4140^e. So also various and manifold spheres are formed from Things; as various spheres of goodness . . .

4173. A sphere was represented as an aura of uses . . . In such a sphere he began to flee.

4195. Every Spirit, and still more every Society, exhales a sphere of itself, which is from its life of principles; (with) evil Genii, from the life of cupidities. Hence their sphere, which is a sphere as it were of derivative instincts. This sphere is a certain General operating, and when it acts into the memory of a man, it excites thence whatever is accordant . . . When such a sphere reigns, all things which are excited, however false, appear as true, and confirm . . . 4202, Ex.

4196. (Various visible spheres. Des.)

4202. The quality of the spheres of Spirits which arise from dissent, or consent . . . Ex.

—^a. Such a force of persuading is a general sphere . . .

—². When such spheres were shown me by colours . . .

—^a. The great density of the sphere which has to be dissipated . . .

—^e. A sphere of good and truth which cannot yet penetrate through the sphere of persuasions. Rep.

—^a. The amount of the sphere may thus be observed.

4203. Round everyone in falsity and evil there are such dense spheres . . .

—^a. These spheres appear as in clear day to good Spirits and Angels, whose spheres cannot possibly accord . . . and therefore they are dissociated. If they come together, those who have a sphere of falsity and evil around them are greatly tortured; and if, by permission, the spheres of falsity and evil prevail, the good come into temptation, anxieties, and anguish. The respiration is as it were taken away, so that one cannot live in the sphere of the other unless they are miraculously tempered.

—^e. There is a spiritual sphere around everyone, as there is a natural sphere, and also a corporeal one. That everyone has this latter, may be evident from the effluvious expiration, which is like a sea around a man.

4220. Hence comes that sphere of self-honour.

— How men acquire spheres. 4226, Ex.

—^e. Such spheres are things which are manifestly perceived (there). Ex.

— Such spheres are wont to be turned into spheres of odour . . .

—^e. They are also wont to be turned into visible spheres, and appear as forms of a sphere . . .

4225. Their sphere is continually of adulteries . . . Their sphere is turned into an intestinal sphere . . .

4226^e. Hence come spheres of faith.

4268. Spheres are such that they affect all who are like them. Examp. 4280.

4280. On spheres of affection.

— Certain Societies . . . were affected by a sphere of the Lord's affections . . . while other Societies, in the same sphere, could not (be).

—^e. Every sphere of affection is attended with there being a certain General . . .

4308². Very many Spirits transfer themselves into a more subtle sphere . . . and, when they come into it, it is their interiors which operate . . . Unless a Spirit is amended before he comes thither, his evil is continued there . . . and therefore Spirits who are being vastated are not permitted to come into that second sphere until they have been vastated . . . Very many of the infernals are in this sphere.

4336. When such discourse in the interior sphere . . . it produces, in the World of Spirits, a sphere of fornication and adultery, and the evil gather to it . . . and infil the sphere with adulteries, etc.

4337. (The Spirits with a man) think just as the man does, which gives rise to a sphere of thought and affection . . . in which are all the other Spirits; and, while in it, they speak and are affected variously according to the sphere, each according to his own state. Therefore such Spirits gather to the man as he is himself, and they remain in that sphere, and augment and change it, and excite corresponding things in the man . . . Such as is the sphere, such are the Spirits . . .

4588. Through the whole night I was in a spiritual sphere . . . and in an opposite sphere . . . The latter sphere continually inflowed, and wanted to destroy the other sphere, but could effect nothing . . . In such a sphere are those Spirits kept who are being initiated and confirmed in this truth. Ex.

4608. Hence there is a spiritual sphere around a man, not only from the ideas and affections . . . in the brain, but from . . . the whole body . . .

4872. In his sphere, I began to doubt concerning the Divine . . .

4918. In the descent they are deprived of the holy sphere . . . which they have on the mountain . . . They have that sphere of the Lord around them, and they are inside that sphere with their pride, hatreds, etc.; whereas Angels have the sphere of the Lord within them . . .

5121. When spiritual Angels enter into that (celestial) sphere, they become as if insane . . . And when Genii . . . come into their sphere, they are direfully tortured . . .

5122. From the varieties of objects (the celestial) perceive the presence of the sphere of others; and so from the kind of the affections, they perceive the sphere of the Heaven in which they are.

5123. The spheres of consociations extend themselves almost through the whole Heaven; but with indefinite variety. There are celestial spheres there in which they can be with an affection of joy and love; others in which they can be with another kind of affection of joy and love; and others in which they cannot be. They fall into sadness there. The terminations of their spheres at the sides are there . . . Thus are the Societies distinguished.

5202. (The Divine sphere which constituted the general advent of the Lord. See LAST JUDGMENT, here.)

5898. The sphere of the Lord's Divine encompassed those whom the Lord protected. This sphere evolved itself towards those who were attacking; some of whom ventured to enter it, but they were suddenly smitten with such anxiety of heart . . .

5899. Those who appear like cats can be in the sphere of the Lord's Divine without being tortured . . . Such can ascend into some of the Heavens, and cannot be driven away, like others, by the angelic sphere. Ex.

D. Min. 4548. On a certain person's sphere which . . . poured forth poisonous sarcasms . . .

4549. His sphere was rolled round him like a roll. Des.

4581. The reason (they are thus magically bound) is that the Genii . . . form a sphere about the man, and thus adjoin infernals . . .

4668. The Divine sphere of ends and uses. Ex.

4676. The abominable sphere of the love of self. Ex. (Its effects on me. 4678.)

4798. An inundation by various spheres of the Hells, which spheres are directed by the Lord, and then produce anxieties and temptations . . .

4829. A conversation about spheres.

E. 65. A sphere proceeds from every Angel and Spirit . . . they have garments according to this sphere.

342¹⁰. These spheres are turned into such appearances.

392². Around every Angel is a sphere . . . which pours out to a great distance . . . it is the extension of his life outside of him, and this extension is effected by means of the spiritual atmosphere . . .

— But around the Lord is a Divine sphere, which near Him appears as a Sun . . . This sphere is the Divine which proceeds from Him, which in its essence is Divine truth. 941.

707. For the life of everyone . . . forms a sphere around him . . . Hence by 'the woman encompassed with the sun,' is signified . . .

822³. When man is in the exercise of charity, the sphere of all his affections and thoughts is like thin water. . . In this sphere are all things of his mind in the complex. Ex. . . The same spiritual sphere manifests itself before the sight in (other) representative forms. 865.

[E.] 889³. All things in the world. . . pour out a sphere, which is sometimes sensated from afar, as that from animals in forests, which dogs keenly scent. . . But (all) these are natural exhalations. In like manner in the Spiritual World. Ex.

—⁴. There is not a single thought of a Spirit or man which does not communicate with some Society by this sphere . . .

902². Two opposite spheres encompass man ; one from Hell, the other from Heaven. Ex. 1014², Ex. Ath. 201, Ex.

926². When they descend into the lower sphere in which Angels are as to their bodies . . .

1076². A sphere flowing from his love encompasses every man and Angel. Ex. . . This sphere has extension into the Heavens . . . or into the Hells. Ex.

—^e. But the sphere of the Lord's love has infinite extension, and creates the Heavens themselves.

1174². Man acquires this sphere in the world . . .

Ath. 154. There is an extension of the sphere from the Divine into the universe . . .

— . The sphere proceeding from Angels extends itself into much of Heaven.

191. The proceeding Divine . . . is formed successively into spheres, the last of which is the (natural) atmosphere.

Q. 5. The Holy Spirit is the same as the Divine sphere, if by this is meant the Divine love and wisdom . . .

Spherule. Sphaerula.

W. 432². (Three degrees of globules or spherules in the brain. etc.) E. 775². D. Wis. iii. 4.

D. Wis. ii. ³. See SPINAL MARROW.

Sphincter. Sphincter.

A. 5389. (The sphincter of the bladder.) D. 867.

D. 4281. The sphincter of the anus.

4283. The sphincter of the urethra.

Sphinx. Sphinx.

T. 274. These appear (there) like sphinxes . . .

320. Apes or monkeys clothed like men.

Spice. Aroma.

Aromatic. Aromaticus.

Perfumer. Aromatarius.

A. 175. An aromatic odour as of an embalmed corpse.

— . What is cadaverous is then smelled as aromatic. 1518. H. 449². D. 1100.

925³. What 'spices' signify.

1171⁴. 'Spice' = charity.

1519. Spheres which are perceived as odours of spices, etc.

2567¹⁰. 'Perfumers,' mentioned.

4748. 'Camels bearing spices' (Gen. xxxvii. 25). . . 'Spices,' etc. = interior natural truths conjoined with good. Ex.

—². 'Spices,' etc. = in general, interior truths in the Natural which are from the good there. Ex.

—⁴. As the Natural is perfected and also amended through such truths, healing is ascribed to spices of this sort. Ill.

5620. Aromatics = such things as are of truth from good.

5621. These spices (aromatic wax, and stacte) are purer than resin and honey . . .

— . All spices, because sweet-scented, = truths which are from good. Ex.

9474. 'Spices for the oil of anointing' (Ex. xxv. 6) = the internal truths which are of the inaugurating good ; for 'spices' = interior truths, which are the truths of internal good.

—². The oil was rendered scented by aromatics that it might represent what is grateful. . . As all the perception of good is through truth, spices were employed, which = interior truths.

—³. Spice = internal truth.

—^e. The aromatic of the oil of anointing = what is grateful of internal perception ; but the aromatic of the incense, what is grateful of external perception. Ex.

9475. 'For the incense of spices' (id.) = for grateful perception ; (for) 'spices' = truths of faith which are grateful because from good. Ex. 10199, Ex.

10137⁷. 'To multiply perfumes' (Is. lvii. 9) = to multiply incense, by which are signified adorations.

10199⁵. 'A city of perfumers' (Ezek. xvii. 4) = where is the doctrine of interior truth. E. 281².

—⁶. 'The chief of spice' (Ezek. xxvii. 22) = what is grateful from interior truths.

—^e. (Thus) interior truths, which are grateful, and are signified by 'spices,' are those which are from the good of love and of charity.

10251. 'Take to thyself chief spices' (Ex. xxx. 23) = from the Word truths with goods, which are gratefully perceived ; for 'spices' = truths conjoined with goods, which are grateful.

10254. 'Aromatic cinnamon' (id.) = the perception and affection of natural truth . . . because by 'aromatic' is signified grateful perception ; (and this) is from affection . . .

—³. All the aromatics of the oil of anointing belong to the celestial class . . . but those of the incense to the spiritual class . . . and therefore in the Hebrew these two kinds of spices are from different words . . . —⁷, Ex. 10291, Sig. and Ex.

—⁴. The spice here named = the perception and affection of celestial truth. Ill.

10256. 'Aromatic calamus' (ver. 25) = perception and affection of interior truth ; (for) 'aromatic' = the perception and affection of it.

10291. 'Take to thyself fragrant spices' (ver. 34) = the affections of truth from good which must be in Divine worship ; for 'spices' = perceptions and affections of truth and good.

10350. 'The incense of spices' (Ex. xxxi. 11) = a representative of worship from truths . . . 'Spices' = truths and their affections.

10540⁶. 'Spice' = Divine truth as to its Perceptive.

M. 266². An aromatic odour from the sphere of those Angels.

E. 242¹³. 'Spices' = truths which are grateful because from good. Refs.

1150². The spices (of the oil of anointing) = the Divine wisdom. Ex.

Spider. Aranca.

A. 5984. They station their emissaries as a spider places its web. D.2376. 4269.

W. 338. Evil uses are spiders, etc.

P. 107^e. Infernal love and its concupiscences may be compared to a spider and its web.

286. Like a little spider—araneola—in its web . . .

M. 231⁴. Involve it in reasonings as a spider does its prey with threads.

T. 178^e. As many as the little spiders—araneolae—in the little ball made by one mother spider—arachnipara.

335³. Does the spider think in its little head . . .

611². Evils are joined together like the progeny of a spider . . .

785^e. The internal and external of a spider. Ex.

D. 4735. On spiders. Gen.art. 4889. 5199.

— . A diabolical Spirit who appeared like a great and horrible spider (was drawn down by his web from the interior Heaven) and crushed. Des. (Those who appear thus des. 4736.)

4889. A spider seen descending from the Third Heaven by its thread. Ex.

—^e. Such appear like spiders. Ex.

4890. Spiders of a larger and more ugly form were seen to descend from the middle Heaven. Ex.

5199. I saw many females who appeared like spiders letting themselves down by threads when they were cast out of Heaven. It was their affections which thus appeared. These women des.

E. 581⁴. Deceitful falsities are signified by 'the spider's webs which they weave' (Is.lix.5).

J. (Post.) 170. (A solitudian Spirit) ordained a Society as a spider does its web, placing himself in the middle. . . . All such want to get into the Heavens . . .

Spike. Under EAR, and POINT—spiculum.

Spinal Marrow. Medulla spinalis.

A. 4325. See MEDULLA OBLONGATA. W.366².

5717. Such Spirits rush . . . by continuity even into the spinal marrow. D.1781.

8593. These Genii belong . . . also to that part of the spinal marrow which emits fibres and nerves to the involuntary things.

D. 3607. How (the fibres) are united in the spinal marrow.

4571. The middle Spirits who are directly . . . under the spinal marrow . . . infuse a feverish heat.

4952. A place near the lower part of the spinal marrow . . .

D. Min. 4705. A crowd ascended along the spinal marrow . . .

E. 775². The nerves by which the cerebrum, cerebellum, and spinal marrow form the whole body . . .

D. Wis.ii². All the organs, etc. are mere contextures of fibres and nerves flowing out of both brains and the spinal marrow . . .

— . Around about the cerebrum, and within it, and in the cerebellum, and in the spinal marrow, there are spherules like molecules called the cortical and cineritious substances and glands, and all the fibres . . . proceed from these spherules . . . These are the initial forms . . .

v². See BRAIN.

Spiral. Helix.

See SPOON.

A. 5989. He was more deceitful than they, which he showed by rolling himself into the form of a spiral.

P. 211^e. Like raising a weight by screws.

319². See VORTEX.

M. 13². The trees . . . ran . . . in gyres as of a perpetual spiral: it was a perfect arboreal spiral . . .

183. Palms and laurels planted in the gyres of spirals.

T. 578^e. As the spiritual organism of the mind consists of perpetual spirals, it would coil itself up into spires, and would writhe like a serpent . . .

D. 2318. Such is the flux of the endeavours and forces . . . by spirals from left to right towards their centres . . .

4098. She showed herself . . . in a long form of a spiral; (and then) as a long solid spiral; by which it was shown that she was among the more deceitful. 4424.

Spiral. Spiralis.

Spire. Spira.

A. 5060². Spiral windings around the feet represented a desire to insinuate themselves . . . D.4082.

5559. The cuticles (with such) consist of spires . . .

W. 254². The closing of the spiritual degree is like the retorsion of a spire into the opposite . . . 263². Ex. M.203².

263². But if the spiritual mind is opened . . . it reverses the spire in which are the action and reaction of the natural mind. Ex.

—⁴. The state of the natural mind before reformation may be compared to a spire winding downwards: but after it to a spire winding upwards . . .

P. 319³. With the good, these (organic forms) are spirated—spiratae—forwards; with the evil, backwards . . .

M. 264. His turban was wound in spires like a snake . . .

461^e. A bright light wound down in spiral windings . . .

T. 258^e. The fibril of the nerve coils itself into a spire.

578^e. See SPIRAL—helix.

D. 1233. The cloud wound itself into the form of a spiral—spiralis seu heliis.

2846^e. Those who are elevated . . . as it were into a spire [do] the best.

3222. (The spiral twistings of a murderer.)

3482. The intestinal spires. Ex.

3495^e. The Spirits (through whom the influx came in succession) formed—agerent—a kind of circular spire; so that the influxes of the Lord's life inflow as it were through a form perpetually spiral.

3968. The most deceitful (acted by) spiral windings.

4992. She had a chamber drawn out into a spire, and she entered through the spire, and sat in the middle, and ruled thence on all sides.

D. Min. 4581. (This magic) is done with a spiral figure in deceitful ways . . .

Spirit. Spiritus.

See ANGELIC SPIRIT, EVIL SPIRIT, GOOD SPIRIT, HEAVEN OF SPIRITS, HOLY SPIRIT, and WORLD OF SPIRITS.

A. 5. (E.S. constantly with Spirits and Angels.) 59².

—². I have been instructed about different kinds of Spirits.

19. 'The spirit of God' (Gen.i.2)=the mercy of the Lord. 24. (=the Divine truth. R.200².)

34. Spirits in knowledge without love are in such a frigid life and obscure light . . .

50. Man is ruled . . . through Angels and Spirits.

— . With every man there are at least two Spirits, and two Angels: through the Spirits he has communication with the World of Spirits, through the Angels, with Heaven. Without (this) communication, he could not live. (Continued under ANGEL.) (Compare 697.)

69. Man . . . could have spoken with Spirits and Angels . . . for he is one with them, because he is a Spirit clothed with a body.

— . As soon as corporeal things recede, the way is (again) opened, and the man is among Spirits, and shares life with them.

97. Spirit, or life, likened to 'wind.' Ex. and Ill.

171. (During resuscitation) I was removed from communication with Spirits in the World of Spirits, because they supposed I had departed from the life of the body.

185. He is then made aware that he is a Spirit. (His first experiences as such.) H.450.

196². What (such) believe concerning the Spirit. (Fully stated.)

— . Thus they deny there is a Spirit. 206.

— . Philosophers speak about the Spirit in terms they do not understand. Des. 446^e.

318². He was translated among celestial Spirits. Des.

320. On the life of a soul, or Spirit. Gen.art.

— . When told that he is a Spirit, he is astounded, both because he is exactly like a man . . . and because he had not believed there is a Spirit, or that a Spirit could be such.

321. A Spirit has much more excellent faculties. Des. But Spirits are not aware of this until reflection is given them. 1389.

322. (The exquisite bodily sense of Spirits, fully des.) 1514.

—². (The excellence of their mental faculties and speech, fully des.)

—^e. It is the Spirit which sensates in the body. Ex 447^e.

443. He had believed that the Spirit would live an obscure life. Des.

444. One who had believed that the Spirit is not extended . . . I asked what he thought now about himself . . . He said that the Spirit is thought. (E.S. shows him that even thought implies an organic substance.)

445. The learned believe that a Spirit is abstract thought. Ex. Thus that it will vanish when they die.

446. I spoke with Spirits . . . that men do not believe in a Spirit because they do not see it . . . or apprehend it . . . thus deny its extension, and that it is a substance . . . that it is in a place, consequently in the human body . . . The Spirits, who were simple, marvelled . . .

447. A recent Spirit asked me, What is a Spirit? supposing himself a man. I told him there is a Spirit in every man, and that as to his life man is a Spirit. Ex. . . I told him that he was now a Soul, or Spirit, which he might know from the fact that he was over my head . . . He then fled away, crying, I am a Spirit, I am a Spirit. D.2288.

—². A Jew, when shown that he was a Spirit, persisted that he was a man, because he could see and hear. 941².

537. A Spirit applied himself to my left side, asking how he could enter Heaven . . .

— . (Another) recent Spirit desired Heaven. (His anguish on feeling it.) (See also 538-548. 1398.)

573. 'My Spirit shall not reprove man . . .' (Gen. vi.3)= . . . an internal dictate . . . also the influx of truth and good.

597². The Most Ancient Church had . . . consort with Spirits and Angels.

643². 'No breath in the midst of it' (Hab.ii.19)= nothing celestial and spiritual.

661^e. 'The breath of lives.' Ex. (Compare A.94.) 805.

739². 'A wind of storms' (Ezek.xiii.11)=the desolation of falsity.

784². (Since the most ancient times) many have spoken with Spirits and Angels, as Moses . . . but in an entirely different way.

* All statements relating to the speech of Spirits among themselves, and to man's speech with Spirits, are fully quoted under SPEAK, from beginning to end.

830². Whatever a Spirit thinks, those near at once know . . .

938. At first (such) do not know they are Spirits.

950. A phalanx of Spirits rising from Gehenna . . .

958. Cohorts of Spirits wander about, whom other Spirits greatly fear. Des.

969. Suppose Spirits to have no sense . . .

978. Spirits (also) have an external, (an interior, and an internal man). 1718^e.

1008². A Spirit is known from his ideas. Des.

1111². Spirits can give others heat.

1121. Their interior man, or Spirit, was joined to Heaven by internal respiration.

1266². If the Lord had not come . . . no Spirit could have been with man; yet he cannot live a moment unless Spirits and Angels are with him.

1270². Otherwise these Spirits would have been suffocated, although they would have revived, but after torture.

1274³. All Spirits and Angels are near enough to be seen, but no more come into view than the Lord permits.

—⁴. Spirits of whom others are thinking . . . when the Lord permits, are present. Des.

1275. The Spirits around me (then) appeared to be removed, and were seen below me, yet I could hear them.

1286². 'The breath of His lips' (Is.xi.4)=doctrine.

1376. I spoke with Spirits about the idea of place and distance with them. Ex.

— . Spirits to whom bodily and earthly ideas adhere . . .

— . Such Spirits can scarcely be brought to believe that they are not living in the body.

—^e. All Spirits and Angels keep constantly in their own situation . . .

— . Spirits appear in a place where they are not. Ex.

1378. Spirits, as Spirits, as to the organic things which constitute their bodies, are not in the place where they are seen, but may be far away. Ex.

1379. (Thus) the walkings and translations of Spirits . . . are nothing but changes of state. Ex.

1380. Spirits can be translated on high in a moment . . . and in the same moment deep down; and also from one end of the universe to the other. Des.

1383. The perception of Spirits and Angels. Gen.art.

1385. Spirits of the scarfskin. Des.

1386. So long as Spirits suppose that they (do everything) from themselves, they cannot have perception.

1388². Man derives (this) from the nature—indole—of Spirits, thus from man's spirit, and its communication with the World of Spirits.

—^e. Hence such a perception reigns universally among Spirits.

1390. There is (such) a communication that one Spirit supposes he has known what another knows . . . Some Spirits retain it; others do not.

1396. A Spirit who wanted to arrogate merit (was detected) from afar. Des.

1399. Every Spirit has communication with the interior and the inmost Heaven, although quite unaware of it; otherwise he could not live. His interior quality is known by the Angels who are in his interiors, and through those Angels he is ruled by the Lord. Thus there are communications of his interiors in Heaven, as of his exteriors in the World of Spirits. Ex.

1480. Man's spirit is greatly delighted with knowledge . . . It is its food . . .

1506. See SPHERE. 1510. 1520.

1516. Spirits said they have not the sense of taste. Ex.

1521. Spirits and Angels have every sense, except taste, far more perfect than man ever has. (Their world des.) 1880. 1973.

1524. See ANGEL.

1533^e. (Yet) unless Spirits were organic, and Angels were organic substances, they could not speak, etc.

1628². The things there are adapted to the senses of Spirits and Angels; for Spirits cannot see a whit of the things (here).

1629². As Spirits are perfected, their abodes are changed into more beautiful ones. Des.

1630. Spirits are very indignant at (the ideas men have about them). 1881.

1634. On the speech of Spirits and Angels. Gen.art. (Fully quoted under SPEAK, from 1635 to 1649. And also from 1757 to 1764.)

1636. Certain (learned) Spirits . . . were brought into a state of thought similar to what they had had here. . . They then said that it is a phantasy to believe that anyone can speak with Spirits. (This shows) how difficult it is for men to believe that speaking with Spirits is possible . . . The reason is that they do not believe there are Spirits, still less that they themselves will come among them . . .

1640. I perceive . . . where the Spirits are . . . over head, or below; at the right, or the left; at the ear, or at some other point near or inside the body; and at what distance. Ex.

1643^e. These (angelic representatives) are the things which inflow into the ideas of Spirits.

1673². For every man is ruled by the Lord through Spirits. 2025^e. 2121².

—³. This kind of persuasions is not so deadly, yet they cause much discomfort to Spirits . . .

— . Such Spirits excite in man nothing but confirmations of falsity. Des.

—⁴. How man may know whether he is ruled by such Spirits.

—^e. Such is the influx of Spirits with man.

1680. All Spirits (there) are distinguished in this way. Ex. (So also) man can know among which kind he is.

1761. Spirits who do not inflow in a stream-like way, but by vibrations and reciprocations as it were linear. (Continued under SPEAK.)

1763. These Spirits are separated from others: they induce a pain in the head, as if from the suction of an air-pump.

[A.]1769. A Spirit came to me not long after his decease, (for) he did not know he was in the other life . . . He was taken up on high . . . and spoke with me thence . . . I was reading (the Word). He said he perceived nothing of the sense of the letter; but (indescribable) wonders in the spiritual sense. Des.

—⁴. Other (incredulous) Spirits were taken up, and confessed it was so. Des. 1771. 3474. D.2053.

1773. Spirits who (here) had been delighted with the Word, have a delightful heavenly heat. Des.

1774. Spirits who do not want to hear about the interiors of the Word. Des.

1815. The interior man, or spirit itself, is from the father . . .

1873. Spirits spoke about the internal sense . . .

1876. (The speech of Spirits among themselves, and with men. See SPEAK, here, and at 2470. 2477. 2733. 2751, 3342. 4652. 6996². 8734. D.1888. 2142. 2308. 2868. 2869. 3050. 3128. 4335. 4342. 4865. 4866. 5557. 5585. 5588. 5772. 5787.)

1880. Spirits, and still less Angels, cannot see anything in this world . . . with the sight of the spirit. Ex.

—². But Spirits and Angels, when the Lord pleases, can see the things in this world through the eyes of a man (whom the Lord permits) to speak with them. Examp. 1954.

— . I was forbidden to tell (people that their departed friends saw them through my eyes) because . . . at heart they did not believe there are Spirits . . .

—³. Spirits and Angels were astounded when they first saw through my eyes, and were affected with a new joy on account of this communication . . .

— . With other men, Spirits and Angels do not see a whit . . . but only perceive the thoughts and affections of those with whom they are.

1882. Being carried by the spirit into another place. Ex. 1884, Ex.

1886, Pref.³. Man is a Spirit clothed with a body. 1970.

1931². Common Spirits perceive man's thoughts (and memory) better than the man himself; angelic Spirits the still more interior things of his thoughts; and Angels . . . the causes and ends . . . 2488, Ex.

1937². (Useless Spirits who hang down their hands. Des.)

1967. Spirits who induce illusory visions. Ex. D.1752.

1968. The visions of enthusiastic Spirits. Ex.

1970². When the internal sight is opened . . . not only the representatives, but also the Spirits themselves are seen, together with a perception of who they are, etc.

1972. Through intermediate Spirits.

1973. How Spirits are affected by the things which they see; and how evil Spirits are tortured when they cannot see and hear as others do. 1974, Examp.

—². Spirits have no sense of taste; but instead an appetite for learning, which is their food. Their anguish when this food is taken away. 3114.

1980². (Dreams are according to the state of the Spirits around us. (See DREAM, here.)

1992⁸. In the Ancient Church, Spirits who reproved and afterwards comforted were often heard. They called them 'God Shaddai.' Ex.

2121². The Spirits who are with man are (now, before the Last Judgment,) more excited than ever to bring malignant things upon him; inasmuch that the Angels can scarcely avert them, but are compelled to inflow into man more remotely.

2123. For man is ruled through Spirits, with whom those in the World of Spirits have communication.

2125. There appeared Spirits so black in a black cloud that I was horrified; and afterwards, others not so horrible. Ex.

2129. Such Spirits are driven into a state . . . in which they do not think in Society. Des. and Ex.

2294. Such a desire (to lead others to think and speak) is innate in Spirits.

2469. The interior memory is proper to the spirit of man.

2477. Would it be advantageous for Spirits to use the exterior memory? (Fully quoted under MEMORY, here, and at 2478. H.256.)

2479. A recent Spirit indignant because he could not remember more. (Fully ex. under MEMORY.) 2481.

2491. Spirits who relate to the interior memory.

2588⁷. Sight is (really) of the spirit, which sees through the eye. Ex.

— . The things of the body cannot enter into those of the Spirit; but the reverse, (because compounds cannot enter into simples).

2599. Spirits reason much more fully and acutely than men . . .

2625. For recent Spirits have with them the idea of natural things . . .

2682³. While man is in the body, he lives in Heaven as to his spirit . . .

—^c. For few believe they have a spirit which will live after death.

2702^c. To be born of the Spirit (John iii.5) = of the Celestial of faith.

2733. A Spirit who had been a general, and an adulterer. Des.

2746. A lascivious Spirit who had extinguished in himself all desire for marriage and offspring.

2748. Adulterous Spirits seeking a house into which to insinuate themselves. Des.

2752. (Such Spirits) are kept in Hell lest they should come among those Spirits who are with men.

2762. Such representatives are continual with Spirits. Des.

— . Spirits from another orb. 3348. 4799.

2763. The Most Ancients were together with Spirits and Angels.

2796. All things are disposed through the Spirits and Angels with man.

2832⁷. 'Seven Spirits sent forth into all the earth' (Rev. v.6)=holy preachings of Divine truths.

2891. Recent Spirits torment themselves about . . .

2930³. 'Soul'=affection of truth; 'spirit,' affection of good.

3110³. This Divine disposition is made by the Lord, by means of Spirits and Angels.

3212². The body is only the covering of the spirit, and when it is put off, the spirit appears; but in a quite different form when the man has been regenerated. Des.

3215. The representatives with Spirits. Ex.

3219. Spirits falling upon me. Ex.

3224². Spirits who are solely in the things of the light of the world . . .

3293². For a Spirit also has a natural life; for his spiritual life is terminated in a natural one. Ex.

3342². For man is a Spirit clothed with a body. 3527.

—^e. How man may know that he has a spirit in him.

3425³. The spirit of (such a one) is bright and beautiful . . . But the spirit of (such a one) is black and ugly.

3482. The Ancients had communication with Spirits and Angels. (See SPEAK.)

3527. Man knows these things (from) the life of his spirit . . . He has such knowledge from the perception of his spirit.

3607. There are Spirits in the way who reject the ideas of evil and falsity . . .

3633. All Spirits and Angels appear to themselves as men. (The reason ex.)

3634. As to his spirit he is in Heaven.

3647. (Sailor and rustic Spirits like machines. Their restoration to human life by the Angels.)

3660³. Such things are adapted to the apprehension . . . of Angels, and also to that of Spirits; for their thoughts are not interrupted (by) earthly things. Des.

3679⁵. But Spirits and Angels do not think like man. Ex.

— . (Thus) there are Spirits who are rational, who think spiritually; and (the reverse).

—⁶. According to the idea of Spirits, this is called . . .

3726⁴. Spirits themselves are forms, that is, they consist of continuous forms, equally as do men, but from purer things . . .

— . Hence is the insanity of our age: that men do not believe they have a spirit in them which will live after death . . . when yet it is a substance much more real than the material substance of its body; nay, the spirit, after being loosed from corporeal things, is that very purified body which many say they will have at the last Judgment.

—^e. That Spirits, or, what is the same, Souls, have a body. Des.

3748. A Spirit who . . . supposed he knew everything . . .

— . Such as Spirits had been (here), such they are there. Ex.

3749. A Spirit who came unawares and inflowed into my head . . .

— . Spirits are known by their influx into different parts of the body.

— . This Spirit had been taken from the Spirits with a learned man still living (here). . . Communication was given through this intermediate Spirit with the thought of that man (and the Spirit tells E. S. what that man's ideas are about Heaven, etc.).

3750². One of these Spirits (over head) let himself down to me. He had been a pope. (He states his ideas about the keys, etc.).

—³. (Spirits can easily be let into the state of life they had had here.)

3812⁶. 'The Spirit' which entered into the dry bones (Ezek. xxxvii.)=the Lord's life, which when it inflows into the good of a man which he seems to himself to will and do from proprium, causes the good to be vivified . . .

3893. For Spirits and Angels have a sonorous voice. (Their singing, des.)

3938². For men, Spirits, and Angels are nothing but . . . forms recipient of life from the Lord.

—³. What proceeds from the Lord . . . is not in Him, but from Him, and causes men, Spirits, and Angels to come forth . . .

3957². (By death) man passes from shade to light, because . . . from the things of the body to those of the spirit.

3969¹⁷. The Divine Spiritual which proceeds from Him is called 'the Spirit of truth.' It is holy truth, and is not of any Spirit, but of the Lord through a Spirit sent by Him. Ill.

3993³. How the Lord reduces the Natural to correspondence with the man of man's interior, that is, with that which will live after death of the body, and is then called the man's Spirit, which when loosed from the body, has with it all things of the external man, except the bones and flesh.

4046. Spirits of the dura mater. Des.

4047². All Spirits and Angels may be known from the Lord's prayer. Ex.

— . These Spirits could serve the Angels as mediums; for there are intermediate Spirits between the Heavens, through whom is communication. Des.

4048. Tranquil Spirits of the sinuses of the brain. Des.

4049. The Spirits of the ventricles of the brain. Des. 4050.

4051. The Spirits of the isthmus of the brain . . . said they were men. I replied that they were not men endowed with bodies, but Spirits, and thus also men. Ex. 5189, Des. D. 3822-3837.

4077³. Spirits lament that man does not know . . . that they are with him . . . Yet (everything) of his thought and will comes through them . . . and through them the Lord rules the human race . . .

4096⁶. Doubts and denials are excited by the Spirits adjoined to the man.

4099². So far as man is initiated into heavenly things . . . the Spirits in worldly things are removed. (otherwise) truths are dissipated.

[A.]4110². Good, middle, and evil Spirits are adjoined to a regenerating man. Ex. (Continued under SEPARATE.)

4186². As soon as Spirits come to man and enter into his affection, they know no otherwise than that all things of his affection and thought are theirs. Thus are Spirits conjoined with man, through whom he is ruled by the Lord.

4221. A Spirit with a corporeal sphere. (See SPEAK, here.)

4227². Spirits act more subtly than men. Ex.

—³. These Spirits correspond to the corruptions of the purer blood . . . Des.

4249². The things which come forth with the Spirits and Angels with a man are perceived by the man just as if they were in himself. Ex.

4307. The presence of Spirits with man is according to his loves. Ex. . . Thus everyone may know the quality of the Spirits with him, provided he observes that of his loves, or ends.

4329. The Spirits of the general voluntary sense. Fully des. (See GENERAL, here.)

—². An intermediate Spirit.

4330. Spirits of this Earth relate to the external man. (See SOCIETY, here.)

—Spirits from this Earth (infested) the Spirits who relate to the internal sensuous. Des.

—³. The external sensuous Spirits (could not breathe in the sphere) of the internal sensuous ones. Des. and Ex.

4345³. The corporeal things are the most general of those which belong to the spirit; (and) exist and subsist from the things of the spirit; thus the things of the spirit are relatively particular. (This is made evident when the man becomes a Spirit); and, when the same Spirit becomes an Angel, . . . the things he had previously seen and felt in general . . . he sees and feels in particular. Ex. and Sig.

4364¹. That man is a Spirit, and is clothed with a body. Ex.

—His Spirit is himself . . .

4403. (Spirits are Known by their situation relatively to the human body. See SITUATION at A.3639.)

—Spirits seen near me are mostly Subjects of entire Societies. (See SUBJECT.)

—². (Ten classes of Spirits, and their correspondence with various parts of the body. Enum.)

4406. For man's spirit is in the light of Heaven; his body in that of the world.

—It is the Spirit which lives in the body, and thinks.

4407^e. For man's spirit is in society with Spirits and Angels, (and so the man knows this truth).

4416. Spirits (are Known) from the light in which they are. Ex.

4417. (A conversation with Spirits about life.)

—^e. The withdrawal of delight is effected (there) by the separation of the Spirits in whose society they are. (The effect of this.)

4459². Not knowing that the life of their body is from that of their spirit . . .

4464¹. That the soul or spirit is the man who lives after death . . .

4527. They marvelled that Spirits have eyes . . .

—Spirits appear to themselves exactly like men, see each other, hear, speak, feel their members by the touch, more exquisitely than (when here). Ex. 4622², Ex.

—^e. Man can see Spirits only with the eyes of his spirit; he sees them when the Lord opens his internal sight, as was done with the prophets . . .

4545⁶. (The representatives) affected the Spirits who were with (the Israelites) . . .

4572². This combat arises among the Spirits who are with the man. Ex.

4577². The Divine truth is 'the Spirit of Truth.' III.

4622. For all things there are adapted to the sensations of Spirits and Angels . . .

—². (How men might easily come into right ideas about the Spirit. Ex.)

—³. It is not the body which sees, etc. but its spirit; and therefore when the spirit puts off the body, it is in its own sensations, in those in which it had been in the body, and indeed in much more exquisite ones. Ex. and Des.

—⁴. As soon (after death) as a man observes that he has more exquisite sensations, especially when he begins to speak with other Spirits, he notices that he is in the other life, and that the death of his body had been the continuation of the life of his spirit. (Two examp. of this.)

4623. The sensitive life of spirits is twofold, real, and not real. Ex. . . Whatever comes from the proprium of a Spirit is not real. Ex.

—³. Beware when you come into the other life; for evil Spirits present illusions, and if they cannot deceive, they try to persuade thereby that nothing is real . . .

4652. The correspondence between . . . the things of the spirit which is within man, and those of the body. (Ex. under SPEAK, here.)

4653. (The Spirits of the ears. Fully quoted under EAR.) 4653a. 4654. 4655. 4656. 4657. 4658.

—For the spirit of man is among the Spirits who are in the other life, and thinks there . . .

4653a. Substantiated things which are nearer the spirit, and which at last are in the spirit.

4658². Aristotle had followed obediently the things which his spirit had dictated.

—⁵. A woman often appeared to Aristotle, who stroked his cheek with her beautiful hand. Such women were sometimes seen by the ancients, who called them Pallases, and the one who appeared to him was from the Spirits who as men in ancient times had been delighted with ideas . . .

4659. It might be supposed that the spirit dwells within the body, and that the body as it were clothes it; but it is to be known that the spirit of man is in the body, in the whole, and in every part of it; and that it is its purer substance, in both its motory and its sensory organs, and everywhere else; and that the body is what is material everywhere annexed to it . . . This is what is meant by man being a Spirit, and the body serving him for uses in the world; and by the spirit being the internal of man, and the body his external. From this it is evident that after death man is in similar active and sensitive life; and is also in the human form, as (here), but in a more perfect one.

4676. For the internal man, or spirit of man, knows not what old age is; but, as the body, or external man, grows old, the former passes into newness of life: the spirit of man is perfected in age as his Corporeal decreases, and still more so in the other life . . .

—². Although the spirit knows not what old age is, (and) the spirit is what thinks in the body, and the body has life from it: (yet) this thought of the spirit cannot be communicated to the body, and so cause man to know that he lives after death, for the reason that so long as the spirit remains in the body, it cannot think otherwise than from the principles which the natural man has imbued . . .

4682². 'I will pour My Spirit upon them' (Joel ii.28) = to instruct about truths.

4744³. 'The unclean Spirit' (Matt. xii.43) = the uncleanness of life with man; and also the unclean Spirits who are with him; for unclean Spirits dwell in the uncleanness of man's life.

4792. How Spirits and Angels are nourished. (See Food, here.)

4793. No Spirit or Angel is permitted to inflow into man's taste. (Ex. under TASTE.) Yet there are wandering infernal Spirits . . . who study to do so, and (thus) possess the man's interiors. At this day very many are possessed by them; for there are interior obsessions now. (The signs of them.)

—⁴. These pernicious Spirits try to loosen all internal bonds. Ex. When these have been loosed, the man is obsessed by such Spirits. (Continued under OBSESS.)

—⁵. How these Spirits are driven away. When they supposed that they were penetrating to the interiors of the head, they were conveyed away through excrementitious ways . . . They correspond to the filthy cavernules where the itch is.

4794. A Spirit . . . has all the sensations he had while (here), except taste: in place of this he has something analogous which is adjoined to smell. Ex.

4800^e. To what province they are allotted is hidden from Spirits; but not from Angels.

4804. (The Societies of friendship) turn the Spirits who are with others to themselves, and thus transfer the delight of the other to themselves.

4882. It appears to Spirits and Angels that they too move from place to place. Ex.

—³. Every Spirit and Angel sees the good to the right, and the evil to the left. Ex.

5056. (A Spirit from another Earth who ardently desired to be admitted into Heaven. Des.) 8847.

5061. (Some Spirits who had hated me when in the body. Des.)

5078³. Man rises immediately after death, and then appears to himself in a body exactly as in the world, with the same kind of a face, members, arms, hands, feet, breast, belly, loins; and, when he sees and touches himself, he says he is a man just as in the world; yet it is not his external . . . which he sees and touches, but his internal, which constitutes that very human itself which is alive. Ex. . . That I might be certain of these things, it has been granted me to touch Spirits themselves, and to speak with them often about this subject. —⁵, Ex.

5094³. A rational natural man comprehends that there are Spirits and Angels who are invisible; but a sensuous man does not comprehend it.

5141. When man is in interior thought from affection . . . he is almost in his Spirit . . . But when he is in pleasures . . . his life is in the body . . .

5160. 'By water and the Spirit' = by faith and charity.

5165³. The faces of Spirits and Angels are formed from the exterior Natural.

5172. The Spirits of the thymus gland. Des.

5174. The first agitations of Spirits. Rep.

5180. The Genii and Spirits of the receptacle and ducts of the chyle. Des.

5181. The provinces of Spirits and Angels as known from the gyres. Examps.

5187. The Spirits of the gall bladder. Des.

5188. The Spirits of the sores called tubercles. Des.

5210. In the degree of such clearness or obscurity (of truths), Spirits are awake or asleep.

5222. 'His spirit was troubled' (Gen. xli.8) = disturbance. . . 'The spirit,' here, and elsewhere, means the interior affection and thought, which in fact are the spirit of man. The ancients called these the spirit: but by the spirit, in special, they meant the interior man who will live after death.

— But by 'the spirit,' at this day, when read of in such a sense, is meant the mere thinking principle, without any other subject than the body. Examps.

5223². Therefore many of the magi communicated with Spirits . . .

5229. Hence Angels and Spirits can meet all whom they ever heard of.

5246². When man is being tempted, unclean Spirits are near him. Ex.

5247. The hair of Spirits. Des.

5248. The garments of Spirits and Angels. See GARMENT, here.)

5307. 'The Spirit of God' (Gen. xli.38) = good from the interior, thus from the Divine; for 'the Spirit of God' is that which proceeds from the Divine, thus from good itself . . . and that which proceeds from it is truth in which is good; and this is what is signified in the Word by 'the Spirit of God.' The Spirit itself does not proceed, but the truth in which is good . . . the Spirit being the instrumental through which it is produced.

5323. In that state (of humiliation) there is a deficiency of the spirits . . .

5342^e. 'To be born of the spirit' = the good of life.

[A.] 5378. (The Spirits of the peritoneum infested by those of the kidneys, ureters, and bladder. Des.) See also 5379.

5380. The Spirits of the kidneys, ureters, and bladder. Des. 5381. 5382. 5383. 5384.

5383². As soon as any Spirit comes to another, and still more to a man, he at once knows his thoughts and affections, and all he had done, thus all his present state . . . But some Spirits perceive the interior things, and some only the exterior ones . . .

5386. The over-conscientious Spirits and their correspondence. Des.

5387. A piratical Spirit of the urine. Des. (See also 5388.)

—². The Spirits who correspond to the voiding of the urine.

5389. The wandering Spirits of the neck of the bladder. Des.

5396. A disorderly crowd of Spirits reduced into order. (See CHOIR, here.)

5427². Mediate Spirits and their use. Ex.

5470. With every man, there are two Spirits from Hell and two Angels from Heaven; (otherwise) man (as now born) could not live. (Continued under ANGEL.)

5553. The Spirits of the skins and integuments. Des. 5554. 5555. 5556.

5557. (Female Spirits through whom others speak. (Des. under SPEAK, and at 5561.)

5558. Spirits who say it is so, experimentally. Ex.

5560. The Spirits of the cartilages and bones. Des. 5561-5564.

5565. The Spirits of the teeth. Des. 5566-5568.

5569-5573. Spirits as characterised by the hair. Des.

5660². The like happens with Spirits who are being initiated into good through truths.

5713-5724. The Spirits of diseases. Gen.art.

5716. Spirits who infuse unclean colds . . . The same induce things which disturb the mind. They also induce swoons.

5717. How Spirits destroyed whole armies. Ex. D.1783.

5718. Spirits who excite enmities among others in order to dominate. Des.

5719. The Spirits who despise the Word . . . are kept separate from others . . . and communicate only with those of the same character.

5720-5722. Spirits who had been hypocrites. Des. . . . When applied to man they induce great tedium. Des. . . . They want to be called devils, provided they are allowed to command the Hells. Ex. . . . They are afterwards rejected out of the World of Spirits.

5723. Spirits with me who induced an unendurable oppression in the stomach. . . . When they were removed, it at once ceased. Such Spirits are those who (here) had lived in filthy idleness. Des. . . . The sphere of such with the sick induces a torpor on the members and joints.

5847. No man, Spirit, or Angel has life from himself, thus cannot think and will from himself. Ex.

5848. In order that the Lord's life may inflow . . . there are Angels and Spirits continually with man . . . two of each. Ex.

5849. The two Spirits adjoined to a man cause communication with Hell, and the two Angels, with Heaven. . . . If these communications were taken away, the man would fall down dead. (Shown by experiment.)

— . Few believe there is any Spirit with them, or that there are any Spirits. (The cause of this.)

5850. As men are not in order . . . there is particular influx into them, that is, there are Angels and Spirits with them, through whom there is influx. (Otherwise) men would rush into every wickedness. Ex.

5851. The Spirits with a man are changed according to his state. Ex.

— . The Spirits with a man are such as he himself is: there are avaricious Spirits with a miser, and so on. . . . Man summons Spirits from Hell according to his life.

5852. While evil Spirits are with a man, they are in the World of Spirits. (See EVIL SPIRIT, here.)

5853. The Spirits who flow to a man enter into all his memory. (Fully quoted under MEMORY.) 5857. 5858. 5859. 5865². 6192. 6200.

5854. Spirits inflow into the thoughts and voluntary things of man; but Angels into the ends. Ex.

5855. Before it was opened to me to speak with Spirits, I supposed that no Spirit or Angel could know my thoughts . . .

—². A Spirit knows not only the thoughts which the man himself knows, but also the least things of his thoughts and affections, which the man does not know . . . 6214².

5856^e. The Spirits and Angels who are with a man are (Subjects). Ex. 5983.

5857. Spirits are learned with the learned, stupid with the stupid, etc.

5858. Whatever Spirits think or speak from the man's memory, they suppose to be their own. Des. . . . They have their own scientifics as well, but are not allowed to use them.

5859. Spirits who supposed they had always been with me. Des.

5860. The Spirits with a man put on his persuasions also. . . . Thus the Spirits with those who are in heresies are in the like, and so on. This is in order that man may . . . not be disturbed by anything proper to the Spirit.

5861. Thus man . . . as to his Spirit is in consort with other Spirits, and is so joined to them that he cannot think or will anything, except together with them. . . . Thus only can he be led by the Lord. (Continued under SOCIETY.)

5862. The Spirits with man do not know they are with him; only the Angels know this; for they are adjoined to his soul or spirit, and not to his body. (Continued under SPEAK.)

—^e. With me, however, Spirits have known that I was a man in the body, and (they could) see through my eyes, and hear those speaking to me.

5863. If evil Spirits were to perceive that they are . . . separate Spirits from the man . . . they would try to destroy him. (Continued under EVIL SPIRIT.)

5864. As evil Spirits have heard that there are Spirits with man, they have supposed they could meet those Spirits, and man together with them . . . but in vain.

5865. A Spirit, not evil, was permitted to pass to a certain man . . . He said that there appeared to him a black inanimate something. Ex.

—². An evil Spirit was let into the state of the body. Ex.

—^e. Usually Spirits are not allowed to look into the corporeals of man . . . When Spirits look into the things of the light of the world, they appear to them as mere darkness.

5874². When a man becomes a Spirit he is not allowed to use his scientifics, and yet he thinks and speaks about truth and good much more distinctly and perfectly.

5883². When man dies . . . the Internal which lives after the separation from the external, is what is then called a Spirit, but it is the man himself who had lived in the body, and he appears to himself and others as a man . . . endowed with the same faculties . . . and, when he does not reflect . . . he supposes that he is in his body in the world. 6054, Des.

5887. The breath . . . relates to the things of the understanding.

5888. Sadness of the spirit, or understanding. Sig. and Ex.

5951². Fibres from the brain full of spirit.

5954². Truths clothe good, as . . . fibres the spirit.

5962². Morning, noon, and evening with Spirits and Angels. Ex.

5972. 'The spirit of Jacob revived' (Gen. xlv. 27) = new life.

5977. The reason there are two Spirits and Angels with every man, is that there are two kinds of Spirits in Hell, and two kinds of Angels in Heaven . . . The first kind of Spirits are called simply Spirits, and act into intellectual things; the second kind are called Genii, and act into voluntary things. Ex. (Continued under GENII.)

5986². The Spirits were very indignant at this experience; for every one of them wants to think and speak from himself.

5990. At this day there are very many Spirits who want to inflow not only into man's thoughts and affections, but also into his speech and actions, thus also into his corporeals; when yet these are exempt from the particular influx of Spirits and Angels, and are ruled by general influx. Ex. . . The Spirits who want this are such as had been adulterers. Ex. . .

Such are not allowed to go into the World of Spirits. Hence there are no external obsessions now; but there are internal ones. Ex.

5991. Spirits who are to be called corporeal, seen. They appeared as if in a gross body. Who they had been (here).

6119². 'The breath of his lips' (Is. xi. 4) = Divine truth from which is Judgment.

6167. These things are known even to simple Spirits.

6191. For many years all my thoughts and affections . . . have inflowed through Spirits and Angels as media, as I have perceived evidently. Des. (This shows how man is ruled through them.) 6197, Des.

6192. When Spirits come to a man they put on all his memory . . . The Spirits suppose these things to be their own. Thus they act with the man as if they were the man. But they are not allowed to enter farther with the man than to the things of his thought and will, and not to those of his actions and speech . . . They do not know that they are with a man. Ex. 6193, Ex.

6194. I have sometimes thought and spoken without reflecting that Spirits were present; but they at once addressed me, and told me that they did not know it was not they who were thinking. The nearest Spirits believed it was themselves altogether; the more remote ones less so; and those still more remote, still less so.

6195. Spirits have long been with me, neither very good, nor very evil, who could inflow inwardly into the affections . . . and they so bound themselves to me that it seemed as if they could scarcely be separated. Des. (This shows that it is loves which conjoin.)

6196. Spirits are associated to a man according to his loves. . . As soon as I have begun to love anything intensely, Spirits were present who were in such love, and they were not removed until the love had ceased.

6198. Spirits have been with me who supposed it was they who lived . . . thus that they were I; and when they were told that they were separate Spirits, and that I too was a Spirit as to the interiors, they could not believe it. Des. 6199.

6200. As for nine years I have continually been in consort with Spirits and Angels, I have carefully observed how the case is with influx. Ex.

—^e. The Spirits who were in a more subtle sphere . . .

—². When I have thought about a man known to me . . . that whole man, as he existed in my thought and affection, appeared in a moment with the Spirits. So when I have thought of any city . . . the Spirits knew in a moment everything I had seen or known about it. It is the same with matters of knowledge. Ex.

6201. Thus did my thought appear with Spirits when I was a little withdrawn from sensuous things; but (not) when my thought was in sensuous things. . . To the sensuous are adjoined like Spirits; and these Spirits apprehend scarcely any more things with a man than those which come to his sensation; for they are grosser than the rest.

—². When I have been let down into what is sensuous . . . the Spirits who are in that grosser sphere infused shocking and scandalous things . . . At this day such Spirits abound . . . and the influx from them with man causes him to be self-indulgent, and live for himself and the world . . . To be elevated from them, man must think about eternal life.

[A.]6202. There is another influx, which is not through the Spirits with the man, but through others sent from some infernal Society into the sphere of the man's life; and these speak among themselves about such things as are adverse to the man, (causing him to feel sad, etc. See SPEAK, here.)

— . Such Spirits have often been with me. (Fully des.)

—². See TEMPT.

6211. Why speech and action are not ruled through particular Spirits, as thought and will are. (Ex. under SPEAK, here.)

— . Spirits are allotted to every member of speech and of action; but these Spirits are not aware of it.

6212. (The prophets then spoke and acted) from the Spirits who occupied their bodies. Des. I was shown how they were acted upon by the Spirits. Des.

—⁴. The Spirits occupied their bodies, inasmuch that there was scarcely anything left except that they knew they existed. There were certain Spirits for this use, who did not want to obsess men, but merely to enter into the corporeal affections of the man, (and thus) into all things of his body. The Spirits usually with me said that I was absent from them while in that state.

—⁵. The Spirits who possessed my body . . . afterwards told me that they had (supposed) they had life as in the body.

6214. How difficult it is for man to believe that Spirits know his thoughts. . . Before I spoke with Spirits, it happened that a certain Spirit said a few words to me about what I was thinking of. I was astounded . . . Then, when I began to speak with Spirits, I was indignant that I could think nothing which they did not know of . . . but the use of a few days made it familiar to me.

6251. When Spirits have inquired anything from me, they have received an answer by merely looking into my thought.

6317. (Ideas of the learned about Spirits.) They could not be brought to believe that Spirits enjoy any sense; and everything else they had thought about Spirits was devoid of all quality. The reason was that they had placed life in the body. Ex. . . But the unlearned, who have been in the good of faith, are not such . . .

6319². Before the Spirits with a man, objects do not appear as the man sees them with his eyes, nor are words apprehended as the man hears them with his ears; but [they appear and are apprehended] as the man thinks [of them]. Ex.

6321. There are malignant Spirits who have devised arts to prevent (in part) the angelic influx. Des.

6322. It is the sense of the spirit which sensates through the external sense . . . 6948³.

—². I have seen Spirits separated from an angelic Society because they believed . . . in physical influx.

6324. Spirits who reason much, perceive little of what is true and good. Des.

6400³. When such think about the spirit or soul, they can have no idea of it than as of the invisible things in nature . . . some as of a mere thinking principle . . .

6423. That good . . . may protect Spirits who have recently come from the world. . . it acts through truth.

6470. Every spirit thinks and speaks from others; and these others from others; and so on. 6471, Examp.

6479. Spirits who continually injected doubts. Ex.

6493. I have often spoken with Spirits about fortune . . . Accidents happen because such Spirits are present. Ex. 6494. D.4562.

6612. They who think exteriorly . . . communicate solely with the grosser Spirits; but they who think interiorly . . . with the Angels. (The difference ex.)

6614. How angelic ideas inflow into those of Spirits. (See IDEA, here.) 6615.

6618. Certain Spirits gloried [in the idea] that they know all things. These Spirits relate to the memory. Ex. (See 6696. 6808.)

6620. Spirits who deny that there is anything interior in the Word.

6624. Ideas of thought are the words of Spirits; and ideas of still more interior thought are the words of Angels.

6653. Spirits and Angels think and speak abstractedly. Ex.

6663. Spirits in like evils and falsities are present.

6701. Spirits and Angels from other Earths are all separate from each other according to the Earths. Ex. . . . Nor are they consociated in the Heavens, except in the Third.

6809. Spirits can search the memory with the utmost skill. 6811.

6810. In Mercury many men speak with Spirits, and hence possess Knowledges of spiritual Things . . .

6812. The memory of Spirits is much more perfect than that of men. Ex. 6931.

6914³. In order that (evil men may be kept in the simulation of what is honourable and just) Spirits who are in simple good are joined to them . . .

6928. The Spirits of our Earth, especially when recently in the other life, love corporeal and worldly things . . . and desire to know such things there. They are therefore . . . kept in the Lower Earth until they are averse to such things; and are then elevated into Heaven.

6987². A Spirit can utter in a moment things which a man can scarcely utter in half an hour. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

6996². (The speech of Spirits is unintelligible to man; and that of Angels is unintelligible to Spirits. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

7004. For the Word which is uttered by a Spirit or Angel proceeds from His Divine Human.

7055³. The prophets wrote as the Spirits dictated from the Divine . . .

7069. All Spirits whatever have been men . . . and the Spirits themselves are exactly such as they had been while they lived in the world.

7078. The Spirits of other Earths do not appear within the sphere in which are the Spirits of our Earth, but outside it, some at a greater, and some at a lesser distance, and towards different quarters. Ex. 7358, Ex. 7800.

7111. 'Directors' = intermediate Spirits.

7171. (Our) sun does not appear to any Spirit, nor anything of its light; it is thick darkness to them. (Continued under SUN.)

— . Positions of the planets in the ideas of Spirits and Angels. 7247. 7800.

—^e. Spirits appear near their own planet, but outside of it.

7172. Spirits of our Earth speaking with those of Mercury. Des.

7217. 'Straitness of spirit' (Ex.vi.9)=a state near despair. Ex.

—^e. To the merely natural such appear weak and sick in spirit, but they are strong; whereas the merely natural . . . are quite weak as to the spirit, because they are spiritually dead.

7218. (The times of the day with Spirits. Ex.)

7246. The Spirits of Venus. Gen.art.

7359. The speech of the Spirits of Mars. (Fully quoted under SPEAK, and at 7745. 7747.)

7362. The respiration of the Spirits of Mars. Des.

7475. The Spirits of Mars appear to themselves as men such as they had been in the world, and therefore they appear in the same way to others; for everyone there appears to others as he appears to himself, because the perception is communicated. . . They had known they were Spirits clothed with a body, and had thought chiefly about the life of their spirit in their body. (Continued under MARS.)

—². All Spirits are in the human form; but not in so prominent a one as that in which are the Spirits of Mars.

7476. The Spirits of Mars are among the best of all Spirits from our solar system . . .

7482. In the sphere of the Spirits of Mars the Spirits of our Earth became as if insane. Ex. (See also 910S.)

7648^e. For the spirit, regarded in itself, is the affection in form . . .

7799. The Spirits of Jupiter. Gen.art. 8021, continued. 8242. 8371.

7801. There are many kinds of Spirits from Jupiter. Three kinds of them des.

7802. In (Jupiter) Spirits speak with the inhabitants, and instruct them, and also chastise them. The reason Spirits speak with them is that they think much about . . . the life after death . . .

—². To speak with Spirits and Angels was also common on this Earth in ancient times, from a like cause . . . but this living communication with Heaven was closed as man became external. Ex.

7803. The speech of Spirits with the inhabitants of Jupiter. Ex.

— . The chastising Spirits of Jupiter, des. 8021, Des. 8027.

7804. The instructing Spirits of Jupiter, des. 7806.

7805. The angelic Spirits of Jupiter, des. 7807. 7808.

7806. When the face in the window was seen the Spirit instantly departed.

7809. The men of Jupiter are not allowed to speak back to the Spirits; nor to mention to anyone that a Spirit has spoken to them. . . These Spirits of Jupiter, when with me, at first supposed they were with a man of their earth . . . 8385.

8028. When Angels are about to come, a Spirit is sent before who prepares the way. Ex.

8029. When Spirits of Jupiter become Angels there appear horses as of fire . . .

8031. The Spirits of Jupiter are altogether unwilling to be in the company of Spirits of our Earth. Ex. 8115.

8043². 'I will pour My spirit' (Is.xliv.3)=the good of charity.

8131². The temptations of Spirits. Des.

8409². 'Spirit' (Is.xxxi.3)=what is alive.

8542. (Such inhabitants of Jupiter) are deprived of respiration, and thence of life, by Spirits . . .

8629. A Spirit from the Lower Earth came to me. Des.

8630^e. The Spirits and Angels of Jupiter relate to the Imaginative of thought, and thus to an active state of the interior parts; whereas the Spirits of our Earth relate to various functions of the exterior parts of the body; and the Imaginative of thought cannot inflow into these functions while they want to dominate . . .

8733. (The speech of the Spirits of Jupiter fully des. under SPEAK, here.)

8788². Thus the mere externals of the Israelites could communicate with Spirits, and through them with Angels. 10602^e.

8849. (A Spirit of Jupiter who had a very tender conscience. Des.)

8865². Such Spirits and Angels are with a man as is his universal Regnant. Ex.

8869². As there is nothing of spiritual life in such, it is said 'there is no breath in them' (Jer.x.14).

8882². By 'the unclean Spirit,' when he went out, it meant the acknowledgment and belief of truth. . . By his return with seven others, a state of profanation. N.172², Ex.

8918. The soul or spirit of man is in Heaven, and his body in the world . . .

8949. The inhabitants of Saturn, when they come of age, speak with Spirits, by whom they are instructed about the Lord . . . and how to live.

8950. When any want to seduce the Spirits of Saturn . . . they say they want to die . . . Spirits of our Earth sometimes deride them . . .

8953. The inhabitants and Spirits of Saturn relate to the intermediate between the spiritual and the natural sense, acceding to the spiritual . . . Hence these Spirits often seem to themselves to be rapt into Heaven, and afterwards let back . . . 9107.

9104. Some Spirits of this Earth passed over to the Spirits of Saturn, who . . . appear at the end of our solar world. (The conversation between them. 9105.)

9105. The Spirits of Saturn then spoke with me through intermediate Spirits . . .

9106. The Spirits of Saturn are visited by those of Mercury. Des.

9107. The Spirits of our Earth relate to the natural and corporeal sense; thus to the external man; but the Spirits of Saturn to the internal man . . .

9166. When Angels converse about two discrepant truths, two disputing Spirits are presented below who are the Subjects of many Societies . . .

9213. For when an Angel or Spirit is in externals, he is in shade; but when in internals he is in the delights of heavenly loves . . .

9232. The Spirits of the moon. Gen.art.

— . The simpler Spirits with me laughed at them. Ex.

9237. Spirits and Angels often speak to the inhabitants of the moon . . .

9278⁶. That the world cannot receive the Spirit of Truth, because it does not see him, nor know him = that it will not acknowledge the Lord with faith of heart, because external things will obscure.

9281³. As respiration corresponds to the life of faith, (the latter) is called 'breath;' as in [the expression] drawing the breath and letting out the breath; and hence too, Spirits, in Hebrew, are so called from 'wind,' and in the Word are compared to 'wind.' Ill. 9818¹⁵.

9297^e. Hence Spirits and Angels are forms of their own use . . . Hence too it is that the quality of Spirits is Known as soon as they are present. Ex.

9325². 'To be born of water and the spirit' = through truths of faith and the good of love. 9454^e. (Compare 9818¹¹. 10237a^e. 10388.)

9358. In every other Earth truth Divine is manifested orally through Spirits and Angels. . . But this is done within the families, (and therefore a new revelation is constantly necessary).

9396². At this day Heaven is closed; for scarcely anyone speaks with Angels and Spirits. (Continued under SPEAK.)

9435². How far Moses was admitted into Heaven, was shown me representatively by means of a Spirit. Des.

9438. On the men, Spirits, and Angels of the Earths in the starry heaven. Gen.art. (See SPEAK, here.)

—². (Why so few are now allowed to speak with Spirits and Angels. (Fully ex. under SPEAK, here.)

9440. Through changes of state, Angels and Spirits can be translated from one place to another; from one Earth into another; and even to Earths at the end of the universe. In like manner a man as to his spirit . . . 10734.

9457⁵. Spirits who are in the First Heaven.

9481². There are always Spirits and Angels with man . . . Through them man is connected with the Lord; and thus subsists the human race and also Heaven.

9578. The Spirits of (the First Earth). 9693, Gen.art. 9793.

— . For Spirits remain near their own Earth. 9968, Ex.

9582^e. In that gulf appeared very many men, who were Spirits. . . These were guards, to prevent Spirits from this system from passing, without permission, into any other.

9817². 'Spirits,' in the Word, = the life of the intellectual part; 'heart,' that of the voluntary part. 9818³, Ill.

9818. 'Filled with the spirit of wisdom' (Ex.xxviii.3) = with Divine truth. Ex.

—². 'Spirit' often occurs in the Word, and, when man is treated of, by his 'spirit' is signified the good and truth inscribed on the intellectual part, consequently, the life of this; (for) man, as to his interiors, is a Spirit, and as to them is together with Spirits. —³, Ex. and Ill.

—³. Hence by 'Spirit,' when the Lord is treated of, is meant the Divine truth proceeding from His Divine good; and this, when . . . received by man, is 'the Spirit of Truth,' 'the Spirit of God,' and 'the Holy Spirit' . . . —¹³, Ill.

—⁹. That 'spirit,' in a general sense, = the life of man's respiration. Ill.

—¹⁰. Thus 'spirit' = the life of man. That, in special, it = the life of truth, which is the life of the intellectual part, and is called intelligence. Ill.

— . 'The Spirit,' here, = intelligence and wisdom.

—¹². The life from Divine truths is 'Spirit.'

—¹⁷. The Divine truth, consequently the Divine wisdom and intelligence, are called 'the Spirit of Jehovah;' here, 'the spirit of wisdom and intelligence, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah' (Is.xi.2). Further ill. 9857⁴. 10196², Ex. 10570⁷.

—¹⁹. That 'the Spirit of Jehovah' = the Divine truth, and the derivative heavenly life for the man who receives it. Ill.

—²¹. 'Spirit of judgment' = Divine truth. (= wisdom from Divine truth. 9857³.)

—²². 'Spirit of holiness' = the Lord as to Divine truth, thus the Divine truth which is from the Lord.

—²³. 'To make angels spirits' (Ps.civ.4) = receptions of Divine truth.

9827². When intelligence and wisdom are taken away from Spirits, which happens when the angelic Societies are removed from them, their head covering appears to be taken away, and they then become stupid . . .

9952. All Spirits and Angels appear clothed in garments according to their state of truth.

9954¹⁷. 'The breath of the nostrils'=the heavenly life itself which is from the Lord.

9968. The Spirits of the Second Earth. Gen.art.

9987. 'The breath of His mouth' (Ps.xxxiii.6)=the life from Divine truth.

10049^e. 'The spirit breatheth where it listeth, and thou hearest the voice thereof, but knowest not whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is everyone who is born of the spirit' (John iii.8): 'the spirit'=the life of charity through faith. (=the Divine truth which inflows from the Lord through the internal of man into his external, whence the regenerating man has the life of faith. 10240.)

10053⁶. 'The Spirit of truth' (John xvi.13)=the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord. 10151⁴.

10099². (The spirit is not continuous with the body.)

10194². Around Spirits who are in truths from good appear most beautiful representatives. Des. . . But around those in truths (only), appear rocks, marshes, etc.

10219². Unless Spirits and Angels were with man, through whom the influx is effected, he could not live a moment . . . 10483².

10227^e. With Spirits below the Heavens, there are riches according to their reception of truth and good from the Lord.

10237^e. Spirits and Angels think by spiritual ideas, and also speak by them . . .

10283¹³. 'Spirit' is opposed to 'flesh,' because by 'Spirit' is signified life from the Lord; and by 'flesh,' life from man. Ill.

10284⁵. Among Spirits are very many who imitate Divine things . . .

10298⁴. Spirits are nothing but their own truths and goods which they had put on in the world; and yet are human forms . . .

10311. The Spirits of the Third Earth. Des. 10378. 10384.

— . They could not be with the Spirits of our Earth. 10312, Ex. 10381. 10517, Ex. 10710.

10312. For Spirits are consociated and dissociated according to the affections and the derivative thoughts. 10585^e.

10314. Therefore the Spirits of that Earth do not appear in a well-defined human form; but as clouds. Des.

10330. 'I have filled him with the spirit of God' (Ex. xxxi.3)=influx and illustration from the Divine truth which is from the Lord's good.

10379. These Spirits keep themselves at a distance, because their correspondence is . . . with man's interior things.

10381². (I told him) that what he reprehended was not mine, but belonged to the Spirits around me; for what I think I do not think from myself, but from them, by influx.

10406⁶. As there is nothing Divine in them, it is said 'there is no breath in them' (Jer.x.14).

10420³. Spirits turn themselves according to their loves. Ex.

10422². Spirits go nowhere else than to those with whom they are consociated by love; hence the quality of Spirits as to truth is known from the ways and streets in which they go; for all truth leads to its own love.

10585. The Spirits of the Fourth Earth. Des. 10710. — . I was not conveyed to the Fourth Earth; but the Spirits of it were brought to me.

—². How Spirits of quite another genius may be associated with Spirits with whom there is to be conjunction. Ex.

10593. The External (of man) which is accommodated to uses in the other life together with the internal (of man) is called a Spirit; a good Spirit and Angel if the man had been good; and an evil Spirit if he had been evil.

10594. The spirit of man appears (there) in a human form exactly as (here). (His faculties enun.)

10604². These ideas are of man's spirit . . . and he comes into them when he becomes a Spirit, and by them converses with other Spirits.

— . Those who think in their spirit abstractedly from their body . . .

—^e. As to his spirit, man is in society with Spirits, and, as to his interior thought . . . with Angels. Hence man has the faculty of thinking.

10608². Angels and Spirits . . . have faces, arms, hands, feet . . . dwellings; and live together exactly as do men, upon an earth. Des.

10735. A Spirit with me who had been a very pathetic preacher. Des. 10736.

10736. The Spirits of the Fifth Earth. Des. 10751. — . Spirits from our Earth visit them. Des.

10751. All Spirits know about their own Earth, when their natural memory is opened . . .

— . The Spirits said that when leave is given they appear to the inhabitants of their Earth, and speak with them as men; which is effected by their being let into their natural memory . . . and the inhabitants suppose them to be men (until) they vanish. Ill. This rarely happens now on our Earth, lest men should be compelled to believe . . .

10754. The preacher took hold of the hand of a woman on that Earth; but, as she perceived that he was a Spirit . . . she hastened away.

10758⁴. Every man is a Spirit as to his interiors, and it is that which lives in the body . . . and it is the spirit of everyone from which he has the human form, consequently which is principally the man, and in a like form . . . visible (only) before the eyes of Spirits . . .

—^e. On my asking Spirits . . . whether they wanted to be re clothed with their earthly body, they fled far away . . .

[A.] 10783. Many Spirits and Angels from our Earth accompanied me (to the Sixth Earth).

—^e. Only in two places (on the way) did I see Spirits . . .

10785. The Spirits of the Sixth Earth. Des. 10808, Gen.art. 10833.

10809. The spiritual Sun appears only to the Angels, and not to the Spirits who are below. Ex.

10812. Monkish Spirits seen with a crowd of Spirits of the Sixth Earth, mostly evil. Des.

10813. For Spirits and Angels dwell in the same way as they had done (here). Ex.

—^e. Spirits and Angels . . . can see the things in the world through the eyes of a man to whom the Lord grants to speak with Spirits and Angels . . .

H. 77. Upright Spirits . . . grieved at the ignorance within the Church about Spirits and Angels; and indignantly told me to relate that they are not minds without form, nor ethereal spirits-pneumata; but in form are men; and that they see, hear, and feel as well as those who are in the world. 456, Ex.

95^e. The pulmonary breath=the understanding, and the truth of faith.

99². The spirit . . . in some who were beautiful in face (was seen to be) deformed, black, and monstrous . . . But in some who were not beautiful, it was lovely, fair, and angelic. And the spirit of a man appears after death such as it had been in the body.

123². The interiors make the face of an Angel and a Spirit.

— . Man, too, as to his spirit, turns in the same way. Ex.

203³. A Spirit who believed that he thought from himself. Des.

246. When an Angel or Spirit comes to a man, and, by conversion to him, is conjoined with him, he comes into all his memory, insomuch that he scarcely knows but that he knows from himself all the man knows . . .

—². At this day there is no longer such conjunction with Angels, but with Spirits not in Heaven.

—³. Spirits will not believe it is the man who speaks, but they in him; (and) that all the man knows is from them . . .

247. Another reason why Angels and Spirits conjoin themselves so closely with man that they suppose the man's things to be their own, is that there is such a conjunction between the spiritual and the natural world with man that they are as it were one. But, as man had separated himself from Heaven, it was provided . . . that there should be Angels and Spirits with every man, and that he should be ruled by the Lord through them. This is the reason for so close a conjunction. Otherwise, man could have been ruled through the general influx from Heaven without having Spirits and Angels adjoined to him. 296, Ex.

249. To speak with Spirits is rarely granted (now), because it is dangerous; for the Spirits then know they are with a man . . . Refs.

— . Some who lead a solitary life sometimes hear Spirits . . . without danger; but the Spirits with them are removed . . . at intervals, to prevent their knowing they are with a man. For most Spirits do not know there is any other world . . . and therefore the man is not allowed to speak back to them, otherwise they would know.

—². They who think much about religious things, (so as) to see them in themselves, begin to hear Spirits speaking to them. Ex. . . But such are visionaries and enthusiasts, and whatever Spirit they hear they believe to be the Holy Spirit, when yet they are enthusiastic ones. Such Spirits see falsities as truths . . . and therefore they persuade those with whom they inflow. As these Spirits began to persuade evils also . . . they have been removed by degrees. (Continued under ENTHUSIASM.)

253. Rarely, since those times, has anyone spoken with Angels . . . but some with Spirits. Ex.

254. The Lord spoke the Word to the prophets through Spirits, whom He filled with His aspect. Ex.

—². A Spirit filled with the Divine . . . knows not but that he is the Lord, and that what he speaks is Divine . . . Afterwards, he perceives he is a Spirit . . . Such was the state of the Spirits who spoke to the prophets . . . The Spirits believed themselves to be Jehovah. D.1957.

256. No Angel or Spirit is allowed to speak to a man from his own memory. (Fully quoted under MEMORY.)

257. There are Spirits, called natural and corporeal Spirits, who, when they come to man, do not conjoin themselves with his thought, like other Spirits, but enter into his body, and take possession of all his senses, speak through his mouth, and act through his members, supposing, then, that all things of the man are theirs. These are the Spirits who obsess man; but they have been cast into Hell, and quite removed . . .

292. (The good and evil Spirits with man. Fully ex. under EVIL SPIRIT, and at 293. 295.)

294. All Spirits in the World of Spirits have communication with Heaven or with Hell. (Continued under SOCIETY.)

295. The Spirits with man are changed according to the changes of his affections: hence some Spirits are with him in infancy; others in childhood; others in adolescence and young manhood, and others in old age. (These four classes of Spirits, and the Heavens with which they communicate. Des. and enum.)

296². As to his speech and actions, man is ruled through general influx, and therefore the Spirits adjoined to him have nothing in common with these.

297. The influx through Spirits is called mediate.

298. The Spirits with man (whether good or evil) never inflow from their own memory and derivative thought . . . Still, through them there inflows with man, good or evil affection. (Continued under INFLUX.)

299. Spirits not yet in conjunction with Hell (who) love undigested things . . . are present where there are such things in a man, and speak there together from their evil affection; and if this affection is contrary to the man's, it becomes in him sadness and melancholy anxiety; but if it is in agreement, it becomes in him gladness and cheerfulness. These Spirits appear near the stomach. Des.

302. Yet man cannot think one whit without Spirits adjoined to him; and his spiritual life depends upon it.

355^e. It is the spirit which thinks in the body. 432.

363. For the spirit of man is altogether such as is his love; moreover, the body of every Spirit and Angel is the external form of his love exactly corresponding to the internal form which is that of his mind . . . 527².

395^e. And that which is in the spirit of a man when he leaves the body remains after death; for he then lives a Spirit man.

411. Certain Spirits, not evil, fell as it were into sleep, and were translated, as to their interiors . . . into Heaven; (which) can be done with Spirits before their interiors have been opened. (What they saw, des.)

422. When, with a Spirit man, good has been conjoined with truth, he comes into Heaven . . . But when, with a Spirit man, evil has been conjoined with falsity, he comes into Hell.

431. When Spirits are mentioned, those who are in the World of Spirits are meant . . .

432. Every man is a Spirit as to his interiors. Gen. art. 436. 437.

—^e. (Thus) whatever lives with man is his spirit. 433.

433. It follows that the spirit is the man himself; or, that man, regarded in himself, is a Spirit, and is in a like form; for whatever lives and feels in man is of his spirit, and everything in man . . . lives and feels; and therefore when the body is separated from its spirit . . . the man remains a man, and is alive. Some think even in their cold body, while it is lying on the bier. 453, Ex.

434. (Thus) the spirit of man is equally in a form . . . and equally enjoys sensories and senses when separated from the body; and everything . . . of the life of sense which man has, is not of his body, but of his spirit . . . Hence Spirits, equally with men, see, hear, and feel . . . The spirit sensates naturally while in the body, through what is material added to it; yet it sensates spiritually at the same time, by thinking and willing.

435. (Thus) man, regarded in himself, is a spirit; and the Corporeal which is added to him . . . is not the man; but is only the Instrumental of his spirit. (The Spiritual which beasts have. Ex.)

438. Every man, even while in the body, is as to his spirit in society with Spirits. Ex.

441. Being carried by the spirit into another place. Ex.

446. The inmost communication of the spirit is with the respiration and with the motion of the heart; its thought, with (the former), and its affection with (the latter); and therefore when these two motions cease, there is at once a separation. . . The spirit is then left to itself; and the body, being devoid of the life of its spirit, grows cold and putrescent.

447. The spirit remains a while in the body after the separation, but only until the total cessation of the heart, which takes place with variety according to the state of disease which was the cause of death. (Continued under RESUSCITATE=resuscitare.)

449². (The drawing of the spirit out of the body. Ex.) —^e.

453². Man is man from his spirit. (Continued under BODY.)

—³. The reason the spirit does not appear in its human form (before the natural sight). Ex.

—^e. Spirits (then) appear in their own form, not only the Spirits who are in the Spiritual World, but also the spirit (of a man), which, being in that World, is still in the body.

454. The reason the form of the spirit is the human one, is that man as to his spirit has been created after the form of Heaven. Ex.

456. That the spirit of man, after its solution from the body, is a man, and in a like form. (From experience.)

457. When the spirit of a man first enters the World of Spirits, which takes place shortly after his resuscitation, he has a like face and a like tone of voice, because he is then in the state of his exteriors . . . But afterwards his face becomes quite different; it becomes like his reigning love . . . in which his spirit had been in the body; for the face of a man's spirit is very different from that of his body, the latter being from his parents, whereas the face of his spirit is from his affection . . . Into this comes the spirit after (death) in the third state. 459, Ex.

—². Recent Spirits I have Known from their face and speech; but not afterwards . . . For, regarded in himself, the spirit of a man is nothing but his own affection, the external of which is the face. . . Hence all who have Known each other (here), Know each other in the World of Spirits; but not in Heaven, nor in Hell.

461. That (Spirits) possess all sensation, memory, thought, affection . . . Gen. art.

—². A Spirit man . . . sees, hears, speaks, etc. as before; he has appetite, longing and desire; thinks, reflects, is affected, loves, and wills, as before; and he who is delighted with studies, reads and writes as before. In a word, when a man passes from one life into the other . . . it is as if he had passed from one place to another; and he carries with him all things which he possesses in himself as a man . . . W. 176.

462. Yet the difference between the life of man (as a Spirit) and his life here, is great. Ex.

463². Everything which a man has thought, willed, spoken, and done, and also which he has heard and seen, is inscribed . . . on his spirit, and on the members of its body; so that the spirit has been formed according to the thoughts and acts of its will. Fully ex.

464². When the spirit is in the Spiritual World, it does not think naturally, but spiritually. Hence the natural memory, as to material things, is then quiescent, and those things only come into use which the man has thereby imbibed and made rational. Ex.

[H.] 469. Spirits and Angels have a memory equally with men. (Fully quoted under MEMORY.)

479³. All Spirits can be led wherever one pleases, provided they are kept in their reigning love. They cannot resist it. Ex.

—⁵. A Spirit is his own reigning love. Ex.

492. Every man as to his spirit has exteriors and interiors. The exteriors of the spirit are . . . The interiors of the spirit are . . .

495. The life of recent Spirits. Des.

502. The Spirit man is then let into the state of his interiors. Ex.

—^e. Therefore, when the Spirit man is in this state, he is in himself . . . 503, Ex. 504, Ex. 505, Ex. 507.

504. For Spirits not only think, but also speak, from their own affection.

517. For the memory of Spirits is in their life . . . For Spirits are affections, and are in a human form like their affections.

519. After Spirits have been prepared for Heaven by instructions . . . they are clothed in angelic garments . . .

540. For men are ruled . . . through Spirits who are in the World of Spirits.

548². (Thus) the Lord draws away every Spirit to Himself through Angels, and also through influx from Heaven; but Spirits who are in evil resist . . .

552. He is then no longer a Spirit man, as he was in his first state; but is truly a Spirit, (that is) he has a face and body which correspond to his internals. Des.

576. The excellence of Spirits in comparison with men. Ex.

—². The spirit of a man, while he lives (here) is bound to the body, and through it is in the natural world, and therefore what it then thinks spiritually inflows into natural ideas . . . But when the spirit is loosed from the body, and comes into its spiritual state . . . its state as to thoughts and affections immensely excels its former one.

577. For the spirit of man, when loosed from the body, is in its own good, or evil. Ex.

582. An Angel or Spirit cannot see anything in the natural world . . .

583². Spirits who avert themselves become invisible.

598³. What is not of the love or will of a man is not of his spirit; for the esse of the spirit of a man is love or will.

600. The conjunction of man with Heaven and with Hell is not immediately with them, but mediately through Spirits who are in the World of Spirits. These Spirits are with man, and none from Hell itself, or Heaven itself.

601. The Spirits adjoined to man are Subjects. Ex.

602. The simple have an innate idea that a Spirit is a man.

603. (Refs. on the subject of the Spirits through whom communications are effected.) N. 196.

N. 31. The will and understanding make the spirit of man . . . The body is only obedience.

40. An internal merely natural man . . . is a Spirit, and not an Angel; and, while he lives in the body, is in society with Spirits, but with those in Hell.

113. For that only remains in the spirit of a man which has entered into his love. After death all other things are regarded as alien. J. 36².

J. 9⁷. Angels and Spirits are with man, and in his affections . . . but they do not know with what men they are; as neither do the men know with what Angels and Spirits they cohabit. The Lord alone knows and disposes this . . .

—⁸. So when a man . . . dies, then, being a Spirit, he does not subsist upon his own proper basis; but upon the general basis, which is the human race.

—⁹. No Angel or Spirit can subsist without man; and no man without a Spirit and Angel. The conjunction is mutual and reciprocal.

32. A Spirit in his first state does not know that (he is bound to a Society) . . . While he is such, he goes hither and thither . . . and he appears in many other places. (Continued under SOCIETY.)

36. For the spirit of man . . . is formed from his will, and from his thought in so far as it proceeds from his will.

62. The cunning (of the Babylonians) is more malignant there, because they are spirits; and all wickedness stores itself up in the spirit; for the spirit of man is what thinks, wills, intends, and machinates.

C. J. 16^e. Thus they do these things in spirit.

U. 1². All Spirits and Angels are from the human race.

50. The quality of any Spirit manifests itself there by influx, which is the communication of his affection. Des.

84². Spirits and Angels rarely come to the men of Jupiter after they are thirty years old, because they then no longer suffer themselves to be led by them.

W. H. 10². Spirits also perceive the Word in its internal sense in so far as their interiors are open into Heaven.

L. 46⁴. They then receive the idea that the Holy Spirit is the presence of the Lord with man through Angels and Spirits. W. 150, Ex.

47. That by 'spirit' is meant the life of man. Ex. —², Ill.

—⁷. Man is said to 'emit his spirit,' when he dies; and therefore by 'spirit,' in this sense, is meant the life of the respiration. Hence, in Hebrew, there is one word for 'spirit,' and 'wind' . . . It is the life from the respiration of the lungs which is properly meant by 'spirit,' and also by 'soul.'

48. The life of man is various according to its state, and therefore by 'spirit' is meant the various affection of the life with man. Enum. and Ill.

—⁷. (By 'spirit' are also meant) the infernal spirits themselves. Ill.

49. By 'spirit' is meant the life of the regenerate, which is called spiritual life. Ill.

—². By 'spirit' is meant spiritual life with those in humiliation. Ill.

50. Where 'spirit' is mentioned in relation to the Lord, His Divine life is meant, thus the Lord Himself. Ill.

51. By 'spirit,' where the Lord is treated of, is meant in special the life of His wisdom, which is Divine Truth. Ill.

52. When the prophets were in vision, they were not in their body, but in their spirit. Ill. P.134.

S. 69. (Thus) in the Word alone . . . there is spirit and life. Ill.

70. That Angels and Spirits are men like men here . . . with the sole difference that they are spiritual . . . T.240.

Life 30². 'God' and 'spirit'=life from the Lord.

F. 19. 'To emit the soul'=to animate no longer; and 'to emit the spirit'=to respire no longer.

W. 38^e. 'They are spirit and they are life'=(the Divine wisdom and the Divine love).

90. As to the interiors of his mind, every man is a spirit.

92. Angels and Spirits are in a totally different light and heat from men. . . They are not within nature, but entirely above or outside it, and in their own world. . . They are together with man, conjoined with the affection and thought of his spirit. For man is a Spirit; from this he thinks and wills; and therefore the Spiritual World is where man is, (who) as to the interiors of his mind is in the midst of Angels and Spirits.

126. As to his spirit, man is in a certain quarter of the Spiritual World.

129. For, as to his mind, man is a spirit; and, if he is in love and wisdom, he is an Angel; and therefore after death . . . he becomes a Spirit or an Angel.

140. Every Spirit turns himself to his reigning love. Ex.

— . So long as he stays in the World of Spirits, he is called a Spirit . . .

—^e. All the Spirits in the World of Spirits are adjoined to men . . .

183^e. The Spirits below the Heavens appear as if in a cloud-nimbo.

257⁶. Hence it is that there is no Spirit or Angel who was not born a man.

285². Such is the state of Spirits and Angels, who are men, even as to their bodies: they appear in the place where their thought is.

382². No one can think unless the pulmonary spirit (or breath) concurs and accords. Ex. . . If he hold his breath, he cannot think, except in his spirit, from its respiration.

386. The mind of man is his spirit, and the spirit a man; the body being the external through which the mind or spirit sensates and acts in its world. Gen.art. P.181². 296¹⁵.

388. (Origin of the human form of the spirit.)

390. The conjunction of the spirit with the body is through the correspondence of its will and understanding with its heart and lungs; and the disjunction is through their non-correspondence. Gen.art. 391^e.

— . The spirit (also) has a pulse and respiration, (which) inflow into those of the body, and produce them. 391.

—^e. The spirit then goes away and continues its life in the Spiritual World.

391. When questioned, Spirits and Angels have said that they are as much men as men in the world; that they have a body, and feel the beating of the heart in the breast, and of the arteries on the palm, just as well.

—². That the spirit of man respire in his body, shown by experience.

—³. I have sometimes been reduced to the respiration of my spirit alone . . .

— . Then I was in the spirit, outside the body . . .

397². When a man is alone, he thinks from his spirit.

404³. Man is in manifest thought when his spirit thinks in the body . . . But when he is in the affection of understanding . . . he is in the thought of his spirit . . .

412⁵. The respiration of the spirit depends on fibres from the brains; that of the body on the blood-vessels . . .

P. 50. As Angels and Spirits are affections . . . and thoughts . . . they are not in space and time; but only in the appearance of them . . .

—². Hence it is that with every man there are spirits present who are in like affection . . . and they are as really present as if the man were included in their Society.

— . Spirits and Angels are affections and derivative thoughts.

61. Every spirit of a man is affection and the derivative thought; (therefore) every spirit is his own love and thence his own understanding; (so that) when a man is thinking solely from his own spirit . . . he thinks from the affection of his love; (and it follows) that when a man becomes a Spirit . . . he is the affection of his own love . . . And as all Spirits and Angels are affections, it is evident that the universal Heaven is the love of all affections of good, and the derivative wisdom of all perceptions of truth. 196.

96⁶. So also can one Spirit be infilled by another, even until he knows not but that he is the other.

101². They still do the evils in their spirit: for it is the spirit of man which thinks and wills.

103. As it is the spirit of man which wills and understands . . . it follows that this external and internal of thought are the external and internal of the spirit of man. What the body does is only an effect from the internal and external of his spirit; for the body is only obedience.

120. For the internal of man's thought, or his internal man, is his spirit itself; and in it are things more infinite and innumerable than there are in his body; for the spirit of man is man in his own form; and all things of it correspond to all things of man in his body. 145³.

[P.120]². So neither does man know how the Lord operates into all things of his mind or soul, that is, into all things of his spirit . . . But still the Lord cannot purify man from any concupiscence . . . in his spirit or internal man so long as the man keeps the external closed . . . by evils.

124. Hence it is that the spirit of man—which is his mind in the body—is a man in all its form . . .

—². For the mind of man is his spirit; and, according to the conjunction with the Lord, it is an Angel; and the body is obedience.

134⁴. Visions induced by enthusiastic Spirits, and visionary ones . . .

134a². Speech with the dead would produce an effect like that of miracles . . . But this happens only when the Spirits bring in something dogmatic of religion, which is never done by any good Spirit . . .

135. Still, speech with Spirits is possible, but rarely with Angels. (Continued under SPEAK.) They never teach.

210. Like one with his breath held.

220². Hence it is that no Angel or Spirit was created immediately; but all were first born men.

296. The spirit (of an infernal) is itself an evil . . .

—⁹. It is inhaled with full breath.

299. Man's mind is his spirit which lives after death, (which) is in the whole form in which is Heaven, or Hell: there is no difference, except that one is the greatest, and the other the least . . .

307². For man as to his spirit is in the Spiritual World, and in some Society there. (Continued under SOCIETY.) 317.

312². One Spirit can infuse his thoughts and affections into another Spirit, and the latter know no otherwise than that what is infused is of his Own thought and affection. This is called thinking from another, and thinking in another. I have seen it a thousand times, and have done it a hundred; and yet the appearance of distance was great. But as soon as they knew it was another . . . they were indignant, and averted themselves. . . Evil Spirits have often injected into my thought evils and falsities . . . and I have inquired who injected them . . . and they were at a great distance from me.

314. It is the mind or spirit which (sensates in the body). . . But still the mind or spirit of man does not sensate of itself, but from the Lord.

321². Those instructed by influx what to believe and do, are not instructed by the Lord, nor by any Angel; but by some enthusiastic Spirit, Quaker, or Moravian, and are led astray.

322³. By this, spirit comes into his civil and moral things, and they live; otherwise, there is no spirit in them . . .

324³. He then becomes a Spirit in human form: his mind is that Spirit.

338⁵. The spirit of man cannot be anywhere else than in the delight of his life, because this makes its life, and even its very respiration and the pulsation of its heart. It is otherwise (here).

R. 14. 'The seven spirits' (Rev.i.4)=all in Divine truth; in the abstract sense, the Divine Truth itself. (=the Divine in Heaven. E.24.) R.155. E.183. R.237. 272. E.318.

36. 'I was in the spirit' (ver.10)=a spiritual state. Ex. and Ill. 228. 722. (=a spiritual state with revelation. E.53,Ex.) 266.

50^e. 'Of water and the spirit'=through truths, and a life according to them.

87. 'What the spirit saith unto the churches' (Rev. ii.7)=what the Divine truth of the Word teaches those who will be of the New Church. 118,etc. E.108.

128. 'Angels Spirits' (Ps.civ.4)=those in truths; 'angels ministers,' those in goods.

224. I saw a company of Spirits on their knees . . .

458. For every man is conjoined with Spirits as to the affections, insomuch that they make a one.

510. 'The spirit of life from God' (Rev.xi.11)=spiritual life. (=Divine truth proceeding. E.665.)

558². The conjunction of man with Spirits in like affection and derivative thoughts is such that if the copula were loosed for a single moment the man would fall down dead.

602. 'To give spirit to the image of the beast' (Rev. xiii.15)=to confirm it from the Word. (=something of spiritual life by conjunction with the Word. E.831.)

640. 'Yea, saith the spirit' (Rev.xiv.13)=that the Divine truth of the Word teaches. (=asseveration that it is true. For 'the spirit,' like 'angel'=truth from the Lord. E.900.)

702. 'Three unclean spirits like frogs' (Rev.xvi.13)=mere ratiocinations and cupidities of falsifying truths. By 'spirits' are here signified the like as by 'demons.' (=falsities of evil from Hell. E.1000.)

757. 'The hold of every unclean spirit' (Rev.xviii.2)=evils of will and thence of act. . . By 'spirit' is signified everything which is of affection or will, and thence of deed. See E.1099.

819. 'The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy' (Rev.xix.10)=that it is the whole of the Word and of doctrine thence.

896. 'He carried me away in the spirit' (Rev.xxi.10)=that he was translated.

945. An Angel was sent to John in order that he might be kept in a state of the spirit . . . No one can come into this state . . . except through Angels who are closely adjoined to the man. Ex.

—². When the prophets spoke the Word, they were not in the spirit, but in the body. . . But when they were in the other state, they say that they were 'in the spirit.' Ill.

955. 'The spirit and the bride say, Come' (Rev.xxii.17)=that Heaven and the Church long for the advent of the Lord. 'The spirit'=Heaven . . . because the angelic Spirits are meant from whom is the New Heaven.

M. 2. I was in the spirit, and in this stood on a hill . . .

10⁴. The third said . . . When I came into my own light and heat, my spirit and my heart returned to me.

28. As to the affections and thoughts of his mind, man is in the midst of Angels and Spirits, and is so consociated with them that he cannot be divorced from them without dying.

30. That Angels and Spirits are men, may be evident from those seen by Abraham, etc. . . the eyes of whose spirits were then opened . . .

31. See SPIRITUAL.

35^e. The interior man, which is the same as the spirit which lives after death, is the form of his own love . . .

39². It is impossible for any Angel of Heaven to descend, or for any Spirit of Hell to ascend, and speak with any man, except those who have the interiors of their spirit opened by the Lord . . .

46. For love is properly of the spirit of man, and is of the body from the spirit; and after death man becomes a Spirit, and so carries his love with him. 47.

47. The externals are properly of the body; and the internals are properly of the spirit.

51^e. When conjugal love becomes of the spirit . . .

55. There were many Spirits around me . . .

145. The ardour proper to the body is not yet mitigated by the love of the spirit.

—². Spiritual purification compared to that of natural spirits, which is called defecation, etc. . . And wisdom purified compared to alcohol, which is spirit most highly rectified.

153. This is not chastity, unless there is abstinence in the spirit. The spirit of man, by which is here meant his mind as to the affections and thoughts, makes what is chaste and unchaste. (Continued under BODY.)

—². They still commit adulteries in the spirit. T. 316².

186. The internal form of man, which is that of his spirit (is continually changing). Ex.

260. The soul and the mind are the man; for both make the spirit which lives after death.

264³. For the spirit, after it has been separated from the body, comes into full freedom of acting according to its affections and thoughts.

267². As soon as he comes into company, he inverts his spirit . . .

—⁴. They who indulge their imagination too much . . . almost separate their spirit from connection with the body . . . Into this delirium is every man let after death who has abstracted his spirit from the body . . .

273. Angels and Spirits have internal and external affections equally with men; (but) both are with them reduced into correspondance. . . They have internal and external affections, because they have a mind and a body . . .

295. Thus his spirit is convinced; and the things in which the spirit is convinced are allotted a place above those which enter from (mere) authority.

299^e. Consent initiates the daughter's spirit into love; but extorted consent does not initiate the spirit, although it may the body . . .

303. By betrothing . . . there is effected a marriage of the spirit before one of the body.

310. All things done by man in the body inflow from his spirit . . .

315². I was in the spirit, that is, in a state like that in which are the men of the Spiritual World, who are called Spirits and Angels.

—¹¹. You are called Spirits and Angels; and in the world you believed that Spirits and Angels are like winds . . . but now you clearly see that you are truly men . . .

321⁷. (With those who had lived in love truly conjugal) the spirit of a deceased partner dwells constantly with the spirit of the (other) . . .

326. I became in the spirit, and in the spirit went out to them . . .

—². When I let my spirit into the body, you no longer saw me; but when I let it out of the body, you saw me.

—⁴. (The words of spiritual language are not understood by Spirits themselves when they are with men. Shown by experiment.)

328. (Spirits) are in principles (or beginnings) and thus in singulars; but (men) are in principiates and composites; (the former) are in particulars; (the latter) in generals . . .

354. A Spirit thinks himself to be what the garment he wears indicates.

440. The delights of scortatory love are of the flesh even in the spirit; but those of conjugal love begin in the spirit, and are of the spirit even in the flesh. Ex.

— For the spirit, and not the flesh, feels the things which happen in the flesh. (So with the other senses.)

I. 19². A Spirit with a torch rose up . . .

T. 29². Spirits and Angels supposed to be pneumata . . . Yet they are substantial men, and live together like men . . . upon spaces and in times, which are determined according to the states of their minds.

64. An Angel or Spirit can in a moment become present to another, provided he comes into a like affection and thought. Examps.

69^e. As to his spirit (such a man) is actually in Heaven with the Angels.

76. I became in the spirit.

99². Such is the reciprocal conjunction of the soul and the body, and of the spirit with the organs of the body.

110. A Spirit seen falling from Heaven like a thunderbolt. Ex.

118². The souls and minds of the good are connected with the souls and minds of Angels; and those of the evil, with the souls and minds of infernal Spirits. They have such a union, that if they were removed from man, he would fall down dead; and neither could Angels and Spirits subsist if men were withdrawn from under them.

137⁸. I said, I know that all [the Spirits] here are consociated with their like in the natural world; tell me . . . with whom you are consociated. He replied, in a grave tone, . . . With a famous man, a leader . . . in the Church. . . He lives near Luther's tomb . . . I said, Inspire your famous man with this . . . He replied, 'I cannot, because he and I, as to this matter, make almost one mind ; but he does not understand the things which I say, while I clearly understand all he says.' For the Spiritual World enters into the natural world, and perceives the thoughts of men there ; but not the reverse. This is the state of the consociation of Spirits and men.

[T.137]¹². (Another Spirit said,) I, too, am consociated with a man in your world, who is in a place of high honour. This I know, because I speak from him, as he does from me. . . He resides at Gottenburg ; and I once thought from him that your doctrine savours of Mohammedanism. . . I turned to the latter consociated Spirit, and said, Tell him at Gottenburg, if you can, to read (Rev.iii.18 ; ii.16).

143². 'A new heart'=the will of good ; 'a new spirit'=the understanding of truth. Ill.

144^e. 'Water'=truth in the external man ; 'spirit' (John iii.5)=truth from good in the internal man.

149². 'The spirit of prophecy' (Rev.xix.10)=the truth of doctrine from the Word.

156. That a man's spirit is his mind, and whatever proceeds from it. Gen.art.

— . As man's spirit thinks from the understanding, and acts from the will ; and as the body . . . thinks and acts from the spirit, it follows that by man's spirit is meant his intelligence and affection of love, and whatever proceeds and operates from them.

—². That 'the spirit' of man=such things as are of the mind. Ill.

157. As 'the spirit' means the mind, 'to be in the spirit' means a state of the mind separate from the body. . . The prophets were then in a state such as is that of Spirits and Angels . . . In this state, the spirit of man . . . can be transferred from place to place, the body remaining in its own place. This is the state in which I have been for 26 years, with this difference : that I have been in the spirit and at the same time in the body ; and only sometimes out of the body. That (the prophets) were in this state. Ill.

380². I fear that (Arianism and Socinianism) lie concealed at this day in the general spirit of the men of the Church. . . (The reason is that) there is with every man a consociate Spirit ; for without this man cannot think . . . and every man summons to himself a Spirit similar to the affection of his will and the derivative perception of his understanding ; (either an Angel from Heaven, or a Spirit from Hell). Ex.

443². These (four) periods of life are those of man's spirit, and not likewise of his body. Ex.

454. The internal man is in the Spiritual World . . . Man was so created that he can be associated with Spirits and Angels in their World, and thereby think analytically . . . As the internal man is in company with Spirits and Angels in their World . . . it is evident that man can be consociated with Spirits of Hell, and also with Angels of Heaven. . . The internal man is his spirit, which acts by the external.

470³. The spirit of man also is created from finite things. What is the spirit of man but a receptacle of the life of the mind ? The finite things from which it is, are spiritual substances which . . . are also brought-collatae-into our earth, and stored up therein . . .

475. The mind of man is his spirit which lives after death ; and the spirit of man is constantly in company with its like in the Spiritual World ; and, through the material body with which it is encompassed, his spirit is with men in the natural world. The reason man does not know that as to his mind he is in the midst of Spirits, is that the Spirits with whom he is in company . . . think and speak spiritually ; whereas the spirit of man . . . thinks and speaks naturally . . . But when the spirit of man is in society with Spirits . . . he is also in spiritual thought and speech with them, for . . . he communicates with Spirits by his interiors, but with men by his exteriors. By this communication, man perceives Things, and thinks of them analytically . . .

1407. That I was led by Spirits through ways, and streets, in gyres . . .

1482. No Spirit or Angel can think anything which all near cannot understand and perceive . . .

1484. No Spirit can ever be quite alone . . .

1533. When I had been writing, a Spirit thanked me for having helped him to write: he thought that he was I . . . Such are the co-operations of Spirits with man.

1569. The Spirits of the small cutaneous glands. Des.

1581. They assumed that a Spirit can enter into the body of a man, and so live corporeally . . . from the fact that a Spirit with a man supposes that he is the man . . . for, as the Spirit then thinks, apprehends, and wills in like manner with the man, and the acts follow, he supposes that he is the man. But this does not last long . . .

1582. It is impossible for a Spirit to pass into a man's body, and live in it. Ex. 1750.

1583. That the qualities of Spirits can be at once Known by those who are interior.

1586. Spirits can be carried as it were out of themselves and see themselves as they really are.

1587. That it is common and proper to man to speak with Spirits and Angels. 2541.

1593. That when a Spirit is taken up into Heaven, he is as it were taken away from Spirits.

1612. They spoke with me through Spirits . . .

1622. That Spirits lie.—When Spirits begin to speak to man, he must beware of believing them; for they will say almost anything. Des. . . Therefore the state of speaking with Spirits in this Earth is very dangerous unless one is in true faith. They induce so strong a persuasion that it is the Lord Himself who is speaking, and commanding, that the man cannot but believe and obey.

1647. That the things I have learned from . . . speaking with Spirits and Angels are from the Lord alone.

— Thus have I been instructed; by no Spirit, or Angel . . . (T.779.)

1656. A Spirit is sent to prepare the way for the coming of Angels to a man.

1668. Spirits who are entirely unwilling to have been in the body. Des. 1684.

1706. On an indeterminate state of Spirits. 1707, Ex.

1708. Spirits have often charged me with having no life . . .

1719. The notion that Spirits are devoid of senses, refuted.

1721. Spirits through whom others speak . . . (They are very numerous. 1722.) (Most of them are women. 1726.)

1775. On the impression with Spirits that their bodies are alive.

1776. That Spirits are persuaded of things of which the man with whom they are is persuaded. 1853.

1778. If Balaam had cursed the Israelites, some Spirits would have been so persuaded that they would have excited many crews against them.

1795. The malevolence of Spirits in not only inducing thoughts and speech on man, but also the answer . . .

1805. These Spirits . . . deprive the blood of its liquids and spirits.

1811. Such Spirits seat themselves in the mind—animo, as if their thought were the interior thought of the man, so that the man cannot know that such Spirits are present . . .

1852. That Spirits know no otherwise than that they are the man.

1853. That Spirits are persuaded from externals concerning internals.

— Whatever is in the phantasy of the man comes into that of the Spirits. Examp.

1854. So when Aaron washed, etc., the Spirits believed he was holy.

1855. On the heat of Spirits and Angels.

1890. That Spirits persistently burn to have man subject to them.

1900. On the spheres of Spirits.

1902. That little credit is to be given to Spirits speaking.

1905a. By reflections, Spirits saw through me. . . As men do not believe that they are ruled through Spirits, such a reflection cannot be given them; and therefore Spirits do not see through man, but only know from his interiors. (With me) Spirits could see the several objects in the world, and those in the imagination, and those in the thought. While the mind is thus open towards Heaven, there is a certain continuous reflection, and thus a communication of the Spirits with the man, and they know thence that they are not the men with whom they are. 2247.

1907. (The influence Spirits have over the will, as exemplified in the ease or difficulty felt in walking.)

1928. That Spirits are excited by a man who are of like quality and affection with himself.—Man's states change every moment; (but) into whatever state a man comes, Spirits with whom a like passion had been dominant in their lifetime, correspond and co-operate; thus not the same ones, but very many, and they all suppose themselves to be the man . . .

1938. On the Spirits who are with men.—The Spirits with me have been astounded that they were thus with man, and, with me, exactly as if they were in the world, in the body . . . For they cannot know otherwise than that they are the men with whom they are, for they at once come into possession of all things which belong to him . . . while, nevertheless, the man is left to himself, because he too is a Spirit, and so is in their society. 1939, Ex.

1944. That the permissions of evils from Spirits are represented by a remission of their endeavour.

1958^e. For Spirits cannot know what Angels think unless it is communicated to them.

[D.] 1959. That it is dangerous for Heaven to be opened into any Spirit . . .

1962. On a certain Spirit who desired to come into Heaven. 2049.

1984. As a Spirit can speak in a man, and does not know that he is not the man, he (must suppose) that he has the memory of sensuous things . . .

1985. That the situation where Spirits appear is only apparent.

1992. How good is turned into evil by Spirits.

1996-1998. On the effect of music and singing on Spirits.—It has twice happened that I heard music in the street, which so soothed the Spirits that they (supposed) they were in Heaven . . . They are so changed by it that they are scarcely the same. I therefore joked with them, saying it was no wonder the evil Spirit of Saul was so changed . . . They said they were in such a state that they could now neither think nor do anything evil . . . The Angels were also gladdened, but only when I paid less attention to it, so that I did not mingle the gladness of the Spirits as communicated to me . . . 2090. 2108. 2231. 2403.

2272. On the action of Spirits into the prophets.

2281. Spirits who were possessing my body . . .

2302. That there is no need to revere any Spirit.

2304. The state of Spirits is such that they are not allowed to act from license, or free will.

2312^e. The thoughts of Spirits are excited and disturbed by the disturbance of wakefulness, and therefore the perception is not so subtle then as on first awaking.

2321^e. Every Spirit supposes that he can act according to his own phantasy.

2322². Such is the state of the Spiritual World that if a single Spirit thinks otherwise than in order, his neighbours are at once disturbed . . .

2330. It is the spirit in the body which lives . . .

2332. When the Lord concedes it, Spirits are at once present, even if 10,000 miles distant . . . sometimes so near that they appear close to the ear, to the head, and also within the man. The same happens if they are in the most distant planet. 2333, Des.

2334. Spirits appear in a fixed quarter according to their quality. Ex.

2352. From the least idea of a man, the Angels know what Spirits are near.

2355. The life which is felt in the body is that of the spirit, and therefore Spirits take it with them . . . 2367². 2386.

2357. On the situation of Spirits relatively to the body.

2366. That Spirits are in a place.

2367. As a Spirit is substance, and, in fact, a subtle organic one, which is the subject of thought, a Spirit speaks . . . in a living and clear voice.

2378. Therefore animals have no need to have any Spirit with them.

2379. When there are no Spirits near a man, still there is influx from some Societies. . . A man who is not in order cannot be without Spirits adjoined to him . . .

2382. That the Spirits who are far away hear and perceive more exquisitely . . .

2386. On the sense of touches with Spirits.

2390. For Angels cannot inflow manifestly into a man's thought except through subordinate or mediate Spirits . . .

2392. On the manifest operations of Spirits.

—^e. Spirits in the body, or Spirits separated from the body, are real substances, and are such substances in man as are conjoined with the material things of his body . . .

2393. Why Spirits do not manifest themselves before men, and instruct them about the existence and quality of Spirits. Ex.

2406. (Men are much more left to themselves than Spirits are.)

2408. (Some Spirits always act in the persons of others.)

2419. Now this Spirit speaks, now that, at various distances. Ex.

2421. (Bodily insanity as caused by Spirits.)

2427. Spirits apprehend these things much better than men.

2429. Spirits are permitted to lead, persuade, and induce cupidity on those who trust in themselves and their own prudence. 2430. (Compare 2431, 2432.)

2435^e. Distant Spirits hear better when I think tacitly.

2436. That Spirits also sleep.

2440. That my representations are seen by Spirits as it were alive.

2447. Spirits seem to themselves to inhabit well-furnished houses . . . according to the genius of each one ; and thus are bent to good . . .

2448. Some Spirits do not want such things, but money. I told them that they do not need to buy anything there. Ex. 2449.

2463. Certain from the families of Spirits thought . . .

2480. The Spirits around man are such that as soon as any truth comes forth . . . they feel a repugnance.

2514. They take with them there a high spirit (and want to be greater than others).

2524. On the interior thought of Spirits.

2531. They thus become interior Spirits.

2534. On interior Spirits. 2565, Ex. 2577, Ex.

2535. The difference between exterior and interior Spirits.

2538. After some delay, Spirits are brought by the Lord into this interior state, as it were through sleep . . .

2540. Spirits have often wondered that they were in the other life . . .

2541. If men were in faith in the Lord, Heaven could be thus opened to them . . . almost as in me, and thus there would be an intercourse of Souls, Spirits, and Angels with men in the world . . . so that Spirits would know what is going on in the world, and men what is going on in Heaven. Thus they would live together, both ways. (It has been ordained by the Lord from eternity that there should be such an intercourse. 2542.)

2544. I told the Spirits that they are not near me, although they seem to be . . . so near as to touch me. . . It is a most certain experience that they cannot be here, but sometimes 10, 100, 1000, 3000 miles distant . . . But the Spirits did not want to believe it . . . See 2887.

2549. The Spirits said they do not know they have such superior faculties . . .

2550, et seq. Spirits thrown down upon me, having been ejected from the society of Angels for being in a false idea.

2557. That Spirits perceive quite fully the thoughts of man.

2559. That Spirits, too, are at once carried into doing evil when the reins are slackened.

2569. The Spirits (of the interior sphere) do indeed inflow into the thoughts of man, but do not perceive them ; but only his intentions ; and therefore when such (evil) intentions are absent, they cannot understand ; and then good Spirits take them up, who are also interior Spirits . . .

2571. These interior Spirits cannot be where there are good interior Spirits, just as they cannot be together in this world. Ex.

2574. The Spirits in the interior sphere use the Spirits in the exterior sphere . . .

— . In the life of the body, although the Spirits are distinct, they appear to them to be a one . . . (and thus) they put on the man himself, because such Spirits are with him as suppose themselves to be the man.

2582. That there is a great multitude of Spirits who take delight in inflicting injury on others.

2590. That Spirits know from reflection that they are present.

2591^e. How the first man existed without Spirits and Angels.

2669. So with Spirits : although myriads concur to one idea, or word, each one supposes that he alone does it.

2686. That Spirits who are of the same genus and species can be induced to believe that they are the same. . . And they induce other Spirits to believe they are the same. . . Such Spirits have been with me, and have wanted to persuade me, because they themselves were persuaded, that they were those same persons. 2860.

2687. Therefore let those to whom it is granted to speak with Spirits beware of believing that they are those whom they say they are . . . for those who are like in genus and species . . . conduct themselves in the same way . . . (Moreover) such Spirits are in general associated with those who are like him, and, while with him, they know no otherwise than that they are the same. 2860.

2696. An idea of interior Spirits is inexpressible : yet is intelligible to those who are separated from the world while they live in the body . . .

2697^e. The speech, ideas, and felicities (of the Angels) are the continual beginnings of those of the interior Spirits ; and, through this, of those of the lower Spirits, or of men.

2744. Spirits who are wizards and witches : they spoke with others as if it were I.

2745. They are proud of being subtle, and within the sphere of speech . . . in which are the interior Spirits . . .

- [D.] 2746^e. But a Spirit cannot be dissolved and perish.
2755. So that no Spirit may lose anything of what belongs to his natural mind and memory.
2758. On the speech of the Spirits of the interior sphere.
2764. Spirits who can induce others to believe whatever they like.
2784. Although Spirits do not see natural objects, a certain sense comes from them to them. Ex.
2789. Such persuasions have the effect that they cannot be with other Spirits.
2787. A Spirit who had committed a crime, and caused the surrounding Spirits to believe themselves guilty of it.
2799. How the speech of man is ruled through Spirits.
2801. On the quality of the Spirits who at this day come from the world.
2839. Such need more Spirits; those who are led according to order, fewer.
- ^e. The operations of the internal viscera do not need the immediate aid of Spirits, because they are according to order.
2845. That Spirits see all the thoughts of man, and what he has thought, and his intentions, and yet do not know that they are not the men. 3351^e.
2852. Every Spirit takes out of the memory that which belongs to his own nature; and thus man is rent, suffers, . . . just as unclean Spirits have seen things I have not seen myself, and have directed my eyes to filthy things . . . of which I must have remained wholly ignorant, unless such Spirits had known, felt, and thus seen them. The reason is, that they remove, and thus do not see, all things which do not accord with their unclean delights.
2862. On traveller Spirits, whom other Spirits flee from: they make a sound as of little bells. 2972.
2895. Persecution by interior Spirits . . .
2914. That Spirits are found and affected by my looks—intuitions.
2915. On the other hand, Spirits, by their looks into me, take out of my memory . . .
2917. On the bodies of Spirits.
2925. The Spirits associated with man. 2926.
2927. Spirits appropriate all the knowledges of man. . . . Whatever a man is skilled in, the Spirits possess as their own. Examp. 2928.
2930. These stationary Spirits kept me half way between sleep and waking . . . 2931^e.
2933. These Spirits supposed they were living in the body.
2938. That Spirits cannot assail persuasions with man; they are as it were in the like persuasion . . .
2939. That some Spirits do not at once put on the memory of man.
2942. That the interior Spirits have a subtle perception . . .

- . When permitted, Spirits can, unknown to me, take many things from my memory.
2951. With what difficulty man can be persuaded that he is ruled through Spirits.
2952. That Spirits converse together exactly as men do.
2954. When I was in a shop, the Spirits infused a desire that I should buy this or that . . . which I did not perceive; for, as is my wont in company, I was devoid of reflection upon Spirits. It was then given to the Spirits to reflect upon their state, in that they had caused me to buy (something) and change it; and they said that it was exactly as if they had done it . . . So that Spirits have a life with men exactly as if they were the man . . .
2956. That Spirits have no power, and yet their life is happy.
2957. It has often happened that when anyone has spoken to me, Spirits have spoken (and laughed) through me. Des.
2962. That the style of my writing is varied according to the Spirits associated with me.
2964. On the bonds in which Spirits are held.
2966. That Spirits do not speak from themselves.
2969. (See 2100.)
2967. On the dragon changed into the form of an interior Spirit.
2969. How and wherefore Spirits suppose that they think from themselves, and are not kept in bonds.
2989. That if Spirits enjoyed the corporeal memory, they could not be in a spiritual state.
3010. On Spirits who want to be believed to be the Lord.
3014. That Spirits have no life unless they are allowed the things they desire.
3019. That some Spirits exceedingly desire to be men, and to occupy their bodies.
3020. How the influx of Spirits takes place into man.
3022. Man is the ultimate of order . . . and all ideas, even those of Spirits, are terminated in man's memory . . . A Spirit cannot but think that his ideas begin in himself . . . when yet his ideas are in the ideas of the man in which they are terminated, as may be evident from the fact that they appropriate to themselves each and all things of the man . . .
3024. Each kind of Spirit seizes in an idea that which accords with themselves . . .
- a. The more that ideas are closed by man . . . the less can Spirits infuse into him evils in addition to what he has already acquired. But with him who is in faith, the less his ideas are determined to one thing, the better it is. Ex.
3043. In speech with Spirits the idea in a word is most exquisitely observed. Examp.
3050. On the true speech of Spirits.
3056. On some Spirits who supposed it to be a phantasy that I have converse with Spirits, and that there are any Spirits. 3057.

3060. The effect on Spirits of the phantasies of others. Des.

3060a. How dangerous it is for any learned person who is imbued with phantasies to speak with Spirits.

3064. That the quality of a Spirit may be Known from a single word.

3081. That one Spirit is led by another into almost the like thoughts.

3101. Spirits suppose they can carry off the things they see. Examp.

—^e. (Evil Spirits, although shown that they are Spirits, at once forget it; but good Spirits have reflection given them, so that they continue to know it.) 3102, Examp.

3103. The first cause why a Spirit supposes himself to be a man, is that no reflection is given him while he is with a man who does not speak to him, or answer him; for speaking with a Spirit is conjoined with their reflecting upon him who speaks; thus that they are not man, but separate from man, and thus Spirits.

3104. (Another reason) is that the Spirit puts on the man's memory, thus he puts on the man . . . But they do not possess the interior memory; this is possessed by the Angels who rule the Spirits who are below. . . When a man reaches the point that his interior memory is ruled by the interior Spirits—which is never permitted—the man can live no longer.

3114. Spirits suppose that they could have been led differently and thus have become better . . .

3117. That the bodies of Spirits are beheld in a fixed attitude as well as in a fixed place.

3128. On speech with Spirits. (See SPEAK, here.)

3129. Therefore Spirits are in a more perfect state . . .

3134. That Spirits speak those things which others think interiorly.

3143. That Spirits retain in the interior memory the things they hear, see, and perceive . . . but they cannot recall them; the Lord alone can.

3155. How it is that a Spirit seems to lose everything of his own.

3157. That a Spirit supposed himself to be completely me; and that he was endowed with a body.

— . When I stretched out my hand, another spirit supposed . . . that he took hold of it . . . And when other Spirits insisted that they were as it were my body, I told them that my body is adjoined to my spirit, so that it is the body of my spirit, and that the bodies of their spirits are dead; so that they inflowed only into my spirit, as one Spirit does into another; and that when my spirit acts with my body, they suppose that they act with my body; but it is impossible for another spirit to possess another body, except by acting as one obsessed; for no spirit squares with my body except my own . . . There is a connection of my spirit with my body which can never exist between another spirit and my body.

3180. See SPHERE.

3223. A little Spirit flew from him, (which) was said to be his interior spirit.

3234. Thus Spirits retain whatever they hear . . .

3323. Such is the respiration of Spirits.

3332. Spirits cannot speak from themselves . . . When I fixed my gaze on a fly, the Spirit had to speak about the fly. (See SPEAK, here.)

3351. How greatly the knowledge and intelligence of Spirits surpasses that of men.

3353^e. The Spirits fled, crying that they could not endure so cadaverous an odour.

3398. These (Spirits) have their head in their World of Spirits, and their feet in man; whereas those recently from the world appear to themselves as men; but evil Spirits have their head in the tail, and the feet upwards. (See ANGEL, here.)

3400. A Spirit seen who could change his situation, and also that of almost all in the sphere. 3401. 3402, Des. 3404 (his bright stings).

3403. Thus there are Spirits who can excite such things from the ideas of others as the thinker is not aware of. Examp.

— . Thus there are Spirits who excite all things whatever which are in the idea of a man; some, the nearest things; some, the more remote ones; some, the most remote ones; and some even the consequents.

3423. Spirits and Angels speak metrically, use familiar words, and none which distract the attention. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

3422. On the ideas of Spirits.

3423. On the metrical thought of Spirits.

3427. On the drunkenness of Spirits.

3470. On spirit, that it is an extense.

3471. If spirit were mere thought, what need would man have of so large a brain . . .

3472. We spoke about the form which Spirits have . . .

—^e. Therefore the forms of Spirits are much more perfect . . . But what the forms of Spirits are like . . . it is not given to know.

3473. If I were to write according to the understanding . . . of Spirits and Angels, it would be so obscure to man that he would see scarcely anything . . . That which is clear to man would be obscure to Spirits, who understand the ideas of thought; and, in like manner, that which is clear to Spirits would be obscure to Angels; from which it follows that what is obscure to man is clear to Spirits; and what is obscure to Spirits is manifest to Angels.

3476. Thus the notion of time and space is not given to Spirits, except to those who are corporeal.

3488. On the best Spirits; of another Earth (Mars).

3495. How one Spirit leads another to think and speak.

3524. Thus Spirits exquisitely perceive the changes of affections and persuasions.

3525. With every man there are two angelic Spirits at his head, through whom the Lord protects the man, and whose office it is to moderate and rule the evil Spirits who come to him, besides other things . . .

There are, besides, Spirits who suppose themselves to be the man, one, two, or three, who are Subjects of the World of Spirits . . . and which Spirits are changed according to the general changes of the man's state, and are ruled by angelic Spirits of whom they are entirely ignorant. Angelic Spirits, without reflection, know no otherwise than that they are the man, but the interior man; they act into the interiors of his thoughts . . .

[D.] 3529. That although Spirits see and perceive nothing through man's senses, they know what he thinks, and perceive what he desires.

— The Spirits know the taste of the things I eat and drink, although they have not taste . . . They are as it were the thoughts and cupidities of the man, and whatever enters through the senses, he at once draws into his thought and cupidities, and thus he draws it to them, so that they have no need to see and hear it.

3540. On the very sad sphere of those who suppose Spirits to be like air.

3564. That Knowledges are the food of Spirits.

3566. The Spirits with a man enjoy their (spiritual) food along with the spirit of the man, while his body is enjoying its food.

3567. Spirits have every sense except taste . . . They are delighted with spiritual food when with men, thus with the Knowledges of truth and good; but they do not insinuate themselves into the taste . . .

3605. When I removed into the next room, there was a quiet among the Spirits, as if they did not know where I was. . . Spirits want to have the idea of place joined, (otherwise) the idea is not determinate; and one place has an advantage over another, from the neighbourhood of the Spirits, who seem to themselves to haunt it . . . They drew back the foot when places were thought of, a sign that . . . places and material things are the fulcra on which they stand. 3608, Des.

3608. That the ideas of Spirits are attached to a place and to the things of the place. . . In the ideas of some Spirits are books; in those of others, furniture; in those of others, lights, etc. . .

3609. So when I put on a different garment, I seemed to them so much like a different person that they scarcely recognized me.

3610. Thus the ideas of Spirits are terminated in material things, the ultimates of order, upon the removal of which they do not know where they are, and they disappear, until they have fixed their ideas in other material things. So with the Word . . .

3618. A certain Spirit had put on the persuasion that in the other life he should have a sweet sleep. (Continued under SLEEP.)

3620. On seeing boys fighting, I perceived the greatest delight inflowing from certain Spirits . . .

3624. There are various objects of the thoughts, which . . . while the man's reflection is kept fixed upon them by Spirits, create much trouble. Examps. (Hence the melancholy of many, weaknesses of the mind, deliriums, insanities, and phantasies. 3625.)

3626. Some are led so far by Spirits that they cannot return into truths . . . These are called open insanities. Examps.

3627. For Spirits are such that when a man thinks himself to be in some other city . . . the Spirits, being still more devoid of reflection, suppose . . . themselves to be there, in the streets; nay, they have followed my image about, not knowing but that it was myself. It is the same with other things of which a man thus thinks. Examp.

3628. They who are in faith are delivered by the Lord, however they may be infested with such insanities by Spirits . . .

3630. The great curiosity of Spirits.

3631. That the speech of the interior Spirits could not be communicated to me without Subjects.

3633. Thus it may be seen how it is that every Spirit supposes himself to live and think, and thus to be the man, whom they do not know to be separate from themselves. Thus, in the eyes of Spirits, men are nothing; and even if they know one to be a man, and also a Spirit, still they behold him as an inanimate machine; while the man supposes himself to live and think, and a Spirit to be nothing.

3637. The speech of the lower Spirits.

3685. Spirits were seen around me, as if not in any Society, but as it were flowing freely, which is from the phantasy of those who suppose Spirits to be like an invisible atmosphere . . .

3698. A Spirit said something to me . . . and in an instant seemed to me to answer. He said I had answered . . . but other Spirits, one after the other, said it was from them . . .

3717^e. That they might not inhere in my memory and thus be seen by Spirits.

3748. For they who suppose a Spirit to be nothing, in the other life nothing appears to them except a kind of emptiness . . . 3754.

3751. A Spirit continually inflows into the thoughts (of the Quakers), and confirms them . . .

3753. That Spirits terminate their ideas in material things. . . There were two small white cups . . . and some Spirits wanted me to use the one, and some the other . . . Other Spirits then suggested that I should break one of the cups, at which the Spirits who preferred that one began to lament, and besought me not to do it, because they then could no longer be present. . . There are also Spirits who have my four books, in which I write this [Diary] for their ultimate of order; some one, and others another.

3759. See SPEAK. 3976. 4102. 4211. 4212. 4318.

3762. They said they were Spirits from eternity . . .

3767. The influx of the Spirits (of the Quakers) who caused the convulsion of the bodies . . .

3768. In this way Spirits lie with their women; for [otherwise] Spirits never so rule man that they act the man in the things which are corporeal . . . Spirits act only into the thoughts and cupidities.

3775. For their Spirit can speak only according to the doctrinal things of their memory . . .

3781. Hence it is evident how dangerous it is, in this Earth, for Spirits to speak with men; or for men to attend to the operations of Spirits in themselves, if they are not in faith in the Lord: if they are in faith, it does no harm, for the Lord delivers them; but if they are not in faith . . . they are not only persuaded that it is the Holy Spirit, but are also excited and irritated to wicked things; for almost the whole world of Spirits is wicked, and enthusiastic, and desires most studiously to obsess man . . . 3815.

3782. It has often happened that Spirits have infused cupidities and persuasions, and I knew no otherwise than that it was from myself. (But) the Spirits with a man cannot infuse persuasions unless he was in them before; but they can infuse cupidities, and thus persuasions from them . . . Moreover, they can not only excite cupidities, but also inflame them greatly, sometimes to shameful anger and insanity . . . and then the Spirits are in their delight, or life . . .

3784^e. For when Spirits cannot know the secrets of others they cannot endure them; for they are very curious; and therefore the Quaker Spirits live separate from others.

3786. While Spirits are speaking or thinking through another, they infuse their cupidities and persuasions into the other Spirit, so that the other Spirit supposes that he is speaking and thinking from himself . . . and the Spirits speaking through him consider him through whom they speak as nothing . . . for they can use him as a mere dead instrument . . . (But the case is quite different with those who are in faith. Ex. 3787.) 3789.

3852. Spirits who care nothing for natural things. Des.

3857. That Spirits suppose things to be just as the man thinks.

—². The Spirits who are nearer the man, as Subjects, have reflection like the man, as the reflection of place, persons, etc.: and therefore those who speak to themselves . . . become angry, etc. by mere thought, being so excited by the Spirits.

3858^e. Yet it is altogether forbidden that the function of eating and of taste should be occupied by any Spirit.

3877. One kind of dreams inflows from Spirits, who act the persons seen in the dream.

3890. Dippel's belief concerning Spirits.

3894. When the ordure of horses was seen, certain Spirits could not endure the sphere thence arising, namely, that of reasonings among the evil . . . So when I ate butter on my bread, certain Spirits, or a Society of Spirits, were so indignant that they tried to do harm to my tongue . . . because butter signifies what is celestial. Other examp.

3895. Lascivious female Spirits who would have nothing to do with men; and who went to the boundaries of the universe to practise their wickedness.

3900. They become Spirits almost devoid of sense.

3902. These Spirits . . . from their not reflecting, observed nothing of the objects before my eyes . . . although they could see through my eyes; which shows the quality of the Spirits who are with men . . .

3917. What confusion would arise if Spirits were to retain the memory of particulars.

3920. A Spirit might be held as it were suspended from his evil . . .

3952^e. So that the woman was not a Spirit, but the representation of a woman.

3957. Those who relate to the ears, differently from other [Spirits], change their situation as the man does the position of his ear.

3962. If a Spirit were to use his own memory, he would no longer suppose himself to be the man, but himself . . .

3966. On Spirits who excite delights, and closely follow everything in their thought, in order to destroy.

3974. On the operation of Spirits into the tongue.

3976. That Spirits have to speak as they think.

3998. I spoke with Spirits about the sense of taste, which they do not perceive . . .

4001. See MEMORY. 4041. 4042. 4044. 4114a. 4115. 4120. 4125. 4167. 4168. 4195. 4253. 4259. 4313. 4324. 4335. 4342. 4398. 4430. 4431. 4469. 4716. 4765. D.Min.4550.

4001. It is granted to no Spirit to teach man, nor to lead him, except from cupidity . . .

4002. In these things I was held by Spirits to utter weariness . . .

4010^e. These things were thought with Spirits, through Spirits, from Angels.

4017. A Spirit is where his idea is; for a Spirit is not separated from his idea; without the idea he would not be a Spirit; it is his life; therefore, where his life is, there is the Spirit.

4055. When a Spirit tries to rush outside those things which he had in his life acquired by actuality . . . he at once incurs the penalty.

[D.] 4060. Certain Spirits were permitted to pass from me to a man, and thence to speak to me . . . The man appeared to them as a kind of black inanimate mass . . . Such is the relative character of the corporeal life.

4070. When Spirits cherish the idea that they are a general atmospheric something, wandering about in the universe, they appear as a general empty something . . .

4088. If all the reasonings of Spirits were to inflow, man would be in an obscure general dully painful [state].

4090. Hence Spirits, and still more Angels, continually speak together, and are as much in life as men, reasoning, speaking, thinking about various things, according to the influx, and knowing no otherwise than that it is from themselves; when yet they flow in from every side; for every one is as it were a centre . . .

4100. Spirits cannot bear the expression that they are nothing. But they were told that they are always something . . . from the Lord . . .

4114a. On the two lives of a Spirit.

— . The marvellous way in which Spirits reason, and adduce confirmations. 4115.

—². To those who do not speak with Spirits, such Spirits apply themselves as are of an almost like persuasion . . . When a man changes his persuasions, other Spirits are applied to him; and therefore such as is the persuasion of the man, such is that of the Spirit; the Spirit continually excites things which confirm; and besides, the Spirit with a man is drawn into his persuasion, and puts on a like one . . . The life of cupidities is distinct . . . 4115.

4118. The life of cupidity remains to Spirits, and excites various cupidities with the man . . .

4119. With man are Spirits who are in a like persuasion and in a like cupidity, which Spirits may be called the Subjects of many; for the persuasion and cupidity with a man at once excite those who are like . . .

2849. The spiritual are called 'stars' in the Word passim, because they have Knowledges and not perceptions, (and because) the spiritual have light which is relatively like the nocturnal light of the moon and stars.

2861. Those in good within the Church are those who can be truly spiritual, because they have the Word; for man becomes spiritual through truths of doctrine conjoined with good of life: all the Spiritual is thence; but the gentiles, not having the Word, even if in the good of charity, are not truly spiritual until they have been instructed in the truths of faith.

2869. The third class of the spiritual who are saved. Sig.

2928⁵. The reason truths are predicated of the spiritual, is that the spiritual are initiated into good through truths, that is, into charity through faith; and, as they do good from the affection of truth, not knowing that it is good from anything else than that they are so instructed, their conscience is founded in these truths of faith.

2930. But with the spiritual, or in the Spiritual Church, the Intellectual is separated from the Voluntary; and the man is reformed by the Lord as to the Intellectual, and in it is formed a new will and a new understanding.

2935². They who are being regenerated, and are becoming spiritual, are in the greatest obscurity as to truth. Good does indeed inflow with them from the Lord, but not so truth. Sig. and Ex.

2937. The spiritual are said to be 'bought with silver,' that is, redeemed through truth. For they are regenerated, that is, introduced to good, through the truth of faith; for the spiritual man has no perception of good . . .

2954². For the spiritual have nothing of the will of good, but instead of it are endowed with the faculty of understanding what good is . . . The spiritual, therefore, are introduced into . . . good through truth; but not into anything of the will of good from themselves, because the will of good with them has been lost; but into a new will, which they receive from the Lord; and, when they have received this will, they are called, in special, the redeemed.

2979². In the regeneration of the spiritual man, he is first instructed in truths, and is then kept by the Lord in the affection of truth. The good of faith . . . is at the same time insinuated into him, but so that he scarcely knows it; for it lies concealed in the affection of truth. Further ex.

3080². Thus it is the Spiritual in the Natural which affects.

3094^e. As the light of Heaven (comes) through the Divine truth in His Human, it penetrates not only to the celestial, but also to the spiritual . . .

3108. Those not in good, and thence in faith . . . do not know that there is what is spiritual . . .

3122². But the spiritual do think about the things of faith; and, when being reformed and regenerated, they are introduced into charity through them . . .

3166. Spiritual things thence for natural good. Sig. and Ex. (And for natural truth also. 3167.) 3168^e. 3171.

3167. The internal man is the same as the spiritual man. (See INTERNAL MAN, here, et seq.)

— . In Heaven there are none but spiritual things.

3187. 'Seed' = those who are called the spiritual. Des.

3246. 'The sons of the concubines' = the spiritual who are adopted by the Divine Human. These have allotments in the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

—². The spiritual are from the same father (Divine good); but not from the same mother (Divine truth) as the celestial. Ex.

— . (Therefore) the spiritual do not know what truth is from any perception, but call that truth which has been told them by their teachers; and therefore in them there is not the marriage of good and truth; but still the truth which they thus believe is adopted by the Lord for truth when they are in the good of life.

3248. That the spiritual have life from the Divine Human. Refs.

—^e. Life is given to the spiritual through the good of faith. Tr.

3264. The birth of the spiritual man from the Divine influx into the affection of knowledges. Sig. and Ex.

—². For the Spiritual has no existence except in the Rational, and therefore the spiritual man and the rational man are almost the same. Ex.

3266. The qualities of the doctrinals of the spiritual. Sig. and Ex.

3293². The life of the Spiritual (of a Spirit) is terminated in the Natural . . . for man, immediately after death, cannot think spiritually, except from the things which are of his Natural.

3310. Without doctrinals, the good of life is not yet truly spiritual . . .

3325⁷. They are called spiritual from love to the neighbour.

3332². In (these verses) is described . . . the progress with the spiritual man when being regenerated: he first learns the doctrinals of truth; then is affected with them . . . afterwards, by looking into doctrinals he is affected with the truths which are in them . . . at last, he wills to live according to them. . . When he is in the good of life the order is inverted, and from this good he regards the good of truth; from this the good of doctrinals; and from this the doctrinals of truth. Thus does man, from being sensuous, become spiritual; and this is his quality when he becomes spiritual.

[A.] 3342. All spiritual things whatever can be representatively presented . . .

3343. Spiritual things, which are of truth, are expressed by modifications of heavenly light . . . and celestial things, which are of good, by variations of heavenly flame or heat.

3374. 'I will give all these lands' = spiritual things . . . for spiritual things are nothing else than truths from the Divine.

— . By the Spiritual, in the genuine sense, is meant the light itself of truth which is from the Lord . . . and as this light inflows into both the Rational and the Natural, the Spiritual is predicated of both. 4675^e.

3385. The first class of the spiritual. Tr. and Des.

3390. The reception of truth by the spiritual. Tr.

3394. As the spiritual have not perception . . . they do not know that Divine truth becomes rational truth with man when he is regenerate. They do indeed say that all good and truth is from the Lord; yet as these come forth in their Rational they suppose them to be their own . . . for they cannot be separated from their proprium, which wills it to be so. Sig. —³, Ex.

—³. It here treats of the regenerate spiritual man, who has received the Divine good in a new will, and the Divine truth in a new understanding.

3413. From these loves they cannot possibly see spiritual things, that is, the things which are of the light of truth from Him.

3424. Relatively to the spiritual, the Word is not a 'fountain,' but a 'well.'

3648. Unless the Spiritual from the Lord continually acted within . . .

3679¹. The man then thinks spiritually . . . He then cannot think spiritually . . .

3886. The pulsations of the spiritual are strong and vibratory, and are to those of the celestial as 2 to 5. (See BEAT, here.)

3906. Spiritual affection.

3909². The internal sense is accommodated to the apprehension of the spiritual man.

3913³. (The spiritual man contrasted with the natural man.)

—⁴. For man to become spiritual, the things of the external man must be reduced to compliance . . .

3921³. In these verses the regeneration of the spiritual man is treated of. (That is, the regeneration of man till he becomes spiritual. 3971.) 4402.

3923. 'Joseph' = the spiritual man himself. Ex. 3969³, Ex.

3951^e. He who is a spiritual man does not despise (riches, food, and its pleasures, etc.) Ex.

3969³. There are two things which constitute the spiritual man, namely, charity and faith . . . Charity from which is faith . . . is represented by Joseph; and faith in which is charity . . . by Benjamin . . .

—⁵. The spiritual man is in the good of faith, that is, in the good from which there is truth; but before he becomes spiritual he is in the truth of faith, that is, in truth in which there is good.

—¹⁰. The Salvation of the spiritual. Ill.

3971. The acknowledgment of the Spiritual. Sig. and Ex.

— . For the Spiritual, because it is from the Lord, is what makes the spiritual man, and the Spiritual Kingdom.

4015. The power and disposing of the spiritual man in the natural. Sig. and Ex.

4044. Representations are the images of spiritual things in natural ones. . . He who does not know what the spiritual is . . . would say, How can what is spiritual act into what is material? Ex. 4053^e.

4046³. See DURA MATER, here. D.1692.

4279². The Word in the Second Heaven is spiritual . . .

4286³. The celestial spiritual are those who above are called the spiritual . . .

—⁸. Temptations and victories in them are what make man spiritual, (or, what make the spiritual man).

4360². For spiritual things are founded upon natural ones, and are represented in them.

4366³. They separate spiritual life from civil . . . when yet no idea about spiritual life can be had except from the things which are in civil life.

4378. Spiritual things nascent in the Natural. Sig. . . . For in the state of infancy, when man is being regenerated, spiritual things are in potency; for spiritual life comes forth successively . . . as from an egg . . .

4402². The spiritual man is not the interior rational man, but the interior natural man. (4585⁴. —^e.) . . . Man becomes spiritual by this; that with him truths are conjoined with good, that is, the things of faith with the things of charity, and this in his Natural: there exterior truths are first conjoined with good, and afterwards interior truths.

—³. The spiritual man is so called from this: that the light of Heaven . . . inflows with him into the things which are of the light of the world, and causes the things of the former to be represented in the latter . . . For, regarded in itself, the Spiritual is the Divine light itself which is from the Lord, consequently, it is the intelligence of truth, and the derivative wisdom. But, with the spiritual man, this light falls into those things which are of faith with him, and which he believes to be truths . . .

5006². At the mere mention of what is spiritual, something of darkness and sadness comes over them, and excites nausea . . . 8783². 9109².

5008⁷. When this ultimate spiritual truth is withdrawn, the spiritual man has no longer anything with which to defend himself against the natural man. Sig. and Ex. 5022, Ex. 5025, Ex. 5028, Ex. 5036⁴.

—^e. For from natural light it is impossible to see the things of spiritual light . . .

5013. The Spiritual with man and in the Church is compared to 'heaven;' and the Natural to 'earth,' because the Spiritual is prior, interior, and higher, and nearer the Divine 5025². That the use and the end make a thing spiritual, or not spiritual. Ex.

5036². Temptations come forth especially when man is becoming spiritual; for he then spiritually apprehends the truths of doctrine. Ex. and Tr. —⁵, Examp.

—⁶. Such is the origin of spiritual anxieties.

5081^e. Those of the Internal Church are spiritual . . . and the truly spiritual, or internal, can exist only within the Church.

5113¹⁵. The Intellectual of the spiritual man is made new and regenerated by the truth which is solely from the Lord. Sig.

5114². From this, man has civil, moral, and spiritual life.

5117². See GRAPE.

5131. There is a correspondence of natural with spiritual things; and of spiritual things with celestial ones . . .

5150^e. Man is celestial if he receives Divine good in the will; spiritual, if in the understanding.

5173^e. This force, or conatus, in action, or motion, is what is spiritual in what is natural; for to think and will are spiritual, and to act and be moved are natural.

5196. Scientifics are the ultimates of the spiritual things of the Lord's Kingdom.

5208². How the correspondence between the Spiritual and the Natural with man is effected.

5223^e. What is spiritual is at this day denied, unless thereby is meant what is interiorly natural.

5232. (Thus) there are two things which make man spiritual, and consequently blessed (there): charity and faith.

5247. They who have become rational men, that is, spiritual ones . . .

5307². The Celestial is good from the Divine; the spiritual is truth from that good, thus it is the truth of good from His Divine Human. The Lord was this while He lived here.

5323. The intermediate where the Spiritual is conjoined with the Natural, thus where the knees are . . . 5328.

5326². But, with the man who is being regenerated, the spiritual becomes everything. (Continued under NATURAL.)

5328^e. By the spiritual is meant that in the Natural which is of the light of Heaven . . .

5344. The interior things of the interior Natural are those things there which are called spiritual; and the spiritual things there are those which are from the light of Heaven . . . In the spiritual things there, are stored up truths adjoined to good. The spiritual things there are those which correspond to the angelic Societies in the Second Heaven . . .

5459^e. Spiritual worship, and celestial worship.

5614^e. Thus does the Natural becloud the Spiritual.

5620⁴. 'Fine flour' = what is spiritual.

5637. Spiritual things in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5639². What the spiritual is relatively to the Natural Ex. . . In its essence, the spiritual with man is the affection itself of good and truth for the sake of good and truth, and not for the sake of self; and also the affection of what is just and fair for the sake of what is just and fair, and not for the sake of self. When a man feels in himself delight . . . from these things, that is the Spiritual with him . . . This, then, is the Spiritual, which, when it reigns with a man, affects and as it were tinges everything he thinks, wills, and does, and causes his thoughts and his acts from the will to partake of what is spiritual, until at last (as after death) these also become spiritual with him. In a word, the affection of charity and faith . . . and the delight . . . thence, which are felt interiorly with the man, and cause him to be a truly Christian man, are the Spiritual.

—³. The reason most in the Christian world are ignorant of what the Spiritual is, is that they make faith the essential of the Church, and not charity . . . and he who is not in the affection of charity can never know what the Spiritual is. Ex.

—^e. But . . . in the general sense, the Spiritual means the affection both of good and of truth. Hence Heaven is called the Spiritual World; and the internal sense . . . the spiritual sense; whereas, in special, that which is of the affection of good is called celestial, and that which is of the affection of truth, spiritual.

5682. The self-humiliation of the spiritual, and of the celestial, compared.

5965². That is called spiritual which is in the light of Heaven; for that which is in this light has in it the affection of good and the perception of truth . . .

6104. The inmost of the Spiritual in the natural mind. Sig.

6256. The spiritual, being in obscurity, put truth first. Sig. and Ex. 6269.

6289². That the spiritual are in obscurity. Ex.

6296. That the spiritual man will increase more (than the celestial). Sig. and Ex.

—². For the Voluntary of man has been continually made depraved . . . and, lest man should perish, the Lord has provided that he may be regenerated as to the intellectual part . . . Hence there are few with whom there is anything entire in the voluntary part, thus few who can become celestial men, but many who can become spiritual men.

[A.] 6299. That the Spiritual may be in the truth of the Intellectual and the good of the Voluntary. Sig. and Ex.

6422. 'An archer' = the spiritual man; here, one who fights with the spiritual man.

6431. For scientifics with their delights are in the Natural, and make its life, especially with the spiritual man. Ex.

6685. The Spiritual in its first origin is the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord's Divine Human, which truth has Divine good in it . . . This Divine truth, in which is Divine good, is the spiritual itself in its origin, and is the life itself which infils . . . the universe . . . In the subjects which accord with good, it presents spiritual life; but in those which are discordant with good, it presents a life contrary to spiritual life.

10156³. But when man becomes spiritual, his interiors, which see from the light of Heaven, are opened, and then the man looks upwards, which is effected by an elevation by the Lord . . .

10237. Man has an external and an internal . . . the internal is called the Spiritual, and also the spiritual man, for the reason that the internal of man is in the Spiritual World . . .

10296. For with the spiritual all the Voluntary has been destroyed; but the Intellectual is conserved entire by the Lord, and in it is implanted a new Voluntary through regeneration by the Lord. This Voluntary is conscience with them, which is a conscience of truth . . .

10604². The ideas of thought of the Angels are . . . spiritual. Ex.

— Interior ideas are called spiritual; and, by the learned, immaterial . . .

H. 87. For he who loves self and the world above all things . . . does not look to spiritual things, because these gratify the internal senses . . .

112^e. Therefore in proportion as a man is spiritual, he is a medium of conjunction (between the two worlds).

116. But the Spiritual, in which is Heaven, is above nature, and entirely distinct from the Natural; nor do they communicate together except through correspondences.

172. The things which come forth from the Sun of Heaven are called spiritual . . .

356². Man thinks both spiritually and naturally, but does not apperceive the things he thinks spiritually . . . But when he comes into the Spiritual World, he perceives (only) the things he had thought spiritually. N. 39, Ex.

461. When what is spiritual touches and sees what is spiritual, it is exactly as when what is natural touches and sees what is natural . . .

529. See LIFE, here. 531.

—^c. The will is the Spiritual itself of man.

530. Almost all exercise sincerity and justice in externals . . . and the spiritual man ought to live in the same way, which he can do as easily as the natural man; but with this difference only, that the spiritual man believes in the Divine, and acts sincerely and justly, not merely because it is according to civil and moral laws, but also because it is according to Divine laws. For, because when he acts he thinks about Divine things, the spiritual man communicates with the Angels, and is in the same proportion conjoined with them, and thus his internal man is opened, which, regarded in itself, is the spiritual man. (The effect upon him des.)

567³. For what is natural does not exist and subsist except from what is spiritual.

N. 38^e. The spiritual man is he who is called 'alive;' the natural 'dead.'

41. The interiors with those who are spiritual men have actually been elevated towards Heaven . . .

48. Refs. to passages on the subject of the Natural and the Spiritual.

112. To will truth because it is truth is the very Spiritual itself of man; for it is abstracted from what is natural, which is to will truth . . . for the sake of self-glory, etc. Truth abstractedly from such things is spiritual, because it is from the Divine; and that which proceeds from the Divine is spiritual; and this is conjoined with man through love; for love is spiritual conjunction. J. 36.

125. In proportion as a man loves what is good and true and what is just and sincere for their own sake, he is spiritual, and so also is his worship . . . But in proportion as he does not so love them, he is natural . . .

J. 24. Hence they knew not that the spiritual man which every man has in his natural one, is equally in the human form; (nor) that the natural man derives his human form from his spiritual man . . .

—². The spiritual man is he who thinks and wills; for the natural man cannot do this from himself; and thought and will are the all in all of the natural man; for the natural man is actuated as the spiritual man wills, and speaks as he thinks . . . (Thus) the spiritual man is truly the man, and is in each and all things of the natural man . . .

— But the spiritual man cannot appear before the natural man; for the Natural cannot see the Spiritual; but the Spiritual can see the Natural, because this is according to order . . . For there is an influx of the Spiritual into the Natural, and therefore a sight . . .

[J. 24²]. The spiritual man is what is called the spirit of man . . .

25. The Spiritual of every man is in conjunction with the Divine, because it can think about and love the Divine, and be affected with all things which are from the Divine . . . and that which can be thus conjoined with the Divine can never die, because the Divine is with it, and conjoins it with itself.

—³. The Spiritual of beasts cannot be separated from their Natural after death, so as to live by itself, as can the Spiritual of man.

27³. For spiritual things are there effigied . . . in an appearance as it were natural, each one with infinite variety; for the Spiritual so greatly surpasses the Natural that the things are but few which can be produced to natural sense; for natural sense does not apprehend one out of thousands which the spiritual mind apprehends; and all things which belong to the spiritual mind are also presented in forms before their sight. Hence it is that the Spiritual World cannot be described . . .

38. And truths which regard faith only, and not life, cannot make man spiritual.

65. The Word is spiritual, and therefore treats of spiritual things; and spiritual things are those of Heaven and the Church.

Life 15. The reason a man who is not spiritual can think and speak rationally, like a spiritual man, is that the understanding can be elevated . . . but not the will. Hence truth and love do not make a one with a man unless he is spiritual. . . It is through this (elevation) that man can be reformed and become spiritual; but he does not become spiritual until the will is elevated too.

16. In what follows . . . they who do what is good from the Lord will be called spiritual men, because with them what is moral and civil is spiritual as to its essence.

42. That in proportion as anyone shuns evils as sins . . . he is spiritual. Gen.art.

F. 3. It is a common saying that no one can comprehend spiritual or theological things, because they are supernatural; but spiritual truths can be comprehended equally with natural ones; and, if not so clearly, still, when they are heard, they fall into the perception as to whether they are true or not, most especially so with those who are affected with truths. . . From these (experiences) many with me have been convinced that spiritual things can be comprehended equally with natural ones; but when they are heard, or read; but with difficulty by a man himself when he is thinking from himself. The reason spiritual things are comprehended, is that as to the understanding man can be elevated into the light of Heaven, in which light no other things appear than spiritual ones, which are the truths of faith.

W. 69. Man can (then) never perceive anything spiritual.

84^e. All the Spiritual which relates to good and truth, can arise from no other source than the Divine love and the Divine wisdom . . .

85. So that man does not know what the Spiritual is.

90. As the Angels are spiritual, they cannot live in any other heat or light than spiritual . . .

100. The heat and light which proceed from the Lord as a Sun are what are called, by eminence, the Spiritual . . . It is from this Spiritual, that that whole World is called Spiritual . . . The reason this heat and light are called the Spiritual, is that God is called a Spirit; and God as a Spirit is this Proceeding . . . 101. 102.

163. The men in the Spiritual World . . . are spiritual; and, being spiritual, they think spiritually and speak spiritually . . . and spiritual thought and speech have nothing in common with natural.

176^e. As the Angels are spiritual . . . it follows that those atmospheres are spiritual; and they are spiritual because they originate from the spiritual Sun . . .

185². Without a Knowledge of these degrees, nothing can be known about . . . the difference between the Spiritual and the Natural.

237. (The opening of the spiritual degree. See DEGREE, here, and at 238. 248. 252. 253. 254.)

248. That if the spiritual degree is not opened, man becomes natural and sensuous. Ex.

249². For the natural man is a servant, and the spiritual man a master.

251. What the natural man is, and what the spiritual man. Ex.

—². The spiritual man also loves the natural world, but only as a master loves his servant . . .

—³. The spiritual man loves spiritual truths . . . and the natural man loves to speak and do them . . . This subordination is from the conjunction of the (two worlds). . . Thus the spiritual man is quite distinct from the natural man; and there is no other communication between them than such as there is between cause and effect. 252.

260^e. (The spiritual man the same as the spiritual mind.)

295^e. Thus the Spiritual and the Natural differ according to degrees of height, and do not communicate together except through correspondences.

330. For a man cannot be conjoined with the Lord unless he is spiritual; and he cannot be spiritual unless he is rational; and he cannot be rational unless his body is in a sound state . . .

333. Uses for receiving the Spiritual from the Lord. Enum. 336.

334. The Angels have a body, a Rational, and a Spiritual, just like men . . .

340. It is the spiritual which derives its origin from the Sun and proceeds to the ultimates of nature, which produces the forms of plants and animals . . . and packs them with matter . . . to give them fixity. 344^e.

343^e. A Spiritual is then present which gives a soul, and a Material which gives a body. Moreover in all the Spiritual there lies an endeavour to clothe itself with a body.

345. The ultimate Spiritual separated from its higher [degrees] operates these evil uses. Ex.

— Thus the ultimate Spiritual, which is called the Spiritual Natural, can be separated from its higher degrees; and it is so separated with the men from whom is Hell . . .

346^e. All animals derive their origin from the Spiritual in the ultimate degree, which is called natural: man alone from all the three degrees . . .

350. Hence they could not think otherwise than that the Spiritual is a purer Natural.

374. What the Spiritual is, and what its correspondence with the Natural, have not been known; but both could have been known. Ex.

416. There is natural love, and there is spiritual love. (Continued under LOVE.)

P. 83. From natural to become spiritual is to be regenerated. 84^e.

84^e. Yet he becomes spiritual only so far as he is in truths . . .

147. Then the Lord opens the spiritual mind . . .

189. Become spiritual by the acknowledgment of God . . .

222. That man can be let into the wisdom of spiritual things, and also into the love of them, and still not be reformed. Gen.art.

322. He who is civil and moral can also become spiritual; for the Civil and Moral is the receptacle of the Spiritual. Ex.

338^d. This . . . is from ignorance of the spiritual state, which is altogether different from the natural. Ex.

R. 1. It is known that there is the Spiritual and the Natural; and that the Spiritual inflows into the Natural, and presents itself to be seen and felt in the forms which fall into sight and touch; and that without these the Spiritual is not perceived otherwise than as affection and thought . . . (Thus) there is a perfect union of spiritual things and natural things in man. So is it in each and all things of the world. There is there the Spiritual, which is the inmost of the cause; and there is the Natural, which is its effect; and the two make a one; and the Spiritual does not appear in the Natural, because it is in it as the soul is in the body . . . So is it with the Word: interiorly, this is spiritual, because it is Divine . . . But as the Spiritual does not appear in the sense of the letter . . . the spiritual sense has been hitherto unknown . . .

7^e. And spiritual things are Things; and natural things are the forms of them.

168. That he who is reformed becomes spiritual. Sig.

— All those become spiritual who are in truths and a life according to them.

392. Spiritual worship. Sig. and Ex.

444². There are three things which make the man of the Church: the Spiritual, the Rational, and the Natural. . . The Spiritual of the Church was signified by Canaan and its rivers; the Rational, by Assyria and its river; and the Natural, by Egypt and its river.

721. Insane in spiritual, that is, in theological things. Sig.

M. 29^e. The state of (such) a man becomes more blessed and happy after death than before it, (because) the man is then spiritual; and a spiritual man feels and perceives spiritual delight, which surpasses natural delight a thousand times.

31. Man after death is not a natural man, but a spiritual man, and yet appears to himself exactly alike, inasmuch that he knows no otherwise than that he is still in the natural world. Des. . . He is indeed actually not alike, because he is spiritual, thus an interior man; but the difference does not appear to him, because he cannot compare his state with his previous natural state; for he has put off the latter, and is in the former; and therefore I have often heard them saying that they know no otherwise than that they are in the former world, with the sole difference that they no longer see those whom they have left behind there, but those who had departed out of that world. (For) a spiritual or substantial man sees a spiritual or substantial man just as a natural or material man sees a natural or material man . . .

—². The reason man after death is a spiritual or substantial man, is that this man had lain hidden in the natural or material man, which had been to it as a clothing, or exuviae, on the casting off of which the man comes forth spiritual or substantial, thus purer, more interior, and more perfect. That the spiritual man is still a perfect man, although he does not appear to the natural man, is plainly evident from the Lord as seen to the apostles after the resurrection, in that He appeared, and presently did not appear; and yet He was a man like Himself both when seen and when not seen. They said, moreover, that when they had seen Him their eyes had been opened.

37. That with those who come into Heaven—who are they who become spiritual on earth—conjugal love most especially remains. Ex.

38. The love of the sex is with the natural man; and conjugal love with the spiritual man. The natural man loves and longs only for external conjunctions, and the pleasures of the body from these; but the spiritual man loves and longs for an internal conjunction, and the blisses of the spirit from it . . .

48². But conjugal love is a spiritual love, and is proper to men because they have been created in order to become spiritual; and therefore, in proportion as a man becomes spiritual, he puts off the love of the sex, and puts on conjugal love.

52. The reason marriages in the Heavens are (attended with) spiritual procreation only . . . is that with those who are in the Spiritual World, the third [successive], which is the Natural, is lacking; and this is the containant of spiritual things, and spiritual things without their containant have no consistence. Regarded in themselves, spiritual things relate to love and wisdom, and therefore these are what are born from their marriages. Ex.

[M.] 54². Consorts, of whom one is spiritual and the other natural, are separated after death, and to the spiritual one there is given a suitable consort, but the natural one is relegated to his like in the places of lasciviousness.

55⁷. A conjunction of minds, and not at the same time of bodies . . . is spiritual love, and thence is chaste love; and this love exists solely with those who are in love truly conjugal . . . Hence they have the chaste love of the sex, which, regarded in itself, is interior spiritual friendship . . .

59^e. But with those who are spiritual, the first state of marriage is an initiament to perpetual blisses, which advance in proportion as the Spiritual Rational of the mind, and, from this, the Natural Sensuous of the body, of the one, conjoin and unite themselves with those of the other. But these are rare.

78². These (wild beasts) rush at all who are spiritual, because the inhabitants are natural.

94. Every man is born corporeal, and becomes more and more interiorly natural; and, in proportion as he loves intelligence, he becomes rational; and afterwards, if he loves wisdom, he becomes spiritual. Ex.

130². The things of the Church, which are called spiritual things, reside in the inmosts with man . . . because they conjoin themselves with Heaven, and through Heaven with the Lord . . . These make the head, and the sequents under them, called civil things, the body; and the ultimates, called natural things, the feet . . . Thus spiritual things inflow into civil ones, and, through civil ones, into natural ones; and, as spiritual things are in the light of Heaven, they illustrate the sequents in order with their light, and animate them with their heat . . .

—⁴. In proportion as man becomes spiritual, he is in love truly conjugal; for he becomes spiritual through the spiritual things of the Church.

145. The reasons why, with those who become spiritual from the Lord, conjugal love is more and more purified, are . . . 2. Because man from natural successively becomes spiritual; for he becomes spiritual in proportion as the Rational—which is the medium between Heaven and the world—begins to derive a soul from the influx from Heaven, which takes place in proportion as it is effected and gladdened with wisdom . . .

148. The internal (Conjugal) is spiritual, and the external, natural. Man first comes into the latter; and, as he becomes spiritual, he comes into the former. Des.

149. For, without religion, man does not become spiritual, but remains natural.

164. (Spiritual virtues as distinguished from moral. Enumm.)

233⁶. Into such, heavenly light cannot inflow, but only something spiritual through the world, whence they have the faculty of confirming.

240. The evils which reside within them . . . are, in general, hatreds, and the consequent intestine combats against everything spiritual; for all the things of the Church, which they reject, are in themselves spiritual; and, as love truly conjugal is the fundamental love of all spiritual loves, they feel an internal hatred against it . . .

280. These conjugal simulations, with a spiritual man conjoined with a natural one, savour of justice and judgment. Ex.

281. See MARRIAGE LOVE here.

— . By a consort who is spiritual, is meant one who loves spiritual things, and thus is wise from the Lord . . .

282. For a spiritual man who is (married) to a natural one, intends nothing else than amendment of life. Ex.

294³. For in every man who is not spiritually, but only naturally, rational and moral, there is cold to his wife . . .

—⁴. This cold is from the insanity of the men in spiritual things; and everyone who is insane in spiritual things, is inmostly cold to his wife, and inmostly warm to harlots.

313³. The reason a different state (of marriage), from a different order, is formed with the spiritual . . . is that the spiritual proceed in a just order, and the natural in an unjust one; for the spiritual look to the Lord . . . whereas the natural look to themselves . . .

326. (I said) I am in a natural state, and at the same time in a spiritual state—in a natural state with the men of the Earth, and in a spiritual state with you; and, when I am in a natural state, I do not see you; and, when I am in a spiritual state, I do see you . . . T.280.

—³. When he heard of the difference between the Spiritual and the Natural, he said, What is this difference? Is it not like that between what is more pure and less so? What is the Spiritual unless it is a purer Natural? I replied, The difference is not such; but is like that which there is between what is prior and what is posterior, between which no finite ratio is possible; for the prior is in the posterior as a cause is in its effect; and the posterior is from the prior as an effect is from its cause. Hence it is that the one does not appear to the other . . . You are in a spiritual state when with your associates, but in a natural state when with me; for you speak with them in the spiritual language . . . and with me in my vernacular . . . In order, therefore, that you may know the difference between the Spiritual and the Natural in respect to languages . . . withdraw to your associates, and speak something there, and retain the words, and, with these in your memory, come back, and utter them before me. He did this . . . and he did not understand one word. (Continued under TONGUE.)

—⁵. (A similar experiment made with writing, which showed that) the spiritual man thinks things which are incomprehensible and ineffable to the natural man, and that these things cannot be put into any but spiritual writing.

—⁶. As the bystanders did not want to comprehend that spiritual thought so far surpasses natural as to be relatively ineffable, I said, Withdraw into your spiritual Society, and think some Thing, and retain it, and come back and bring it forth before me. They did so . . . but could not bring it forth ; for they did not find any idea of natural thought adequate to any idea of spiritual thought. (Continued under IDEA.)

—7. (Thus) spiritual wisdom is the wisdom of wisdom, and is therefore imperceptible to any wise man in the natural world. (Continued under CELESTIAL.)

327. I said, From these three experimental proofs, you see what is the difference between the Spiritual and the Natural ; and also the reason why a natural man does not appear to a spiritual one, nor a spiritual man to a natural one ; although they are consociated as to the affections and thoughts and the derivative presences.

— The Angels, also, had not previously known the differences between the Spiritual and the Natural, because there had been no opportunity before of comparing them together, by any man's being in both worlds at the same time ; and without a comparison these differences are not known.

328. (I continued,) These differences come forth, because you who are in the Spiritual World, and are thence spiritual, are in substantial things, and not in material ones ; and substantial things are the beginnings of material ones. You are in beginnings, and thus in singulars ; but we are in derivatives and composites. You are in particulars ; but we are in generals ; and, as generals cannot enter into particulars, so neither can natural things, which are material, enter into spiritual things which are substantial, any more than . . . a nerve can enter into one of the fibres of which it is composed . . . This is known in the world ; and therefore the learned are agreed that there is no influx of the Natural into the Spiritual ; but of the Spiritual into the Natural. This, then, is the reason why a natural man cannot think the things which a spiritual man thinks . . . and therefore Paul calls the things he heard from the Third Heaven unspeakable (2 Cor. xii. 2, 4).

— Add to this that to think spiritually is devoid of time and space . . .

345^e. (There is no hereditary evil) in the spiritual man ; because man is born into this man from the Lord.

347. That a polygamist . . . cannot become spiritual. — To become spiritual is to be elevated from what is natural ; that is, from the light and heat of the world into the light and heat of Heaven. (Continued under NATURAL.)

380^h. The things which are of life are called spiritual ; whereas the things which proceed from the natural sun are containants of life, and are called natural.

405. The love of children with spiritual consorts and with natural. (Fully quoted under CHILDREN.) 408, Ex.

— For the spiritual are spiritual in proportion as they partake of innocence.

426. What it is which discriminates the spiritual man from the natural, and which excites the latter against the former. Ex.

— The spiritual man is that into which everyone is introduced through the love of doing uses, which love is also called charity ; and therefore in proportion as anyone is in this, he is spiritual ; but in proportion as he is not in this, he is natural . . .

432. He who is in love truly conjugal becomes more and more spiritual ; and in proportion as anyone is more spiritual he is more a man.

443. For no others than spiritual men are in conjugal love ; and the spiritual man is in wisdom ; and he therefore embraces no other delights than those which accord with spiritual wisdom.

482². Conjugal love . . . with those who are made spiritual by the Lord. Des.

532⁵. (From these two suns) comes the difference between the Spiritual and the Natural.

I. 1². Spiritual influx. Ex. (See INFLUX, here.)

5. Spiritual things cannot proceed from any other source than love . . .

9⁴. They who know nothing about the origin of spiritual things from their own Sun . . . can scarcely do otherwise than confound spiritual and natural things, and conclude that spiritual things are nothing but pure natural ones . . .

11. That the Spiritual clothes itself with the Natural, as a man clothes himself with a garment. Ex.

— The Spiritual, being a living force, is an active ; and the Natural, being a dead force, is a passive. It follows that whatever from the beginning has come forth in this solar world . . . is from the Spiritual through the Natural . . .

—². (As) the principal cause and the instrumental cause together make one cause, so do the Spiritual and the Natural. The reason why in producing effects these two appear as a one, is that the Spiritual is within the Natural as the fibre is within the muscle, and the blood within the arteries ; or as thought is within speech, and affection in tones ; and through these, it causes itself to be felt through the Natural.

12. That spiritual things, thus clothed in man, enable him to live rational and moral ; thus spiritually natural. Ex. —⁴.

17². (The notion that the Spiritual is a thin Natural.)

T. 103^e. For the soul is spiritual from its origin ; and the Spiritual has nothing in common with space ; and therefore it is like itself in a small volume as in a great one.

147². As from infancy they have learned the spiritual things of the Church . . . but put them below natural things . . . and as they have a seat in the mind nearest to speech, they can speak from them . . .

200^e. That at the time of the Lord's advent, the Scientific, the Rational, and the Spiritual would make a one, and that both (the latter) would serve the Spiritual. Sig.

280². The Natural can never by subtilization approach the Spiritual so as to become it. Ex.

339. For faith in its essence is spiritual, but in its form natural ; and therefore with man it becomes spiritual natural ; for everything spiritual is received in what is natural in order to be anything with man. The naked Spiritual does indeed enter into man, but is not received . . .

[T.] 360. The difference between natural and spiritual faith and charity. Ex.

— . The heat and light from the spiritual Sun are the things from which are all spiritual things . . .

—². Thus as spiritual light is within natural light . . . and spiritual heat within natural heat, so is spiritual faith within natural faith, and spiritual charity within natural charity . . .

—³. Thus when man is in spiritual faith, he is also in natural faith . . .

— . The contrary happens if the Spiritual is not within the Natural, but the Natural is within the Spiritual. Ex. 361, Ex.

381⁵. With consummate hypocrites there is intestine enmity against truly spiritual men . . .

420. The Spiritual mind and the natural mind. Ex. (See MIND, here, and at 603.)

—². (Thus) the man who primarily regards the world and self is an external man, because he is natural not only as to body but also as to mind ; and the man who primarily regards the things of Heaven and the Church is an internal man, because he is spiritual in both mind and body. The reason he is spiritual as to the body also, is that his actions and speech proceed from the higher mind which is spiritual, through the lower mind which is natural . . .

479. That man has free will in spiritual things. Gen. art. 483. 485. 615.

494. The spiritual things of the Word and the Church which a man imbibes from love, and which his understanding confirms, remain with him ; but not in like manner civil and political things ; because spiritual things climb into the highest region of the mind, and form themselves there. Ex.

501. All in the Christian world since the advent of the Lord can become spiritual ; and one becomes spiritual solely from Him through the Word ; (whereas) miracles deprive man of free will in spiritual things ; and everything compulsory in such things betakes itself into the natural man, and shuts up the spiritual man as with a door, and bereaves this of all power to see any truth in light ; and therefore he would afterwards reason about spiritual things from the natural man alone, who sees everything truly spiritual inversely. (Continued under MIRACLE.)

503⁵. They replied, In our universal theology there is not anything spiritual which reason apprehends. (Continued under FAITH ALONE.)

571. In the second state (of regeneration) man becomes spiritual natural . . . and in proportion as the good of love then acts the first part, and the truths of faith the second, the man is spiritual, and a new creature.

597. Besides, through victory over the external man, man becomes spiritual, and he is then consociated by the Lord with the Angels, who are all spiritual. 599.

604. The new will is above the old one, in the spiritual region ; and in like manner the new understanding.

607. For man was born to become spiritual . . .

—². When it is said that through regeneration man becomes spiritual, it is not meant that he becomes spiritual as an Angel is in himself : but that he becomes spiritual natural, that is, that inwardly in his Natural is the Spiritual, as thought is in speech . . .

— . The Natural, regarded in itself, is passive, or is a dead force ; but the Spiritual is active, or a living force . . .

612^e. As man, as to the interiors of his mind, has been born spiritual . . .

695³. But by the Spiritual they mean a purer Natural.

—^c. The several things of nature are like tunics, sheaths, and clothings, which engird spiritual things . . .

774. The Lord's perpetual presence . . . renders men able to become spiritual . . .

796⁵. Confirm themselves against the spirituality of charity. See T. 361².

Ad. 246. The Spiritual and the Natural in man. Ex. 642.

2/1281. How dangerous it is to explore spiritual and celestial things through natural knowledges. Of the Divine mercy it has been given to me that I dare do these things. Ex.

3/5525. The Celestial cannot be conjoined with the Natural except through the Spiritual . . .

D. 241⁴. Nay, the Spiritual itself, without the inmost as it were infilling it, is broken . . .

1057. Spiritual things (as distinguished from celestial) are represented by sharp and vibrating things ; by fluxions as it were lineal and reciprocal ; by striate things ; and also by dead white, and bright white things . . .

1058. In the human body . . . spiritual things are represented by the striated bodies, the as it were medullary ones, which are especially of a dead white ; and the grossly spiritual things, by the more visible ducts so conjoined and placed as to relate to a striated body ; thus by all the ducts . . . in which any liquid is secreted . . . 1075, Ex.

1059. Cortical substances relate to celestial things . . . Spiritual things relate to these, and flow forth thence. They are the beginnings of spiritual things . . . and they are of a different colour . . . bright white, or red. 1075, Ex.

1060. Thus the membranes, and also the muscular textures, are to be referred to the class of spiritual things.

1061. In like manner are spiritual and celestial things distinguished in Heaven . . . The male sex pertains to the classes of spiritual things, and the female to those of celestial things . . .

1106. The time when a newly resuscitated Soul comes among the spiritual. Ex.

1159. The infernals who pertain to the class of the spiritual. Ex.

1161. That the spiritual are averse to butter. Ex.

1163. But the spiritual are exceedingly delighted with milk, especially when uncooked . . .

1394. That there is a Spiritual in the Natural; and the Natural appears as nothing. Ex.

1734. For, as the fibres originate from their organic beginning, so do spiritual things from celestial ones.

2299. When there was discourse about spiritual things, a certain Spirit perceived (them) materially as small dead white lines, which is a sign that spiritual things are conceived of materially; which yet are not material, because they are forces from substances. When, therefore, those who, from physical things or the derivative philosophy, want to enter into things which are spiritual, and of faith, their material ideas remain, and are thus represented.

2301. But it is never forbidden to confirm . . . spiritual things by the Things in nature . . . For no one can have any idea of purely spiritual things, except through the things which are in the world . . .

—e. But such want to see spiritual and celestial things from natural ones, which is impossible; for how can that which is composite, so to speak, enter and penetrate the things which are component . . . 4758², Ex.

2476. Those who want to deduce spiritual things from things they have collected together, confuse themselves . . .

2635. Neither can spiritual things be translucent except from celestial ones; nor are celestial things celestial, except from the Lord.

3118. That natural things come forth from spiritual things. Ex.

3544. The infants who are spiritual are Known by . . .

3839^e. He inspired another person not to care for spiritual things, nor for confirmatory natural ones.

3856. Those who care for spiritual things only. Rep.

3863. It is not allowable to proceed from spiritual things to celestial ones. (See FACE, here.)

4066. As the Spiritual is the beginning and origin of natural things, natural things cannot possibly come forth, nor subsist, without the influx of spiritual things . . . Thus there must necessarily be spiritual things with which natural ones may correspond.

4136. The pulsation of the spiritual.

4522. The spiritual are such that the Involuntary continually draws them down every moment; but the Lord continually elevates them . . .

4719. With the spiritual, conjugal love begins from externals, thus from a certain lasciviousness. (Continued under MARRIAGE LOVE, and also under CELESTIAL.)

5163^e. (After death) the man comes successively into such things as are of the other life, and are called spiritual.

5519. (The celestial said) that they could not express the thousandth part by spiritual ideas.

5555. The spiritual apprehended these things well, and with delectation, because they are intelligences; but the celestial not so well, until something from a spiritual idea came into their idea, which is interior, and yet founded upon a spiritual idea: it is more general . . .

5574². They who are such become Genii, and lead any of the spiritual by their thought; for the spiritual are bent hither and thither according to various things . . .

5580. The celestial Angels saw and understood the spiritual writing . . .

5588^e. For the internals which are with the spiritual are closed, and therefore they speak about truths and goods.

5591. Through the common speech of Spirits, all can be together and speak, both the celestial with the spiritual, and the spiritual with Spirits of any kind . . .

5597. The celestial do not see rational things within themselves, as the spiritual do. (See CELESTIAL, here.)

5603. The spiritual are exceedingly delighted with songs.

5620. All harsh-aspera-letters pertain to spiritual things.

5626. Spiritual wisdom increases in proportion as one is removed from a material notion. Ex.

5851. Otherwise with the spiritual: the things they hear enter into the memory . . .

5905. Many of the spiritual cannot see those in the interior Heaven, or they see them in obscurity. (They see like birds of night, such as the nightingale. 5906.)

5933. How man becomes spiritual. Ex.

6049. Thinking spiritually. Ex.

6069. The Spiritual thinks of quality, and the Natural of quantity; thus the Spiritual is not bounded and terminated as is the Natural . . .

—, What is spiritual cannot by any method be thought naturally; but still it inflows into the Rational Natural as a cause does into an effect. See 6035.

D. Min. 4644. These are called the spiritual.

4714. The Spirits of the provinces of the cerebellum and cerebrum are completely separated from each other for the sake of the spiritual. Ex.

E. 30². For all spiritual things cease in natural ones; and in these have their ultimate plane.

92². Man becomes spiritual when he acknowledges the Divine, and, in special, the Lord, and loves to live according to the precepts in the Word; for, when he does this, he is conjoined with Heaven; and then there is a correspondence of the Spiritual with the Natural with him.

112⁴. Charity is the only source to man of what is spiritual.

116². Therefore the will is the Spiritual itself of man . . .

126². (Thus) Knowledges from the Word, and a life according to them, alone make man spiritual . . . 193^e. 195². 196.

148. With those who live according to the Lord's precepts, and acknowledge the Divine in His Human, the interior mind is opened, and the man then becomes spiritual.

[E.] 150. 'Thyatira' = those of the Church with whom . . . the spiritual and the natural man make a one. Ex.

182³. Spiritual life distinguished from moral life. 187. 189. 195².

183². Good and truth united in a man make his life spiritual.

189^e. The proceeding Divine is called the Spiritual; and it is the Divine truth in Heaven; and, as all the Angels are receptions of it, they are spiritual; and so are men who receive the Divine truth in faith and life.

190². For to become spiritual is to imbue one's own spirit with truths from the Word. Ex.

274³. When the understanding of truth is from the good of the will, the whole man is spiritual. Sig.

275²¹. What is in the spiritual man does not come to the perception of the natural man, until he comes into the Spiritual World . . .

356⁴. No one can become spiritual without doctrine from the Word. Ex.

— . For man becomes spiritual through a life according to Divine truths . . . and through the removal of evils and falsities . . . Man becomes spiritual through regeneration, which is effected through truths and a life according to them.

404. That the spiritual man has been closed. Sig. and Ex.

409. 'Every bondman, and every freeman' = the natural man and the spiritual man (were destroyed).

—⁷. With those who love the Lord and Heaven above all things, the internal or spiritual man is open, and the external or natural man serves it . . . But with those who love themselves and the world above all things, the spiritual man is closed, and the natural man is open . . .

475⁴. To purify the spiritual man. Sig.

483^e. For the Divine inflows through the spiritual man into the natural man; but not into the natural man when the spiritual man over it is closed; and the spiritual man is opened through truths and a life according to them.

513¹⁶. At that time there were not any spiritual men . . .

—²⁰. Then the spiritual mind, which is called the spiritual man, is closed . . .

543⁴. The spiritual man is closed from infancy, and it is opened and formed only through Divine truths received in the understanding and will; and, as it is opened and formed, so are the evils of the natural man removed, and goods are implanted in their place . . . But in proportion as man commits and confirms himself in evils, the spiritual man is kept closed; and, when it is closed, the natural and sensuous man denies the Divine things of Heaven and the Church . . .

559². If a man is spiritual, all things of his understanding and will become spiritual; if a man is only natural, they all become natural and not spiritual; if sensuous, they all become sensuous.

—³. Hence spiritual men rarely think from sensuous things; for they think from rational and intellectual things.

569⁷. It is one thing to be rational, and another to be spiritual. Ex.

—⁸. The Rational does not introduce anyone into the Spiritual . . . for the spiritual inflows into the Natural by the mediumship of the Rational, and thus introduces. For the Spiritual is the Divine inflowing; for it is the light of Heaven, which is the Divine truth proceeding through the spiritual mind . . . into the natural mind, and it conjoins this with itself; and, through this conjunction, causes the natural mind to make a one with the spiritual mind.

— . As it is contrary to Divine order for man to enter into the Spiritual through the Rational, in the Spiritual World there are Angel guards to prevent this being done. Sig. and Ex.

—¹². The influx of spiritual things into rational things; and that of rational things into natural things. Sig.

582^e. In the Spiritual World there are both interior and exterior spiritual things. Interior spiritual things are all these which are of affection and the derivative thought . . . and exterior spiritual things have been so created that they may clothe interior spiritual things . . .

585^e. The Spiritual (that is, the Lord through spiritual influx), which regenerates, inflows through the Rational into the Natural, and so the latter is regenerated. Sig.

617¹⁵. With the Most Ancients there was spiritual influx, from the spiritual mind into the natural . . . Spiritual things with them were quite distinct from natural ones; spiritual things resided in their spiritual mind, and natural things in their natural mind, so that they did not immerse anything spiritual in their natural mind, as spiritual natural men are wont to do; and therefore if they had committed spiritual things to the natural memory . . . they would have begun to reason from the natural man about spiritual things, and to infer spiritual things thence, which [such] never do . . . They would have extinguished all their celestial life, and would have formed natural ideas about spiritual things. Sig. (by eating of the tree of knowledge).

619¹⁰. For all good inflows through the spiritual man, or mind, into the natural . . .

—⁴. Every man has an Internal, which sees from the light of Heaven, and which is called the internal spiritual man, or the internal spiritual mind; and an External, which sees from the light of the world, and which is called the external natural man, or the external natural mind. With every man of the Church . . . the internal spiritual man must be conjoined with the external natural man; and, when they have been conjoined, the spiritual man, being in the light of Heaven, dominates over the natural man who is in the light of the world . . . But when the natural man is not conjoined with the spiritual, nor subordinate thereto—which is especially the case when the spiritual man has been closed, as it is with those who deny the Divine things of the Word and of the Church, for they then see nothing from the light of Heaven—then the natural man is in blindness as to spiritual things, and by his Rational perverts all the truths of the Church. Tr.

—¹⁵. And if man does not become rational he cannot become spiritual. Ex.

—³³. As every man of the Church has a Spiritual, a Rational, and a Natural, Solomon built three houses: the temple for the Spiritual; the house of the forest of Lebanon for the Rational; and the house of the daughter of Pharaoh for the Natural.

—⁵⁷. When man is natural, he is in Egypt; when he becomes rational, he is in Assyria; and when he becomes spiritual, he is in the land of Canaan, thus in the Church.

—⁶². Every man is born natural, and therefore the natural man is first to be cultivated, to the end that he may at last serve as a basis for the man's intelligence and wisdom. And then, through the knowledges which have been implanted in the natural man, the Intellectual is formed, in order that the man may become rational. But in order that from rational he may become spiritual, he must undergo temptations; for through these the Rational is mastered . . . Finally . . . he becomes spiritual; for the Rational is the intermediate between the Spiritual and the Natural; and therefore the Spiritual inflows into the Rational, and through this into the Natural . . . Memory is of the natural man; understanding, of the rational; and will of the spiritual . . . Rep. (by Israel in Egypt, in the wilderness, and in Canaan).

677². These were not merely natural, but were also somewhat spiritual. Sig. and Ex.

70S. In the body of the Grand Man, from the breast to the loins, are those in love towards the neighbour: these are called spiritual . . .

714². Every man is born sensuous, and through life in the world becomes natural more and more interiorly, that is, rational, according to moral and civil life, and he thence acquires a lumen. But afterwards this man becomes spiritual through truths from the Word, or from doctrine from the Word, and through a life according to them.

— For knowledge, and the faculty of reasoning, do not make man spiritual; but the life itself. Ex.

724⁴. The goods and truths which procreate are in the spiritual man, and the truths and goods procreated are in the natural man . . .

— Thus the spiritual man is continually enriched by the elevation of truths and goods out of the natural man, which will procreate anew as parents.

730³¹. When man has become rational, he can be led by the Lord and become spiritual, which is done through the implantation of the Knowledges of truth from the Word, and at the same time through the opening of the spiritual mind, which receives the things which are of Heaven, and through the calling out and elevation of those Knowledges from the natural man, and through conjunction with the spiritual affection of truth. This opening and conjunction are not possible without temptations . . . —³⁶, Rep.

739³. If he advances further . . . the interior degree is opened, and he becomes spiritual; but no further than in so far as he is affected with truths, understands them, wills them, and does them . . . For the spiritual man is in Heaven. Ex.

754. For all that which proceeds from the Lord is called spiritual . . .

763³. But no one thinks and reasons spiritually unless he is in illustration from the Lord, and thence in the affection of spiritual truth; for these are in the light of truth . . . which is called spiritual light; and consequently they who are in this light are spiritual. But those who are in falsities, however acutely they may think and reason, are not spiritual, but natural . . .

790⁶. The spiritual mind is primarily opened by the man's abstaining from doing evils because they are contrary to the Divine precepts. Ex. 798⁶.

—⁸. So much for the opening of the spiritual mind; now, as to its formation: it is formed from the things which are in the man's memory from the Word. Ex. . . The spiritual mind can be formed from genuine truths only . . . The truths elevated into the spiritual mind are not in a natural form, but in a spiritual one. Truths in a spiritual form are such as are in the spiritual sense . . . Hence, after death, when the spiritual mind is opened, the man no longer thinks and speaks naturally, but spiritually. But while he lives (here) he does not know what he thinks in his spiritual mind, but only what he thinks from that mind in the natural one. (Fully quoted under MIND.)

798⁴. Then faith is spiritual. 800², Ex.

832³. All love becomes spiritual through truths from the Word . . .

846⁶. For the Natural cannot enter into the Spiritual; but the Spiritual can enter into the Natural . . .

902. How spiritual life is acquired. Ex.

1196². All that proceeds from the Sun which is Divine love is called spiritual; and all that proceeds from the sun which is fire is called natural. The Spiritual, from its origin, has life in it; but the Natural, from its origin, has nothing of life in it. And as, from these two fountains of the universe, all things in both worlds have come forth and subsist, it follows that there is a Spiritual and a Natural in every created thing: a Spiritual as a soul, and a Natural as a body . . . or a Spiritual as a cause, and a Natural as an effect. Ex. 1197², Ex. D. Wis. xii. 1.

1203². The soul of plants also is spiritual. Ex.

[E.] 1206². That nothing in nature comes forth except from the Spiritual, and through it. Ex.

1207². That nature . . . has been created in order that the Spiritual may be clothed from it, and be terminated in it. Ex.

1208². That there are two general forms . . . a spiritual form such as is that of animals, and a natural one such as is that of plants. Ex.

1209². That there are three forces in everything spiritual; a force of acting, a force of creating, and a force of forming. Ex. 1211⁴.

1210². That from the Spiritual, through these forces, come forth plants, and also animals, both those which appear in Heaven, and those which appear in the world. Ex.

—^e. This ultimate of the Spiritual is in the Earth, in its earths and waters; and from this ultimate the Spiritual produces plants of every kind . . . in which the remaining Spiritual manifests itself only in a certain likeness to animals.

1211^e. The difference is, that the earths there are spiritual from their origin, but here they are natural; and that the productions from our earths are effected from the Spiritual by means of nature, but in those earths, without nature.

1212². Affections appear formed into animals by the Spiritual in its mediates; and into plants by the Spiritual in its ultimates, which are earths there; for the Spiritual from which [they are], in its mediates is alive, but in its ultimates is not alive. In its ultimates, the Spiritual retains no more of what is alive than is sufficient to produce a likeness of what is alive . . .

1214². (Spiritual uses, and natural uses.)

1215³. Nature merely serves the Spiritual which proceeds from the Sun as a producing means . . .

J. (Post.) 249. Those in the delight of the love of commanding cannot become spiritual . . .

271. They speak spiritually, write spiritually, and think spiritually; but they are not aware that they do not do all naturally; and therefore they were instructed that there is no ratio between the Spiritual and the Natural, thus no conjunction by continuity, but by what is discrete, which is by correspondences . . . They were further shown by ascent to the Third Heaven that there is a like [relation] between the Celestial and the Spiritual as there is between the Spiritual and the Natural—that there is no ratio, that is, that the Natural cannot by continual purification become spiritual, nor the Spiritual celestial . . . but it is as between cause and effect . . . De Verbo 3².

De Verbo 6³. Everyone has some natural idea about spiritual things . . .

D. Wis. i. For what is Divine is spiritual, and not natural.

vii. 1. All the Spiritual in its essence is a man, thus everything of love and wisdom which proceeds from the Lord, for this is the Spiritual. Ex.

5. That then man from natural becomes spiritual. Ex.

—³. Hence it is that thoughts of spiritual things are quite different from thoughts of natural things, in like manner affections, and so different, that they transcend and do not fall into natural ideas, except a little into the interior rational sight . . .

—⁴. (Thus) the Natural and the Spiritual differ like shade and light.

— . For there are the spiritual sensuous, the spiritual rational, and the spiritual celestial; and there are the spiritual evil and the spiritual good . . .

—^e. Thus man from natural becomes spiritual as soon as the lungs and heart cease to be moved; and thereby the material body is removed from the spiritual body.

viii⁵. The first of an animal and a plant is natural . . . whereas the first of a man is spiritual . . .

—⁷. An Angel and a Spirit . . . takes with him from the inmost things of nature a medium between the Spiritual and the Natural . . .

xi. 5a². That a spiritual man is also a moral and civil man. Ex.

— . Many believe that those are spiritual who know spiritual truths, still more those who speak them, and still more those who perceive them with some understanding; yet they are not spiritual . . . These alone do not make man spiritual, for love from the Lord is lacking in them. which love is the love of uses, called charity: in this the Lord conjoins Himself with man, and makes him spiritual; for he then does uses from the Lord, and not from himself. Ill.

— . (The Spiritual, the Moral, and the Civil in the various commandments. Ex.)

—³. Then is the Spiritual in the Moral and Civil.

—⁴. (Thus) he who separates the Spiritual from the Moral and the Civil is not a spiritual man, nor a moral and civil one.

xii. 1. A Spiritual from their Sun is adjoined to the natural essence from our sun . . .

3. And spiritual things are those from which are natural things.

203. But the Spiritual Angels speak about faith, and also confirm the things of faith by intellectual, rational, and scientific things; but never form conclusions from them about faith . . . for these Angels also have a perception from the Lord of all things which are of faith, but not such a perception as the celestial Angels have. The perception of the Spiritual Angels is a kind of conscience . . . 393^e. 1384^e, Ex.

2776³. If the Lord had not united the Human essence to the Divine . . . no Spiritual Angel would have had any capacity to understand and perceive good and truth, thus nothing of happiness, and consequently nothing of salvation.

3691⁴. They who are in charity towards the neighbour, so as to have a perception of charity, and not so much a perception of love to the Lord, are in a lower degree of good and truth, are in the interior or Second Heaven, and are thus more remote from the Lord, and are called Spiritual Angels.

3735³. The Lord's 'blood' = His Divine love, and the reciprocal with man, such as is the love with the Spiritual Angels.

D. 5121. When the Spiritual Angels enter into the celestial sphere, they become as it were insane, and are affected with pain, and at once cast themselves out of it.

D. Min. 4711. But the Spiritual Angels, or the Spiritual Heaven, in which are the men of the Ancient and the present Church, have the Voluntary completely destroyed, and cannot be regenerated except only as to the Intellectual, in which a new will is formed by the Lord, and from which the will proper to them is completely separated.

E. 831³. The reason the Spiritual Angels, from the spiritual love which makes their life, are affections of truth, and not affections of good, is that they are . . . regenerated in a different way from the Celestial Angels. For the Spiritual Angels first admit truths into the memory, and thence into the understanding, which is thereby formed; and then, in so far as they are spiritually affected with Divine truths . . . they are perfected.

—⁴. But the Spiritual Angels do not admit any truth . . . unless they see it; for the Angels in that Heaven see truth from the light of truth . . . These Angels are perfected in understanding in so far as they are in the love of truth for the sake of life . . .

[E. S31]⁵. As their love is the love of truth, they acknowledge as the neighbour truth in act, which is called spiritual good, thus the good of the Church, the good of the society in which they are, the good of their fellow citizens in the society, consequently the moral good which is called sincerity, and the civil good which is called justice; and therefore their love towards the neighbour consists also in the exercises of it, which are works. All there love uses, and are intent on works, whereby they keep their thoughts as it were at home, and withhold them from idleness . . . They know that none can be kept in spiritual love except those who perceive delight in works . . . (Continued under SECOND HEAVEN.)

The intermediate between the internal of the Natural and the external of the Rational is what is meant by the Spiritual of the Celestial, which is signified by 'Ephrath' and 'Bethlehem,' and is represented by 'Benjamin.' This intermediate derives something from the internal of the Natural, which is 'Israel,' and the external of the Rational, which is 'Joseph' . . . In order that anyone from being spiritual may become celestial, he must necessarily advance through this intermediate . . . and the nature of the advance through this intermediate is here described by Jacob's coming to Ephrath, and Rachel's bringing forth Benjamin there . . . The Spiritual of the Celestial is this intermediate; which is called spiritual from the spiritual man—who, regarded in himself, is the interior of the Natural—and celestial from the celestial man—who, regarded in himself is [the exterior] of the Rational. 4592.

nation'=the Spiritual Church, which should receive the good of faith . . . that is, charity. . . The Lord's Kingdom is celestial and spiritual. Ex. 2699.

—^e. The good of faith is what makes the Spiritual Church; the truth of faith (only) introduces to it.

2697. For the man of the Spiritual Church seems to be regenerated through the truths of faith, and is not aware that it is through the good of truth . . .

2702. As the Spiritual Church is treated of, the Word is called 'a well;' not 'a fountain.'

2708. See CELESTIAL, here. 3240.

—^d. The Spiritual Church is here treated of, which, however much inhabited and cultivated, is called 'a wilderness,' relatively.

2709. 'He was an archer'=the man of the Spiritual Church . . . because he defends himself by truths, and disputes about them. Ill.

2710. See CELESTIAL CHURCH, here. 2954. 3118^e. 3246³. 5120⁵. 5733. 7120. E. 154².

2717. As the Spiritual Church is in the affection of truth, and is a Church from this affection, this affection is here signified by his 'mother.'

2718. 'A wife from the land of Egypt'=the affection of knowledges which appertains to the man of the Spiritual Church.

— . In this verse is described the man of the Spiritual Church, what his quality is as to good, that is, as to the essence of his life, namely, that the good with him is obscure, but that it is illuminated by the Lord's Divine Human; from which illumination there comes forth in his Rational the affection of truth, and in his Natural the affection of knowledges. (Continued under AFFECTION OF GOOD.)

—^e. (How the men of the Spiritual Church can come from obscurity into light.)

2719. These rational things are appearances, not from a Divine origin but from a human one, which are adjoined for the reason that without them the Spiritual Church would not comprehend doctrine, and thus would not receive it. For the man of the Spiritual Church is relatively in obscurity, and therefore doctrine must be clothed with such appearances as are of human thought and affection, but are not discrepant to such a degree that the Divine good cannot have in them some kind of a receptacle. Tr.

2764. In Gen. xxii. it treats of the Salvation of those who constitute the Lord's Spiritual Church, through the union of His human to His Divine essence. 2805^e. 2807².

2805^e. See RAM, here. 2830⁶.

2832. Both these classes are indeed in the Lord's Spiritual Church, but they are not of the Church.

—⁵. To multiply the truths of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

2861^e. The things which follow regard in a series the Lord's Spiritual Church, but that which is among the gentiles.

2901. In Gen. xxiii. a new Spiritual Church is treated of, which was raised up by the Lord after the former one had quite expired.

[A.] 2909⁴. See HEBRON, here.

2913. 'The sons of Heth'=those with whom there was to be a new Spiritual Church. Ex.

—³. It does not treat of any Church among the sons of Heth; but in general concerning the resuscitation of the Spiritual Church by the Lord, after a former one is consummated.

2930. With the spiritual, or in the Spiritual Church, the Intellectual is separated from the Voluntary, and the man is reformed as to the Intellectual, and therein is formed a new will and a new understanding. Refs.

2950. The Lord's joy on account of the good will of those who are of the new Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex. 2952.

2959^e. For the Spiritual Church is reformed and regenerated through truth.

2960^e. (Thus) there is here described the man of the Spiritual Church, and the quality of his state while he is as yet immature; also what its quality is when he begins to be mature; and, finally, when he has matured.

3231. In Gen.xxv. it treats, secondly, of the Spiritual Church, which is represented by 'Ishmael,' and of its derivations. 3240. 3263.

3240. How the celestial Church differs from the Spiritual Church. Ex. . . Those who are of the Spiritual Church, and are called the Spiritual, are in faith, namely, in the good and truth of it. . . The good which is with the spiritual is charity towards the neighbour, and the truth which is with them is of faith. . . As there are two classes of the spiritual—those more in good, and those more in truth—they have two kinds of doctrinals. Sig. and Ex.

—⁵. In Jer.xxv.17-26 the desolation of the Spiritual Church is treated of; and the different classes of this Church are enumerated in order.

3241³. As those of the Spiritual Church have no perception—as have those of the Celestial Church—of what is good and true, but acknowledge as truths the things they have learned, and are on that account continually in dispute about them, and reasoning whether it is so, and each one remains in that doctrinal teaching, and calls it true, which is of his own Church, there are so many differences. Des. . . Still, they together form one Church, when all acknowledge charity as the essential. . .

3263². The Lord's Spiritual Church is throughout the whole world; for it is not confined to those who have the Word. . . but is also with those who have not the Word, and therefore are altogether ignorant of the Lord, and consequently know no truths of faith. . . For there are many among the gentiles who know, from rational light, that there is one God. (Continued under NATION.)

—³. (Thus) 'Ishmael,' and 'the Ishmaelites'=those of the Lord's Spiritual Church who as to life are in simple good, and therefore as to doctrine are in natural truth.

3267². The Lord's Spiritual Church is scattered through the whole world, and is everywhere various as to. . . the truths of faith. Sig. . . It is the same with the Spiritual Kingdom in the Heavens. . . Yet it is one, because charity is the principal thing with all; for charity makes the Spiritual Church, and not faith, unless you call charity faith. (Continued under CHARITY.)

3268. (The twelve sons of Ishmael)=all things which are of the Spiritual Church, especially with the gentiles. Ill.

3272. The primary things of this Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

3289. The struggle in the Spiritual Church as to the priority of good or truth. Sig.

—¹¹. See FIRST-BORN, here.

3391³. The prophecy of Deborah and Barak concerning the resuscitation of the Spiritual Church. Ex.

3399². They who are of the Spiritual Church cannot adulterate good so far as to profane it, because they cannot receive good so far as to have a perception of it. . . But they can profane truth, because this they can acknowledge. Yet in the last time of the Church they cannot acknowledge truth. . . 3402.

3401. A decree from the Lord in the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

3580³. The vastation of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

3654⁴. These truths are called spiritual goods, and make the Spiritual Church. . .

3686. 'The Hittites'=the Lord's Spiritual Church with the gentiles.

3708⁴. A new Spiritual Church. Tr.

3720. By 'the temple' is signified the Lord's Spiritual Church. . .

3963². Whether you say the Church of faith in which is good, or the Spiritual Church, it is the same.

3969⁸. For there are two things which constitute the Spiritual Church: the Intellectual, and the Voluntary. (Rep. by Ephraim and Manasseh.)

—¹². 'Joseph'=the good of the Spiritual Church. (=the Spiritual Church. —¹⁴.)

4014^e. The scientific and rational things with the man of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

4292. Whether you say the spiritual man, or the Spiritual Church, it is the same. . .

4328. The Ancients, who formed the Lord's Spiritual Church, had the Voluntary completely destroyed, but the Intellectual entire, in which the Lord, by regeneration, formed a new Voluntary, and, through it, a new Intellectual. Refs. and Rep. 4601³.

4333². (There was a Last Judgment) when the Spiritual Church, which was after the Flood, and is called the Ancient, ceased.

4434⁹. In the Spiritual Church, the wife represents good; and the man, truth. . . S647.

4545². As 'Jerusalem' = the Spiritual Church . . . and the Spiritual Church is that which is in truth from faith and from charity, therefore . . . of Jerusalem is predicated 'garments.'

4823². In the Spiritual Church, the man is in truth, and the wife in the good of that truth. They are so actually, for man's interiors have undergone this reversal (from the state in the Celestial Church).

5113. The Intellectual of the Spiritual Church. Sig. . . . Where the Spiritual Church is treated of, its Intellectual is treated of, because with the man of that Church it is the intellectual part which is regenerated and made a Church.

—². That the intellectual part is regenerated with those of the Spiritual Church, may be evident from the fact that the man of that Church has no perception of truth from good—as had those who were of the Celestial Church—but he must first learn the truth which is of faith, and imbue his Intellectual with it, and thus, from truth, Know what is good; and, after he has thus got to Know it, he can think it, then will it, and at last do it, and then a new will is formed by the Lord in his intellectual part. Through this new will, the spiritual man is elevated by the Lord into Heaven, evil still remaining in his Own will, which will is then miraculously separated, by a higher force, whereby he is withheld from evil, and kept in good. (Continued under CELESTIAL CHURCH.)

5117⁷. The instauration of the Spiritual Church. Tr.

—³. 'Wine' is predicated of the Spiritual Church, (and therefore) wine was commanded for the Holy Supper. 5120⁵, Ex.

5620⁵. 'Tyre' = the Spiritual Church such as it was in its beginning, and such as it afterwards became; but as to the Knowledges of good and truth.

5622². The tribe of Levi was chosen for the priesthood, because by it was signified charity, which is the essential of the Spiritual Church.

5803. See ISRAEL, here. 5837. 6277².

5922¹². 'Lebanon' = the Spiritual Church.

6240². The reason those of the Lord's Spiritual Church are interiorly natural, is that they acknowledge as truth only that which they have imbibed from parents and teachers, and have afterwards confirmed with themselves; and they do not inwardly see and perceive whether it is true from any other source than from the fact that they have confirmed it with themselves. It is otherwise with the celestial; and hence it is that these are rational, but the former interiorly natural. . . Spiritual good, which is represented by 'Israel,' is in the interior Natural.

6296. See EPHRAIM, here.

6384². Hence (those represented by Zebulon) are in obscurity more than all others in the Spiritual Church. Ex.

6417. 'Joseph the son of a fruitful one' = the Spiritual Church. Ex.

6418². They who are of the Lord's Spiritual Church, which Church is here represented by 'Joseph,' from truth from the Word learn to know what is good, and thus through truth are initiated into good. Hence their fructification, which is signified by 'a fruitful one.'

6419². For the Spiritual Church, which is represented by 'Joseph,' is continually being attacked, but the Lord is continually protecting it. Hence, in the Word, the things which are of that Church are compared to a city which has a wall, outworks, gates, bolts. Ill.

6422². That those who are in falsities persecute with all hostility the man of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

6423. That (the man of the Spiritual Church) is safe by the combating truth of doctrine. Sig. and Ex.

6426. As the good of truth is the very essential itself of the Spiritual Church . . .

6434. That the Spiritual Church has spiritual good from the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. The Spiritual Church will have good from the natural or external man, but not from the rational or internal man; for the good of the man of the Spiritual Church is in the natural; it does not advance any further; whereas the good of the Celestial Church is in the rational man.

6435. That the Spiritual Church may come to celestial mutual love. Sig. and Ex.

— . What is meant by the mutual love, to which the man of the Spiritual Church, which is represented by 'Joseph,' will have enough to do to arrive at. (Fully quoted under MUTUAL LOVE.)

6437. For the man of the Spiritual Church is in the good of truth; and this good is interior, because it is in the interior Natural.

6440. 'Benjamin' = the truth of the good of the Spiritual Church which is 'Joseph.' Ex.

6461. 'The sons of Heth' = the Spiritual Church which was from the Ancient, (thus) those who receive truth, and, through truth, good; for thence is the Spiritual Church.

6497. In Gen. I. it treats of the Church: that after the Celestial Church had perished, a Spiritual Church was instituted by the Lord: its beginning and progress are described; and, at the end of the chapter, the end of that Church: and that in place of it a Church merely representative was instituted among the descendants of Jacob. 6499.

[A.] 6499². 'Israel' = the good of truth, or spiritual good, and this good makes the Spiritual Church; and therefore this Church also is signified by 'Israel.' For this good to come forth there must be an influx from the Celestial Internal, which is represented by 'Joseph.' Ex.

6500. (Joseph's weeping over his father) = sorrow on account of the good of the Spiritual Church, because it cannot be elevated above the Natural. For the Lord inflowing through the Internal continually wills to perfect that good, and draw it towards Himself, but still it cannot be elevated to the first degree of the good which is of the Celestial Church; for the man of the Spiritual Church is relatively in what is obscure, and reasons about truths as to whether they are true, or confirms those things which are called doctrine, and this without a perception as to whether what he confirms is true or not; and, when he has confirmed it with himself, he fully believes that it is true, although it may be false. For there is nothing which cannot be confirmed . . . and what is false more easily than what is true . . . As the man of the Spiritual Church is such, he cannot possibly be elevated above the Natural. (See 6501. 6502.)

6503. (Joseph's embalming his father) = a means of preservation, lest the good which is of the Spiritual Church should be infected with any contagion.

6507. (The Egyptians weeping for Israel) = sadness because the good of the (Spiritual Church) had left the scientifics which are the externals of the Church, when it ascended from them to the internal of the Church, which is the good of truth; for it then no longer regards scientifics as with itself, as previously, but below itself. For when the truth of the Spiritual Church becomes good, a reversal takes place, and it then no longer regards truths from truths, but from good.

6534². 'Ohola' = the perverted Spiritual Church.

6551^e. As these words =, in a summary form, the instauration of the Spiritual Church, they are so often repeated.

6567. It treats in this chapter about the instauration of the Spiritual Church; and, here, about the submission under the Internal of those things which are in the Natural; concerning which submission it is to be known that the Spiritual Church cannot possibly be instituted with anyone unless the things which are of the natural or external man have been submitted to the spiritual or internal man. So long as the mere truth which is of faith predominates with a man, and not the good which is of charity, so long the external man has not been submitted to the internal; but as soon as good dominates, the natural man submits himself, and then that man becomes a Spiritual Church. (Further des.) (This is signified by Joseph's brethren falling down before him.)

6580. In the preceding verses of this chapter it treats of the Spiritual Church to be instaured; and, after the External or Natural has been completely submitted to the Internal or Spiritual . . . it now treats of that Church as instaured, which is described in these verses by Joseph's dwelling in Egypt, and by sons being born of Ephraim, and of Machir the son of Manasseh. With the man who is a Spiritual Church, there is life from the Internal in the scientifics of the Church. Ex. 6643.

6589². That (there will come to the state of the Church in which the Ancients were) those who are signified by 'the sons of Israel,' who are all who are of the Spiritual Church, both those who have been, and those who are to come. Sig.

6641. 'The souls who come forth from the thigh of Jacob' = in the general sense, the men of the Spiritual Church.

—^e. The reason 'Jacob' here represents truths in general, is that it treats of the Spiritual Church; for this Church begins from truths in general, and, through them, is introduced to its good; for, with the man of the Spiritual Church, it is not known what spiritual good is, thus neither is it acknowledged, except through truth; for he has no perception from good of truth, as has the man of the Celestial Church. 6647.

6647². Therefore, when the man of the Spiritual Church is being regenerated, truths are excited by the Lord through the Angels who are with him, and he is thus led into good. But when this man has been regenerated, both truth and good are excited together, and he is so led. But, with the man of the Spiritual Church, the good is such as is the truth, and therefore such is the conscience—which to him is like perception—according to which he lives.

6649^e. By the land of Goshen is signified the middle or inmost in the Natural, thus the Church; for the Spiritual Church is in the inmost of the Natural.

6742. 'Damsel' = the truth of good, which is of the Spiritual Church. Ill.

6745⁴. When 'Jerusalem' is mentioned without 'Zion,' there is for the most part signified the Spiritual Church.

6851. Mercy towards those of the Spiritual Church after infestations by falsities. Sig. and Ex. 6862.

—^e. 'People' = those of the Spiritual Church.

6854. The Lord is said to 'descend' . . . when He comes to lower things, here, to those of the Spiritual Church, who are signified by 'the sons of Israel;' for the internal sense treats of them, how they are infested by falsities, and, then, undergo temptations; and how they are afterwards delivered, in order to be introduced into Heaven. (Continued under SPIRITUAL.) 6864². 6865.

6865². It is false knowledge—scientificum—which most infests those who are of the Spiritual Church. The reason is that they have no perception from good of truth; but only the Knowledge of truth from doctrine. They who are such are very much infested by scientifics. Ex. 6915.

6876. That the Divine of the Ancient Church should be with those who are of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex. 6886.

6890. 'Gather together the elders of Israel' = the intelligent in the Spiritual Church.

6895. His advent to those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

6904². It treats here of the instauration of the Spiritual Church, which is signified by 'the sons of Israel.' They who are of that Church are relatively in obscurity as to the good and truth of faith. Refs. The life of truth is the life which those of the Spiritual Church live; for the truth which they know from the Word, or from the doctrine of their Church, when made of the life, is called good; but it is truth in act.

6908. That the power of those who are of the Spiritual Church would not prevail against those (in falsities). Sig.

6914. A fear of those of the Spiritual Church felt by those in falsities. Sig. and Ex.

—⁴. After the Lord's advent . . . the evil Genii and Spirits who had occupied the lower region of Heaven were cast down, and, in their place, those of the Spiritual Church were elevated thither.

— . These simple good Spirits, who were separated from the evil, were adjoined to those who were of the Spiritual Church . . .

6939. In Ex. iv. it continues to treat of the deliverance of those who are of the Spiritual Church . . . that if they have not hope and faith they will be dragged down by falsities, evils, and profane things. These are the things signified by the three signs.

6941. Finally, it treats of that people—that they only represented the Spiritual Church.

6949². This sign describes the state of those of the Spiritual Church if they have not faith; for then their internal will be closed, and no more of light will inflow, than to enable them to think, and thereby to speak, from a separated Sensuous.

6959. (The second sign describes) the further character of those of the Spiritual Church if they have not faith—that they would become profaners of truth.

—². They who are of the Spiritual Church, in their childhood, and afterwards in their adolescence, have faith in the doctrinal things of their Church, but they have faith then from their parents and teachers, and not from themselves; and therefore if they afterwards recede from faith, they do not profane truth except slightly. (Continued under PROFANE.)

— . Those of the Lord's Spiritual Church can profane truth, but not so much good.

6964. What would be the quality of those of the Spiritual Church if they had faith. Sig. and Ex.

6968^e. But with those who are of the Spiritual Church, 'flesh'=the good of truth (and not the good of love), for the good with them is from truth, and is according to the truth of the doctrine of their Church . . .

7008. 'Aaron shall speak for thee to the people'=that he will be doctrine for the Spiritual Church. 'Aaron'=the doctrine of good and truth.

7016^e. To dwell with the sons of Israel=life with those who are in the truth and good of the Spiritual Church; which life is a more interior and more spiritual (life in the Natural) than the previous one (with those in simple good). Sig.

7024. A new intelligence, which will be that of the life, among those who are in the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

7035. That those in spiritual truth and good—that is, those who are of the Spiritual Church—have been adopted. Sig. and Ex.

7038. As it treats of those of the Spiritual Church, who have been saved through the advent of the Lord, and of those of them who before His advent were in the Lower Earth, and were afterwards elevated into Heaven, and thus came into a state of the performance of uses, the words 'they shall serve Me'=elevation into Heaven to perform uses.

7066. 'That Jehovah had visited the sons of Israel'=those who are of the Spiritual Church—that they should be delivered and saved through the advent of the Lord; (for) those of the Spiritual Church have been adopted and saved through the advent of the Lord into the world. Refs.

7087. In Ex. v. it continues to treat of the infestation of those who are of the Spiritual Church by falsities.

7090. Here, and in what follows, it treats of those who being of the Spiritual Church have been saved through the advent of the Lord into the world, and who, before His advent, had been kept in the Lower Earth, and there had been harassed by falsities, that is, by infernals who are in falsities from evil. (Continued under LOWER EARTH.)

—². 'Jacob,' and 'Israel'=the Spiritual Church; 'Jacob,' the external, and 'Israel' the internal.

—⁴. Hence it is that the Spiritual Church is to be called militant.

7091. The reason 'the God of Israel'=the Lord as to the Divine Human, is that those who are of the Spiritual Church have natural ideas about everything spiritual and celestial, and also about what is Divine; and therefore unless they were to think about the Divine as a Natural Man, they could not be conjoined with the Divine by anything of affection . . .

7093. 'That they may hold a feast unto Me in the wilderness'=that from a glad mind they may worship the Lord in the obscurity of faith in which they are. . . That those of the Spiritual Church are relatively in obscurity of faith. Refs. 7313.

7097³. They who are in the Hells, and infest those of the Spiritual Church, are most of them from such as have said that faith alone saves, and yet have lived a life contrary to faith . . .

[A.]7107. For those of the Spiritual Church are said to be in the truths of the Church.

7108. The multitude of those who are of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

7127². Such are the things which they object, and through which they infest those of the Spiritual Church.

7162. For the essentials of the Spiritual Church which is signified by 'the sons of Israel,' are charity and faith.

7186². Concerning this Divine law those of the Spiritual Church are now instructed, and that they will certainly be delivered by it when the time and state according to order has arrived.

7194. That those of the Spiritual Church, when in a state of temptations, did not think about the Divine things of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

7207. That those of the Spiritual Church will be added to those in Heaven who serve the Lord there. Sig.

7221. 'To let the sons of Israel go' = that they should leave those who are of the Spiritual Church, and not infest them.

7231. The reason why Reuben, Simeon, and Levi, with their sons, are here mentioned, and not the rest of the fathers of the tribes . . . is that it treats of the Spiritual Church . . . which Church begins with man through faith in knowledge and afterwards in understanding (Reuben); afterwards, when the Church grows with the man, that faith passes into the will, and from the will into act, and then the man wills the truth which is of faith, and does it, because it has been so commanded in the Word (Simeon); finally, in his will, which is new, there is apperceived the affection of charity, so that he wills to do what is good, not, as before, from faith, but from charity towards the neighbour. For, when the man is being regenerated so far as this, he is then a man of the Spiritual Church; for the Church is then in him; and this charity with its affection is represented by Levi. . . Aaron represents the external of that Church, and Moses the internal of it; this latter is called the law from the Divine, and the former the derivative doctrine. The law from the Divine . . . is also the Word in the internal sense; and the derivative doctrine is the Word in the external sense.

Church acknowledges as the truth of faith that which their founders have laid down, without inquiring further from the Word whether it is the truth itself. And even if they did inquire, unless they were regenerate and at the same time peculiarly illustrated, they would not find it. Ex.

—³. As the case is so with the Spiritual Church, it is not surprising that with most of them faith is the essential of the Church, and not charity, and that they have no doctrine of charity. Their having their doctrinals from the Word does not make them Divine truths; for any doctrinal thing may be hatched from the sense of the letter . . . but not if what is doctrinal is formed from the internal sense. Ex.

7236. But the goods of the Spiritual Church in their essence are nothing but truths . . .

7282. 'To bring out the sons of Israel' = to deliver those of the Spiritual Church.

7284. The state and quality of the law from the Divine with those of the Spiritual Church, at the first time of visitation. Sig.

7313^e. The sons of Israel were therefore brought into the wilderness, to represent the state in which were those of the Spiritual Church before the Lord's advent; and also that in which are those of that Church at this day, and are being vastated as to falsities.

7392². For those of the Lord's Spiritual Church laugh at mere falsities.

7439. 'Let My people go, that they may serve Me' = that they should leave those of the Spiritual Church, in order that they may worship their God in freedom. 7500.

7443. That they shall not be able to infest those of the Spiritual Church by falsities of malevolence, although they are near them. Sig. and Ex.

7445. The deliverance of those of the Spiritual Church from those who are in the Hells near. Sig. and Ex.

7474. That (the infesters) would not leave those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

— . The Spiritual Church which is here represented by 'the sons of Israel' is internal and external; those are in the internal Church who are in the good of charity, and those are in the external Church who are in the good of faith. Those in the good of charity are those who, from charity towards the neighbour, see the truths which are of faith; and those are in the good of faith who, from faith, look to charity; thus who do what is good, not from the affection of charity, but from the obedience of faith, that is, because it is so commanded. It is these latter who are here properly represented by 'the sons of Israel;' for these are they who in the other life are infested by those who are in falsities. For those who are in the affection of charity cannot be so infested. Ex. . . If these are infested, it is only as to the fallacies and appearances by which they had believed that to be true which is not true, and also as to such things as the doctrine of their Church had taught as truths, and which are not truths. These, in the other life, willingly reject falsities, and receive truths . . .

7512, 7513. That nothing of the goods and truths of faith perishes with those of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

7628. In Ex. x. it continues to treat of the vastation of those who infest those of the Spiritual Church.

7686^e. With this falsity (which was infused by the Nephilim) were those imbued, who, before the Lord's advent, infested those of the Spiritual Church.

7719. 'All the sons of Israel had light in their dwellings' = that those of the Spiritual Church would have enlightenment everywhere in their minds.

7763. Ex.xi. treats . . . of the transfer to those of the Spiritual Church of the scientifics of truth and good.

7768. That (the infesters) will have aversion for and shun those of the Spiritual Church whom they have infested. Sig. and Ex. 7771. 7952, Sig.

7784. That with those of the Spiritual Church there should not be the least of damnation and lamentation. Sig. and Ex.

7822. In Ex.xii. it treats of the deliverance of those of the Spiritual Church, and of the damnation of those in faith separated from charity. (These two things) are represented by 'the passover.' 7882.

7828. The beginning of the deliverance of those of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

—². It is the same afterwards with all those who are of the Spiritual Church, who could not possibly have been saved unless the Lord had come into the world, and glorified His Human . . . That those of the Spiritual Church, in general, have been saved by the advent of the Lord. Refs.

7835. It is said the good of truth, because it treats of those of the Spiritual Church; for the good of truth is truth in will and act . . . This is called spiritual good.

7836. It is said the truth of good, and thereby is meant the truth which is from good; for those who are of the Spiritual Church, when they are being regenerated, are introduced to the good of charity through the truth of faith; and when they have been introduced to the good of charity, the truths which are afterwards born from it are called truths of good.

7838. The reason the paschal lamb was a male, was that that lamb = the innocence of those who are of the Spiritual Church; and those who are of the Spiritual Church are not in any other good than that which is in itself the truth of faith.

7847³. By the 'new Temple,' in Ezekiel, is signified the Spiritual Church.

7884. The worship of the Lord according to the order of Heaven for those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

7889. That (he who appropriates falsity) shall be separated from those of the Spiritual Church, and condemned. Sig. and Ex.

7912. The illustration of the understanding of those of the Spiritual Church through the influx and presence of truth Divine. Sig. and Ex.

7914. For the good of innocence, which is the good of love to the Lord, is not received by the man of the Spiritual Church, unless he compels himself; for it can with difficulty be believed by him that the Lord is the only God, and that His Human is Divine; and therefore, as he is not in faith, so neither can he be in love to Him, and consequently not in the good of innocence, unless he compels himself . . .

7931. That all this shall be according to the Divine order hereafter for those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

—². By this order is meant the order which was in Heaven from the time when the Lord began, from His Divine Human, to dispose all things in Heaven and on earth . . . According to this order, those of the Spiritual Church could then be elevated into Heaven . . . but not according to the previous order. Ex. 7932a. 7935.

7935. That in the minds of those of the Spiritual Church must be fixed this truth: that their Salvation is due to the Lord alone. Sig. and Ex. The perception of this truth is of conscience; for those of the Spiritual Church have not perception . . . Conscience with them is born and formed from the truths of the Church into which they have been born, which they have imbibed in childhood, and have confirmed in the life, and which have thus been made of faith . . .

7944. That those of the Spiritual Church will obey the truth Divine. Sig.

7957. For the Spiritual Church is distinguished from the Celestial Church in this: that through the truth which is of faith it is introduced into the good which is of charity: thus that it has truth for the essential thing. The initiation is effected through truth; for through it they are instructed what must be done; and, when they do this truth, this is called good; and then, from this good, when they have been initiated, they see truths according to which they must again act. (Thus) whether you say those of the Spiritual Church, or those who are in the truth through which is good, and in the truth which is from good, it is the same. S234. S321².

7966². These are the two states, in which those of the Spiritual Church, when in good, are kept by the Lord: the first, that from the good which is of the will they see and think truth; the second, that from this marriage of good and truth they produce truths, which, by their willing and doing them, again become goods; and so on continually. Such are the productions and derivations of truth with those who are of the Spiritual Church. Rep.

7975. For with those of the Spiritual Church, the case is that they have goods and truths which are genuine, and goods and truths which are not genuine; for the man of the Spiritual Church has no perception of good and truth, but acknowledges and believes as good and truth the things which the doctrinals of his Church teach; and he is therefore in very many truths which are not genuine, and consequently in the like goods. Refs. and Sig.

8039. (At the end of Ex. xiii. and in the subsequent history) it treats of the further preparation of those of the Spiritual Church, who were detained in the Lower Earth before the Lord's advent, before they could be introduced into Heaven. Ex. 8099. 8125.

8042. When faith is mentioned, there is meant all the truth which the Spiritual Church has; and as there is meant all the truth of the Church, there is also meant the Spiritual Church itself; for the essential of this Church is truth. Good is indeed the essential of the Church, and is actually the first-born; but the good possessed by those of the Spiritual Church, is, in itself, truth. Ex. For to them the doctrinals of the Church are truths, and the doctrinals in Churches differ from each other, and consequently the truths; nevertheless, although they are so various, by the willing and doing of them, they become goods.

[A.] 8054. That the region of Heaven into which those of the Spiritual Church were to come, was, before the Lord's advent, occupied by evils and falsities. Ref. There was, as yet, no Spiritual Heaven . . . for those of the Spiritual Church had not yet been prepared . . .

8330³. 'Sanctuary' = the Spiritual Church, etc.

8337. When the Spiritual Church is treated of, women represent good, and men truth . . .

—³. It here treats of the Spiritual Church, which is 'the virgin of Israel.'

8346^e. Those of the Spiritual Church underwent temptations after the advent of the Lord into the world, and could not do so previously.

8351. The temptations which those of the Lord's Spiritual Church underwent after they had been delivered from infestations; and also the temptations which those of that Church will undergo, are described by the murmurings of the sons of Israel in the wilderness.

—². Faith can never be implanted in those of the Spiritual Church except through temptations; thus neither can charity. Ex.

8369. 'Palmtrees' = the goods of the Spiritual Church, which are goods of truth. 8432. 8458, Ex.

8397. For those of the Spiritual Church, when they undergo temptations, are brought from one temptation into another. Sig.

8457. For a new Voluntary is formed from good through truth with the man of the Spiritual Church, and it appears with him as conscience . . .

8464. 'Bread,' here, = spiritual good, that is, the good of the man of the Spiritual Church, which is the good of truth; and, as this bread was the manna, it follows that by 'the manna' this good was signified. Ex.

8526. (A memorial) for those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

8533. That it may be a measure for those of that Spiritual Church . . . namely, of how much good this Church was possessed. Sig. and Ex.

8593². The Hells of Genii are completely separated from those of evil Spirits . . . in order that they may be separated from the men of the Spiritual Church; for if they were to inflow from their own Hells, it would be all over with the man of that Church. Ex. 8622², Sig.

8604. 'When Moses lifted up his hand' = when the faith of those of the Spiritual Church looked towards the Lord.

8607. That now Israel overcame, and now Amalek, represented that those of the Spiritual Church cannot be in a faith which continually looks to the Lord; but are in a faith which alternately looks to self and the world; for those of that Church are in obscurity, and thence in infirmity, as to faith.

8625². They who were in the falsity of this evil could not be warded off from those of the Spiritual Church until the Lord came . . . for the man of the Spiritual Church is in obscurity as to the truth of faith, and acknowledges it as truth because the Church says so, and not because he perceives it to be truth. This truth, with them, becomes good, and thence of conscience; and if the malignant Genii were to inflow into this obscurity, they would in a thousand ways destroy conscience. Ex.

8648. In the first state of those of the Spiritual Church, good does not appear, but only truth. . . In their first state, when truth is acted from, good is as it were absent, and is like a dismissed wife; but in their second state, when good is acted from, good is present, and is like a wife conjoined with her man. Sig.

8649^e. Goods of truth are truths which have been made of the will and thence of the life, and constitute the new will with the man of the Spiritual Church.

8685. The disposition of truth Divine with those of the Spiritual Church in the state before it is from good. Sig. and Ex.

8690. That thence is then everything of the will with those of the Spiritual Church, in every state. Sig. and Ex.

8707. For this is predicated of the understanding possessed by the man of the Spiritual Church from the immediate influx of truth from the Lord, by virtue of which there is not the apperception of truth, but there is light which gives the faculty of understanding.

8721. For if truth inflowed only immediately from the Divine, and not mediately through Heaven, the man of the Spiritual Church could be led through truth only, and not through good . . . and unless he were led through good, he could not be in Heaven, and thus the Lord could not have an abiding place with him . . . Sig.

8722. That those of the Spiritual Church shall be in good, and thus be led from good. Sig. and Ex.

— . For those of the Spiritual Church are led by means of truth to good ; and, when they come to good, they 'come to their own place in peace.'

8725. The choosing of the truths with which good could be conjoined with those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

8731^e. For the previous history treats of the prior state in which are those of the Spiritual Church while being regenerated, namely, while they are led by the Lord through truth. To this state succeeds the second, which consists in their being led by the Lord through good. It is this reversal, or change of the one state into the other, which is described in this chapter by 'Jethro.'

8755^e. For, in the prior state, the man of the Spiritual Church undergoes temptations. Sig.

8758. A disposition by Divine celestial good with those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

8762. The Salvation of those of the external and internal Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

8764⁶. This prophecy (of the two 'eagles,' in Ezekiel) describes the instauration of the Spiritual Church by the Lord. Ex.

8770. 'Ye shall be to Me a kingdom of priests' = . . . the good of truth, that is, the good into which the man of the Spiritual Church is introduced through truth.

8772. And the Spiritual Church is with those who are in the good in which is truths. Ex.

8781. By 'Moses' is represented truth from the Divine which is of the Spiritual Church.

8782. That those of the Spiritual Church may apprehend Divine things. Sig. and Ex.

8794⁴. It is to be known that the extension of life of those of the Spiritual Church is to the angelic spheres in the Second Heaven ; but not to the Third Heaven. The reason is that the man of the Spiritual Church cannot receive the Divine such as it is in the Third Heaven, except so generally that it comes to no perception of theirs. The reason is that the spiritual cannot come even to the first threshold of the good in which are the celestial. (This is signified by 'setting boundaries to the people' at Sinai.) 8818^e.

8797. 'Everyone that toucheth the mountain, dying he shall die' = that whoever of the Spiritual Church intrudes himself to the celestial will perish. Ex.

8806². Those of the Spiritual Church who live a life of truth and thence a life of good, are withheld from evils, and kept in good, by the Lord ; the good which is from the Lord is what is holy with them, and therefore in proportion as they receive good from the Lord they are holy ; and they receive good from the Lord . . . in proportion as they live a life of good according to genuine truths of faith, and believe at the time that all the good they then think and do is from the Lord. Then, too, the evils with them are separated, so that they do not at all appear, especially those which they have derived hereditarily. Sig. . . Hence it is that all the Voluntary which they have hereditarily is destroyed ; and on this account a new Voluntary is formed with them in the intellectual part by the Lord through truths of faith. This is why they, while being regenerated, are led through truths to good ; and afterwards, when regenerate, are, from good, in truths of good. Refs.

8809². Those of the Spiritual Church, who are here represented by 'the sons of Israel,' are not in any Conjugal until truth has been implanted in good with them. Before this takes place there is indeed marriage, but it is not pure ; for in their interiors there is not as yet the marriage of good and truth. Sig.

8819. The appearing of celestial good in the greatest obscurity . . . of faith such as belongs to those of the Spiritual Church relatively to those of the Celestial Church. Sig. and Ex.

8830. Lest those of the Spiritual Church should desire to ascend into the Heaven where is what is celestial. Sig. and Ex.

8928. 'Moses' = the truth Divine beneath Heaven conjoined with the truth Divine in Heaven . . . thus the truth of spiritual good ; for this is the truth Divine beneath Heaven in which is the Spiritual Church which is represented by 'the sons of Israel.'

— . 'Thick darkness' = truth Divine relatively to those of the Spiritual Church . . . The reason truth Divine is thick darkness to them, is that they are not in any light as to truths Divine.

—². Those who are of the Spiritual Church believe that they are in light ; but, that they are in obscurity, nay, in thick darkness, as to truth Divine, is evident from the fact that they do not know from any internal perception that which the Church calls truth, but solely from the fact that the Church says so ; and this they confirm with themselves whether it is false or true. And he who is not in internal perception concerning truth Divine is in thick darkness, or, what is the same, Divine truth is thick darkness to him. For example, they who are of the Spiritual Church do not know, and do not want to know, that there is any internal sense in the Word; and if perchance they should believe it, it would not be from any internal perception that it is so, but from persuasion from some other source. Again, they who are of the Spiritual Church say that faith is the only means of Salvation, even without charity and its goods. They believe this because the Church says so; and they do not come into the light of the perception that there is no faith except where there is charity, and that the one belongs to the other as one married partner does to the other, consequently that charity is the essential of the Church, because it is of good. Hence also it is evident in what obscurity, or in what thick darkness, is the Spiritual Church. And, because it is in such darkness, they divide the Church into as many Churches as there are diverse doctrines about the truths which are of faith, which they would not do if they were in light . . . (See also A.6289.)

[A.]8974². In the Spiritual Church which 'the sons of Israel' represent, there are two kinds of men. There are those in the truth of faith, and not in the corresponding good of life; and there are those in the good of charity, and in the corresponding truth of faith. (The latter) are those who constitute the veriest Church itself, and are men of the internal Church. In the internal sense these are they who are called 'the sons of Israel.' These are free of themselves, because they are in good. . . But (the former) are men of the external Spiritual Church, and are meant . . . by 'the Hebrew servants.' Ex. 8979².

8979^e. (Hence) he who acts from the good of charity is a true man of the Spiritual Church, and is represented by 'Israel;' but he who does not act from the good of charity, but from the truth of faith, is not a true man of the Spiritual Church, but is relatively his 'servant.'

8981. 'The sons of Israel'=those who are true men of the Spiritual Church, that is, those who do what is good from the affection which is of love, or, what is the same, from charity.

—¹⁶. The implantation of the truth and good of faith in the intellectual part, is described by Shem and Japheth putting the garment on their shoulders, walking backwards, and turning their faces backwards; for such is exactly the case with the truths and goods with the man of the Spiritual Church. 'Shem' and 'Japheth'=those of the Spiritual Church who have received the truths of faith in good which is charity; but 'Ham,' those who have not received them in good. . . 'Shem'=the man of the internal Spiritual Church; and 'Japheth,' the man of the external.

5595. Perception from spiritual good. Sig. 5616.

—¹. The internal Spiritual Church is a Church from spiritual good. Spiritual good is truth which has been made good; for truth becomes good when the man lives according to it; for it then passes into the will, and from the will into act, and becomes of life; and, when truth becomes of life, it is no longer called truth, but good. But the will which transforms truth into good is the new will in the intellectual part. This good is what is called spiritual good. Spiritual good is distinguished from celestial good by this: that celestial good was implanted in the voluntary part itself.

5599. Spiritual good from which are the truths of faith. Sig.

5678. That it was well with spiritual good. Sig.

5680. Spiritual good is called 'father,' because from it as a father are the truths and goods in the Natural.

5803. See ISRAEL, here.

5817. Elevation to spiritual good. Sig.

[A. 5817]^e. In the interior Natural is the spiritual good which is 'Israel.'

5832. That spiritual good would perish, and thus the internal of the Church . . . if the truth represented by 'Benjamin' perished. Sig. and Ex. 5837.

5867. As (the internal man cannot conjoin himself with the external natural) except through spiritual good from the Natural, which is 'Israel,' he first prepares to adjoin that good to himself. Tr. 5879.

5906. That spiritual good is the father of the celestial Internal, although spiritual good is relatively external because from the Natural. Ex.

5912. Spiritual good and all things from it, and all things from these again (conjoined with the celestial Internal). Sig. and Ex.

5922. The communication of the Spiritual Heaven in the Natural, with spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

—². The good in which the spiritual are, is called spiritual good . . . and spiritual good is the good of love towards the neighbour.

—¹². Spiritual good, which is charity. Sig.

5941. The accession of spiritual good, and of the truths of the Church, to the scientifics of the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5957. What is given gratis to spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

5960. Interior truth for spiritual good in the meanwhile. Sig. and Ex.

5965. Whether you say spiritual good, or the internal of the Church, it is the same . . . for spiritual good constitutes the internal of the Church.

5994. In Gen. xlvi. it treats of the conjunction of the celestial Internal ('Joseph') with spiritual good from the Natural ('Israel').

6014. For all spiritual goods are of charity towards the neighbour.

6030. Influx from the celestial Internal into spiritual good from the natural. Sig. 6082. 6106.

6035. The perception of spiritual good from the celestial Internal. Sig.

6061. In Gen. xvii. it treats, finally, of the regeneration of spiritual good from the Natural, which is 'Israel.'

6065. For spiritual good, which is represented by 'Israel,' is the good of truth.

6073. For works . . . are what are called spiritual goods . . .

6102. The life of spiritual good and of the truths of the Church from the celestial Internal. Sig.

6125². The Intellectual is . . . the recipient of spiritual truth and good . . .

6169. That spiritual good would live among the scientifics of the Church. Sig.

6185^e. In the relative sense, 'Isaac' = spiritual good.

6188. That natural truth, which is 'Jacob,' should be elevated to spiritual good, which is 'Israel.' Sig.

6225. New forces through spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

6226. That spiritual good should turn itself to the things which are of the interior Natural. Sig. and Ex.

6253. That (the Intellectual and Voluntary of the Church) should accede to spiritual good. Sig.

6256. That the spiritual good which is represented by 'Israel' is in obscure perception; for it is from the Natural, where natural lumen dominates, and not the heavenly light in which is the spiritual and celestial good which is from the Rational. Sig.

— . When spiritual good from the Natural is mentioned, those are meant who are in this good, namely, those who are of the Lord's Spiritual Church.

6265. That the celestial Internal removed the good of the Voluntary, and the truth of the Intellectual, from spiritual good, that is, from the affection of love thereof. Sig. and Ex.

6288. That the celestial Internal ('Joseph') saw that spiritual good from the Natural ('Israel') was in error. Sig. and Ex.

6289². Still, this truth (in which the spiritual have faith, whether it is true or not) becomes good with them, when it becomes of the will, and thence of the life, and it is then that good which is called the good of truth, the good of faith, and also spiritual good, or the good of the Spiritual Church. The quality of the good which is from such an origin may thus be seen. But still, good from such truth, even with the Gentiles, is accepted by the Lord, when it has charity towards the neighbour as its principle, and in this charity there is innocence.

6294. When spiritual good is in illumination by virtue of influx from the celestial Internal, it apperceives that . . . good is in the prior place, and truth in the posterior . . . but it then places the priority in this: that truth must reign above good. Sig.

6299². (For) the spiritual good which is represented by 'Israel' is the Spiritual of the internal Church, whereas the truth and good which are represented by 'Ephraim and Manasseh' are of the external Church.

6302. The perception of spiritual good from the celestial Internal concerning the new life, and concerning the end of the representation. Sig. and Ex.

6340. A prediction concerning (the truths and goods in the Natural) by spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

6350. That (faith alone) contaminated spiritual good in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

6354. That spiritual good did not want to know the evils which were of their will. Sig. and Ex.

6434. That the Spiritual Church has spiritual good from the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

6447. Communication (with all truths and goods) through influx from spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

6451. It here treats of the gathering together or manifestation—existentia—of the spiritual good which is 'Israel' in natural goods and truths which are his sons or the tribes named from them. Fully ex.

6499. The influx of the Internal into the affection of spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

—². For this good to come forth, there must be an influx from the celestial Internal . . .

7760. SEE GOOD OF CHARITY, here.

7761. The distinction between spiritual good and natural good. (Fully ex. under NATURAL GOOD, here.)

7835. See GOOD OF TRUTH, here. 8521².

7836. 'Soul' is predicated of spiritual good.

7839. For spiritual good receives its quality from the truths of faith.

7857. All spiritual good proceeds either from faith, that is, through faith, or from love. While man is being regenerated, the good with him proceeds from the truth of faith. Ex. . . But afterwards, when he has been regenerated, he does good from affection, thus from love.

7978. See BREAD, here. 8464.

8307^e. (Thus) man cannot be endowed with spiritual good . . . unless he desists from evils.

8369. 'Palm trees'=spiritual good, or the good of truth. Ill.

8395. 'The manna'=spiritual good. And that this is given by the Lord continually, without any care or strength of theirs, is signified by their receiving the manna daily, and that if they gathered more, it bred worms. 8413².

8431². It is the state of morning there when spiritual good, or that of the internal man, is in clearness.

8522. 'Cake'=spiritual good.

—². Spiritual good is here described, whence and how it comes forth, and thus its quality; namely, that this good in its first origin is truth, and that it becomes good from the fact that, from the will, thus from affection, it comes into act; for whatever man wills from affection is apperceived as good. But this good cannot come forth except through delights which are of the natural man; through these the spiritual man is introduced; and, when he has been introduced, he has thence a sense of it. Sig.

8770. 'A kingdom of priests'=here, spiritual good, which is the good of truth; that is, the good into which the man of the Spiritual Church is introduced through truth.

8772. All Christian good, or spiritual good, has in it the truths of faith; for the quality of this good is from the truths which are of faith. The good which has not its quality from the truths of faith is not Christian good, but is natural good, which does not confer eternal life . . .

8794. An extension into Heaven no further than to the spiritual spheres of good. Sig. and Ex. 8837.

— . For 'the sons of Israel,' who are here 'the people'=those who are in spiritual good in which truth is to be implanted.

8800. That spiritual good also would perish. Sig.

8802^e. There is a general perception with those who are in spiritual good; and they can receive a general influx of the good of a higher Heaven; here, of the Inmost Heaven. Sig.

8832. That those in spiritual good, in which the Divine is, should be protected as to the interiors. Sig. and Ex.

8842. Lest those in spiritual good and truth should desire to ascend into the Celestial Heaven. Sig.

8889. For the good with man is not spiritual good until it has been formed by truths; but, when it has been formed, there is the heavenly marriage . . .

8906. That his spiritual goods are not to be taken away from anyone. Sig. and Ex.

8912. 'Maid-servant'=the affection of spiritual good.

8977³. For spiritual good is good not for the sake of gain or honour; but for the sake of the Church and the salvation of the neighbour. Such good cannot be conjoined with those who are in the externals of the Church; for it is the good of charity itself, and springs from the affection which is of love. Sig.

8981². The law from which this statute flows is that spiritual good cannot be conjoined with those who are in the externals of the Church from infancy, but only adjoined so long as they are in combat; and that, after combat, it recedes. Ex.

8986. The delight of the remembrance of spiritual goods. Sig. and Ex.

9034³. See SPIRITUAL TRUTH, here.

9206². Good conjoined with truth is what is meant by spiritual good; and therefore when truth perishes with man, good perishes also; and vice versa . . .

9277. 'Vineyard'=the Spiritual Church, thus spiritual good, which is the good of charity towards the neighbour; for this good makes the Spiritual Church.

9340ⁱ. 'Sons of Israel from the land of Egypt'=those who have been initiated into spiritual truths and goods through scientific truths.

9406². 'The glory of Lebanon,' or 'the cedar'=spiritual good and truth.

—⁷. 'Silver'=spiritual good, which is the good of faith in the Lord and of charity towards the neighbour.

9472. 'The cedar of Shittah'=spiritual good.

9476. (These precious stones)=spiritual truths and goods in general . . . For the stones of fillings were for the breastplate, and by the breastplate upon the ephod was signified the good of faith, or spiritual good.

9496². The lungs=spiritual good.

9596. 'Scarlet doubledyed'=spiritual good, or the good of truth . . . In such an order follow . . . the truths and goods with a man and Angel in the Second Heaven. First there is truth from a celestial origin ('fine linen'); then the love or affection of truth ('hyacinthine'); afterwards, the derivative love, or affection of good ('crimson'); and, finally, spiritual good ('scarlet doubledyed').

9671. The good of faith in Him is called spiritual good.

9684². This Divine good becomes spiritual good through the reception of Divine truth, as of light from the moon. Sig.

10106. The appropriation of spiritual good with those who are in internals from the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

10136. Spiritual good from what is celestial sufficient for conjunction. Sig. and Ex.

[A. 10136]. 'Fine flour'=here, truth from celestial good, which truth is called spiritual good.

10261⁵. 'Cedar'=spiritual good, which is charity towards the neighbour.

10270. (The anointing of) the table=the Divine of the Lord in spiritual good which is from what is celestial, which is of the Second Heaven. Ex.

10295. 'Which are fragrant'=affections from spiritual good.

10296. 'Pure frankincense'=inmost truth, which is spiritual good. Ex.

10355³. As the man of the (Ancient) Church was in spiritual good, which good is in its essence truth, those times were called the Silver Age; for silver=such good.

J. 38. At this day there is no faith because there is no charity; and, where there is no charity, there is no spiritual good; for this good is solely from charity. I have been told from Heaven that there is still good with some, but that this cannot be called spiritual good, but natural good, because Divine truths themselves are in obscurity, and Divine truths introduce to charity . . . Hence it is that there is no spiritual good at this day, but, with some, only natural good. T.754.

Life 12. There are civil good, moral good, and spiritual good. . . Spiritual good is that which man does from spiritual law. Through this good, and according to it, is a man a citizen in the Spiritual World. These goods follow in this order: spiritual good is the highest . . .

13. The man who has spiritual good is a moral and also a civil man; but the man who has not spiritual good, appears as if he were a moral and civil man, but is not . . . For spiritual good has an essence of good in it . . . 14.

R. 277. Confession of the Lord's Divine Human from spiritual goods. Sig. and Ex. E.324.

—^e. 'Frankincense'=spiritual good. E. 491⁵.

E. 167⁷. Spiritual good, which in its essence is truth, and is signified, in special, by 'the kidneys,' is exterior good; but celestial good, which is signified in special by 'the heart,' is interior good.

283². The Second Heaven consists of those who are in spiritual good, or in the good of charity towards the neighbour; and, as celestial good is good in the highest place, and spiritual good is good in the second place, therefore the latter is around the former.

—⁴. 'Feathers with yellow of gold'=spiritual good from which are these truths.

325³. What is meant by worship from spiritual good Ex.

376. 'Wine'=spiritual good, which is the good of charity towards the neighbour, and the good of faith; and this good in its essence is truth. Ex. —⁴, III.

405¹⁴. 'Israel'=spiritual good, which is truth from celestial good.

435². The three tribes of 'Asher, Naphtali, and Manasseh'=those things which fully constitute spiritual good.

489a². When the Heavens are more interiorly and closely conjoined with the Lord, those are separated with whom there is not any spiritual good; for spiritual good alone conjoins, and not any natural good which does not derive its essence . . . from spiritual good. Ex.

—³. Spiritual good is formed by the Lord with man through truths and a life according to them; whereas external good separated from internal spiritual good is formed through a moral life which has self and the world as its end . . .

491. The conjunction of celestial good with spiritual good, and thus the conjunction of the higher Heavens. Sig. and Ex.

492. The incensings represented worship from spiritual good.

— . Spiritual good is formed with man through truths; for the truth with him becomes spiritual good when he lives according to it; and therefore spiritual good in its essence is truth. 831⁴.

600². 'The right hand'=spiritual good, which is truth in light; and 'the left hand'=spiritual truth, which is truth in shade . . .

710³². This truth from good in its essence is spiritual good; for this good, in its form, is truth from good. Sig.

—³⁵. When these falsities from evil are removed, then, for the first time, truths from good, or spiritual good, inflows from the Lord, and is received by man. Sig.

865². Both 'the firstfruits,' and 'the firstborn'=the spiritual good first formed, which in itself is the truth from good which is from the Lord. Ex.

918². Charity, or spiritual good, is to do good because it is truth, thus it is to do truth . . .

— . For spiritual good is from the Lord, and moral good is from man . . .

923³. These have not any spiritual good; and this good, which is the good of charity from the Lord, alone opens the spiritual mind . . .

1100⁸. 'A tree from a grain of mustard seed'=the man of the Church, and also the Church, which begins from a little spiritual good through truth . . .

Spiritual Heaven. See SECOND HEAVEN.

Spiritual Kingdom. Regnum Spirituale.

A. 2362². (See CELESTIAL KINGDOM, here. 3635. 3654. 3960². et seq. where all the passages which treat of the Spiritual Kingdom as compared with the Celestial Kingdom, are fully quoted.)

2671. It treats, in Gen. xxi. 13-21, in general, of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom; and, in special, of those who become spiritual, and this in order. Ex. 2673. 2706^e.

2699. It is said 'a great nation' because the Spiritual Kingdom is the second Kingdom of the Lord; and as 'Ishmael' represents . . . the Spiritual Church, he represents the Spiritual Kingdom of the Lord in the Heavens; for the image and likeness of the one is in the other.

2702¹⁵. It treats (in Ezek. xlvii.) of the New Jerusalem or the Spiritual Kingdom of the Lord. 2928⁴.

2761⁵. The City of 'Jerusalem' = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom and Church.

2826⁴. The royalty represented the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Refs.

2830⁴. Where it treats of the New Temple and of the New Jerusalem, that is, of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. —⁵. 7839^e.

2832². The Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Tr.

3187. The Lord's Spiritual Kingdom from the marriage of good and truth in the Divine Human, in which Kingdom there is charity and faith where previously there had been evil and falsity. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'Seed,' in the universal sense, = all who constitute the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, or, what is the same, that Kingdom itself. . . consequently, those who are in charity through faith.

3189. The form of His Spiritual Kingdom comes forth according to the ordination of the affections in His Divine Human.

3230. In Gen. xxv. it treats, first, of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom and its derivations; and that it has been separated from the Celestial Kingdom.

3240. (Thus) in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, as in His Celestial one, there are good and truth, but with much difference. And those who are in the Kingdoms are distinguished from each other by the good and truth, for the reason that there are those who are more in good, and those who are more in truth; and hence come the derivations. The derivations of good in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom are represented by the sons of Jokshan; and the derivations of truth there, by the sons of Midian. (Continued under SPIRITUAL.)

—³. 'Sheba and Dedan' = those who constitute the first class, that is, those in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom who are in the good of faith, and who have doctrinals of charity. . .

3243. 'Keturah' = the things which are of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, the worship of which is according to doctrinal things.

3245^e. By the sons which Abraham had by Keturah, is signified the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, as also by Ishmael.

3267². So in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom in the Heavens, in which there is variety as to the things of faith, insomuch that there is not one Society, nor even one in a Society, who in the things which are of the truths of faith has an idea exactly accordant with [those of] others. Nevertheless it is a one, because charity is the principal thing with all. (Continued under SPIRITUAL CHURCH.)

3272³. The Holy City (in Rev. xxi.) = nothing else than the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Ex.

3274. See ISHMAEL, here.

3305⁷. 'Jacob,' and 'Israel,' in the representative sense, = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom and Church. . .

3351. Those who then formed choirs were from the province of the lungs, thus from the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

3720. See TEMPLE, here.

3387. In the Grand Man there are two Kingdoms. . . The second Kingdom is called the Spiritual Kingdom, and is constituted of the Angels who are called spiritual; and there are those who have been in the good of charity towards the neighbour. They place the delight of life in this: that they are able to benefit others without a recompence. This is their recompence: that they are allowed to do good to others. In proportion as they will and long for this the more, in the same proportion they are in greater intelligence and happiness. . . This is the Spiritual Kingdom. . . All in the Spiritual Kingdom pertain to the province of the lungs. . .

3952^e. By 'Joseph' is signified and represented the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, which is the heavenly marriage itself here treated of.

3969. 'Joseph,' in the internal sense, = the Spiritual Kingdom, or the good of faith. —⁴. 6417.

—³. By 'Joseph' is represented the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, thus the spiritual man; for in every spiritual man there is that Kingdom. (Continued under JOSEPH.) —⁶, III.

—¹⁷. (Thus) the Spiritual Kingdom is the good of faith, that is, charity, which inflows from the Lord immediately, and also mediately through the Celestial Kingdom.

4286⁴. 'Israel,' in the internal sense, = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom in Heaven and on earth. The Lord's Spiritual Kingdom on earth is the Church which is called the Spiritual Church. . .

5044¹³. 'The king's daughter' = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. His Spiritual Kingdom is so called from the Lord's Divine truth, which is here described. Ex.

5313¹². 'Jerusalem' (Jer. iii.) = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. This Kingdom is also meant by the New Jerusalem in Ezek.; and also by the Holy Jerusalem descending from Heaven, in the Revelation. The Lord's Spiritual Kingdom is where the principal thing is Divine truth in which is Good. 5922¹⁴.

5922². The Spiritual Kingdom is the Second Heaven. (Fully quoted under CELESTIAL KINGDOM, and also at 6366. 6417.)

6188². The people Israel, whose metropolis was Samaria, represented the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. 6304.

6306². The infernals had then occupied a great part of Heaven; but the Lord, by His coming into the world. . . delivered Heaven from them, and gave it as an inheritance to those who were of His Spiritual Kingdom.

6426. That hence is all the good and truth possessed by the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

—³. 'The stone cut out of the rock,' in the relative sense, = His Spiritual Kingdom.

6427. The Spiritual Kingdom consists of those who are in the truth of faith, but who make this truth of life, and thus good.

7016. 'The sons of Israel' = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, and the derivative Spiritual Church.

7184. Afterwards (in Ex. vi.) is described the Lord's

Spiritual Kingdom as to faith and as to charity, and then as to doctrine, and also as to the reception of the law Divine.

[A.] 7201. That the law Divine shall give those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom to apperceive. Sig.

7215. Exhortation by the law Divine to those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. 7227.

7235. 'Lead ye the sons of Israel out of the land of Egypt'=that those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom should be delivered.

7240. A command through the law from the Divine to those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom while still in propinquity to those in the Hells. Sig. and Ex.

7573³. For by 'Jerusalem' is signified the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, in which are those who are in good from truth, and in truth from good.

8468². The New Earth and the New Temple (in Ezek.)=the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

8469. The good of truth is signified by 'the manna' . . . It here treats of the good appertaining to those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, which good is signified by 'the manna.' 8521², Ex.

8622². Hence those infernal Genii are removed, so that they may not communicate with those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

8625. Because (those in the falsity of interior evil) want to inflict violence on the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

— The reason 'the throne of Jah'=the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, is that 'throne' is predicated of the Lord's royalty, and this corresponds to His Spiritual Kingdom. Ex.

8645. Perception of those Things which had been done to those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. For Moses with the people represents the Spiritual Kingdom; Moses, as the head; and the people as those things which are subject to the head. Thus Moses also represents the Lord as to Divine truth; for from this is the Spiritual Kingdom.

8771. 'A holy nation'=thus the Spiritual Kingdom. . . . It is said 'a kingdom of priests,' and 'a holy nation,' and both=the Spiritual Kingdom; but with this difference: (the former)=those who are in good from truth, and (the latter) those who are in good and thence in truth. (The former) look upwards to the Lord through truths; but (the latter) are in the Lord, and look at truths from Him. Moreover [these two states] succeed one another with those who are being regenerated, in whom the Spiritual Kingdom, that is, the life of Heaven, is being implanted by the Lord . . .

8797. For the people who were below mount Sinai represent the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, which is the Middle Heaven. . . (And) those of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom cannot inflow into the Celestial Kingdom, because this is higher or more interior . . . and when those in a lower Heaven try to ascend into a higher one, they are admitted, but suffer hard things. Sig. and Ex.

8994⁴. Knowledges are represented by men, and affections by women . . . This is the case with those who are of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom . . .

9596³. 'Fine twined linen'=an Intellectual such as pertains to the spiritual man, or to an Angel who is in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

—³. (Thus) with those who are of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, the Intellectual itself is 'the habitation,' in a restricted sense.

9603. That all the truths of faith in the Spiritual Kingdom have regard to good, and through good to the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

9684. 'The candlestick . . . '=the illumination of the Spiritual Kingdom through the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord's Divine Human to those who are in good. Ex.

— The Lord as to celestial good; thus this good itself, from which and through which the Lord inflows into the Spiritual Kingdom, or into the Middle Heaven. Sig.

9789. That [this] is eternal for the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

— For the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom in the Heavens is the Spiritual Heaven; and on earth is the Spiritual Church.

9814. A representative of the Spiritual Kingdom adjoined to the Celestial Kingdom. Sig. and Ex. 9815.

— Those in the Celestial Kingdom appear naked; but those in the Spiritual Kingdom appear clothed; from which it is again evident that Divine truth, or the Divine Spiritual, which appears as light, is what invests.

9819^e. For the Spiritual Kingdom is what is derived from the Celestial Kingdom, and is thus what covers it as a garment does the body. Sig.

9820. A representative of Divine truth in the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig.

9822. Divine truths in the Spiritual Kingdom in their order. Sig. and Ex.

— For the garments of Aaron=the Spiritual Kingdom adjoined to the Celestial Kingdom . . . and this Kingdom is called the Spiritual Kingdom from the Divine truths there. . . Good reigns in the Celestial Kingdom, and truth in the Spiritual Kingdom, both from the Lord. And, as the garments of Aaron represented this Kingdom, and these garments were the ephod, the robe, and the coat, therefore by them are signified the Divine truths there, in their order.

9823. The ephod, upon which was this breastplate, represented the ultimates of the Spiritual Kingdom, consequently the ultimates of Heaven. 10006.

9825. 'The robe'=the middle of the Spiritual Kingdom. . . For the Spiritual Kingdom is distinguished into three degrees: an inmost, a middle, and an external. The reason (of this) is that the inmost there communicates with the Celestial, and the external with the Natural; and thus the middle is derived equally from each. Ex.

—². For 'the kingdom of Israel'=the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Refs.

—³. As 'the robe' represented the Spiritual Kingdom, it represented also the truths of that Kingdom in general, (which) are those called spiritual truths, and which are in the intellectual part. Ill.

9826. 'The coat' represented the inmost Divine truth in the Spiritual Kingdom, thus that which proceeds proximately from the Divine Celestial, which is the Lord's Divine good in the Inmost Heaven. Ex. 10004.

9834. The external of the Spiritual Kingdom from that good. Sig. and Ex.

9835. The Lord's Spiritual Kingdom is here treated of, and this Kingdom, as to all the truths and goods which are there, pertains to the intellectual part. . . .

9838. What is like and continuous from the external of the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex. 9859.

9842. (The interior memory) on which are impressed the goods and truths of the Spiritual Kingdom as to all their quality. Sig. and Ex.

9849. (The conservation of good and truth) from mercy for ever in the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

9855. Conjunction with the good from which are truths, and thus the conservation of the Spiritual Kingdom by all exertion and power. Sig. and Ex.

9858. For the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, which is represented by 'the garments of Aaron,' is the Intellectual of Heaven; as the Celestial Kingdom is its Voluntary.

9873⁴. 'The onyx,' in general, =the external of the Spiritual Kingdom.

9896. The conjunction and conservation of all things of Heaven through the sphere of Divine good in the externals of the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

9899. All things of Heaven inseparable from the externals of the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

9911. Divine truth in the internal form in the Spiritual Kingdom through the influx from the good of the Celestial Kingdom. Sig. and Ex. 9912, Ex.

9942. The inmost things of the Spiritual Kingdom which proceed from the truths of celestial love. Sig. and Ex.

—¹¹. 'To swear'=to confirm truths, which is done through the Rational and scientifics from the Word, in the Spiritual Kingdom.

9944. 'The belt'=the bond and separation from the externals of the Spiritual Kingdom. Ex.

9952. Such a state of the Divine good in the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

9995. This Divine truth received in the Spiritual Kingdom by the Angels there, is called spiritual good.

10003. 'Thou shalt take the garments, and put them on Aaron'=a representative of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

10005. 'The robe of the ephod'=the middle of the Spiritual Kingdom, which is the Divine Spiritual that proceeds mediately from the Divine Celestial.

— (The two belts) signified that the things of the Spiritual Kingdom which were represented by the coat were distinct from those which were represented by the robe and ephod together.

10098. For the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom comes forth from his Divine there, which is called the Divine Spiritual.

10296. For the good with those in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom is nothing but truth. Ex.

10614². But the Word in the internal sense is spiritual, because it is accommodated to the understanding of the Angels in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom; for these Angels think spiritually.

H. 215. The government in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom is called 'judgment,' because they are in spiritual good, which is the good of charity towards the neighbour, and this good in its essence is truth. . . . These, also, are led by the Lord, but mediately, and therefore these have governors, fewer or more according to the need of the Society; and these have laws also, according to which they live together. The governors administer all things according to the laws: these they understand because they are wise; and in doubtful matters they are illustrated by the Lord.

217. In the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom there are various forms of government; in one Society not the like as in another: the variety is according to the ministries which the Societies discharge. Ex.

388. 'When he opened the seventh seal'=exploration by the Lord of the state of the Church and the derivative life of those who are in his Spiritual Kingdom, who are those who are in charity and its faith; here, who are in faith alone.

393. Propitiation lest the Angels of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom should be injured by the Spirits of the Satanic Kingdom, who were beneath. Sig. and Ex.

D. 5102². See SPEAK, here. E. 855.

6011. Then the Angels in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom feel joy.

E. 22. Those who receive Divine truth more than Divine good are in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, and thence are called the spiritual. . . . To those who are in the Spiritual Kingdom it is granted by the Lord to be in the affection of truth for the sake of truth: and this Divine is that which is called 'grace.'

205³. 1⁴ treats here (Zech. xii.) of the Lord's advent, and the Salvation then of those who are of His Spiritual Kingdom.

[E.] 401²⁴. 'Joseph'=the celestial spiritual, who are the highest ones in the Spiritual Kingdom, and thence communicate proximately with those in the Celestial Kingdom.

1083². Ends are actually in the Celestial Kingdom; causes in the Spiritual Kingdom; and effects in the natural world.

De Verbo 8². See SPIRITUAL SENSE, here.

14². The Word in the Spiritual Kingdom. (See WORD, here.) 24.

—³. The Word in the Celestial Kingdom is much more excellent and wise than that which is in the Spiritual Kingdom. Ex.

24. These arcana (in the Word of the Celestial Kingdom) cannot be comprehended, nor even thought, by an Angel of the Spiritual Kingdom; and therefore they have been told that they cannot approach the wisdom of the Angels of the Celestial Kingdom: just as those who are in the natural sphere cannot approach the intelligence of the Angels of the Spiritual Kingdom. . . I have proved by experience that the intelligence of the Angels of the Spiritual Kingdom is ineffable and incomprehensible to those who are in the Natural Kingdom; and that the wisdom of the Angels of the Celestial Kingdom is incomprehensible and ineffable to those who are in the Spiritual Kingdom.

Spiritual Love. Amor spiritualis.

A. 1025². See CELESTIAL LOVE, here. 1997. 2621². 2658⁶. 2714. 2906⁴. 3316¹. 3941⁴. 4262³. 4352². 4750³. 6435⁷. 9868. 10606. W.427. R.395. M.67. 270. E.433⁴. 496⁶.

2722⁶. The people of the Ancient Church were in spiritual love, that is, in charity, which they made the essential of worship . . .

3235². To the spiritual the Lord appears as a Moon, because they are in spiritual love, that is, in charity towards the neighbour.

3325⁷. The Lord's Divine spiritual love is [mentioned] relatively to spiritual love, or those of the Spiritual Church, who are called spiritual from love to the neighbour.

—¹⁰. 'Joseph'=the Lord as to Divine spiritual love.

—'. 'Israel,' in the supreme sense, =the Lord as to Divine spiritual love; in the relative sense, those who are in spiritual love, that is, in charity towards the neighbour.

—¹⁴. 'The first-born' represented the Lord as to Divine spiritual love; and at the same time those who are in this love.

3952⁴. From spiritual love, that is, from love towards the neighbour . . .

4103². Man is in Heaven . . . when he is in spiritual love and faith.

4288³. There was Divine worship in groves also, because groves=spiritual love; and, in the supreme sense, the Lord as to this love; and, when they held worship in groves, they were in their holy state, because they were then in spiritual love.

—'. 'The moon'=spiritual love.

4735². Divine spiritual love is represented in the Holy Supper by the blood, or wine.

5360. 'Wine'=spiritual love.

6024². 'The sons of Levi . . .'=spiritual love, and its doctrinals in general.

6804². 'Blood'=conjunction through spiritual love, that is, through charity towards the neighbour.

7342². Hence the principles of the truth of faith effect nothing with man, unless the Lord insinuates the affection of spiritual love, that is, of love towards the neighbour.

7622. A bird=spiritual love and what is of it. . . Spiritual love is mutual love, and charity towards the neighbour.

9870. 'A cyanus, an agate, and an amethyst'=the spiritual love of good. . . The spiritual love of good is charity towards the neighbour; and the spiritual love of truth is faith from charity: of that good and this truth consists the second Heaven . . .

9872. 'A beryl, an onyx, and a jasper'=the spiritual love of truth, in which love the higher things cease.

—'. That 'a beryl'=the spiritual love of truth. III.

9873. The internal good of the Spiritual Kingdom is the good of charity towards the neighbour: this good is that which is meant by the spiritual love of good. And the external good of the Spiritual Kingdom is the good of faith: this good is that which is meant by the spiritual love of truth.

10207. Charity towards the neighbour is called spiritual love. . . This love reigns in the Middle and Ultimate Heaven.

H. 23. See CELESTIAL KINGDOM, here. P.217⁴.

W. 42S. But they who are in spiritual love, which is love towards the neighbour, have not wisdom inscribed on their life: but they have intelligence; for it is of wisdom to do good from the affection of good, but it is of intelligence to do good from the affection of truth. These do not know what faith is; and if faith is mentioned, they understand Truth: and when charity is mentioned, they understand the doing of truth; and when it is said that we must believe, they say that that is a vain way of speaking; for who does not believe truth; for they see truth in the light of their Heaven; and therefore to believe what they do not see, they call either simplicity, or folly. These make the Pulmonic of Heaven. (This subject is continued under SPIRITUAL NATURAL, at W.429.)

R. 356. In this series (of the tribes) it treats of those in the Spiritual Kingdom. The love of these is called spiritual love, which is love towards the neighbour, and also charity.

392. By 'the altar' at which the Angel stood, and by 'the golden censer' which he had in his hand, is signified the worship of the Lord from spiritual love; which worship is from the good of charity through truths of faith. Ex.

394. The fragrance from these spices correspond to such things as are of spiritual love, or of charity and the derivative faith.

E. 204². (Thus) to love men from what is true, sincere, and just in them is spiritual love. Fully ex.

831². I will now say something about spiritual love, in which are the Angels of the Second Heaven. Spiritual love is the love of truth; and, in the supreme sense, the love of the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord; thus also love to the Lord, but in a lower degree than that in which are the celestial Angels . . . for the spiritual Angels are in love to the Lord from the reception of the Divine truth from Him. The difference is like that between love in the will and love in the understanding; or like that between flame and its light . . .

— As spiritual love is the love of truth . . . these (Angels) speak about the holy things of Heaven and the Church . . .

—³. The reason the spiritual Angels, from the spiritual love which makes their life, are affections of truth . . .

—⁵. The Societies of the Third Heaven are above those of the Second, for the sake of the influx of celestial love into spiritual love; for spiritual love derives its essence from celestial love, through a mediate and immediate influx from the Lord.

832³. As man does not know how love becomes spiritual, it shall be briefly told. All love becomes spiritual through truths from the Word, in proportion as a man acknowledges them, and in proportion as he sees them with the understanding, and afterwards loves, that is, does them from the will. Fully ex.

—⁵. But the love with a man . . . does not become spiritual by his merely knowing and understanding truths. Ex.

—⁶. See LOVE, here.

859². For communication with Heaven is possible only through spiritual love, which is also called charity, thus through a life according to truths from the Word . . .

H. 31. See CELESTIAL NATURAL, here. W.233².

345. Infants who have died as such . . . have (only) a spiritual natural plane . . .

W. 429. But those who are in spiritual natural love have neither wisdom nor intelligence inscribed on their life; but they have something of faith from the Word, in proportion as this has been conjoined with charity. As these do not know what charity is, nor whether faith is Truth, they cannot be among those in the Heavens who are in wisdom and intelligence, but among those who are in mere knowledge. Yet those who have shunned evils as sins are in the Ultimate Heaven, and are there in a light like the nocturnal lunar light. But those who have not confirmed themselves in a faith of what is unknown, and who at the same time have been in some affection of truth, when instructed by the Angels, are, according to their reception of Truths, and a life according to them, elevated into a Society of those who are in spiritual natural love and the derivative intelligence. These become spiritual; and all the rest remain spiritual natural.

R. 565a. 'I stood upon the sand of the sea' = his spiritual natural state now, such as there is with those who are in the First Heaven.

I. 12⁴. (Thus) the Spiritual and the Natural united in a man cause him to live spiritually natural.

T. 571. See SPIRITUAL, here. 607². E.617¹⁵.

D. 209. On the Spiritual Natural.—That is called the Spiritual Natural which is in natural lumen, so that a man can reason in general . . .

4627³. (The Spiritual Natural the highest degree of the external man.)

—⁷. He is then in a lumen still more interior, namely, in the Spiritual of the Natural . . .

E. 375². They who remain in the sense of the letter and make doctrine thence, and live according to it . . . are not purely spiritual, as are the Angels of the higher Heavens, but spiritual natural; (and) are in the Ultimate Heaven . . .

411²¹. Most of those who have light from the Moon there, dwell upon rocks. Those who are spiritual natural dwell upon rocks which are covered on the surface with soil, whence are fields, groves, etc.; but not such as are upon the mountains and hills . . .

449. Those in the Ultimate Heaven are either spiritual natural, or celestial natural. The spiritual natural there pertain to the Spiritual Kingdom; and the celestial natural to the Celestial Kingdom; and therefore the spiritual natural communicate with the Second Heaven, where all are spiritual; and the celestial natural with the Third Heaven, where all are celestial.

629⁶. In the External Church are those in knowledges . . . and not in any interior intelligence and wisdom, and hence are in the lower Heavens. These are called spiritual natural . . . and they are meant by those who are in the suburbs of Jerusalem.

832⁶. The love in which are the Angels of the First Heaven is called spiritual natural love, and also celestial natural love.

834. Something shall now be said about the spiritual natural love in which are the Angels of the First Heaven. This love is what is properly called charity towards the neighbour. (Continued under FIRST HEAVEN.)

Spiritual Sense. Sensus spiritualis.

See INTERNAL SENSE, throughout.

A. 2276⁴. The spiritual sense mentioned. 2686³. 2781^e. 2937.

2311. All the words have a spiritual sense. 4137³.

3482. With the Ancients, because they had intercourse with Spirits and Angels . . . there was a spiritual sense in every (word of their speech).

5147⁵. The Angels with the man understand these things according to the spiritual sense.

5639^e. Hence the internal sense of the Word is called the spiritual sense (and not the celestial sense).

5648². Into this spiritual sense is the natural sense at once transmuted.

6212³. The chariot in which was a man = the spiritual sense which was in the prophetic things.

6884. The sense of the letter, at the first threshold of Heaven, is turned into the spiritual sense.

6996³. The literal sense is significative of the Things in the spiritual sense, while this sense is not perceptible to man, except only in so far as it can be presented and set forth by means of such things as are of the world and of nature; and still less the angelic sense.

8420. In the very word 'walk' is the signification of the spiritual sense.

8943. For within all the several things of the Word there is a spiritual sense which treats of the Lord's Kingdom; and within this sense there is what is Divine; for the Word in its inmost sense treats of the Lord alone.

9093^e. And truths in the internal form are such as are those of the Word in the spiritual sense.

9280³. He is not aware that the Word is Divine from the spiritual sense, which does not appear in the letter; but still is in the letter; and that this sense is presented in Heaven while a man is reading the Word holily; and that in this sense it treats of the Lord and His Kingdom.

9407⁴. If he were told that in the sense of the letter there is a spiritual sense, which is of truth, and in this a celestial sense which is of good; and that these senses shine forth from the literal sense, he would be astounded . . .

9841⁴. For the Word in its spiritual sense treats only of such things as belong to the Lord and the neighbour . . . Hence the Word is alive.

10217. For the spiritual sense is the interior sense of words, and is very frequently within the words of languages, especially of the oriental ones.

10227¹⁰. Without the spiritual sense the Word cannot be called holy, and in very many places cannot even be apprehended. S. 16, Examps.

H. 114². If man were in the knowledge of correspondences, he would understand the Word as to its spiritual sense . . .

N. 7. This doctrine is from Heaven, because it is from the spiritual sense of the Word; and the spiritual sense of the Word is the same as the doctrine which is in Heaven.

258. That in the Word there is a spiritual sense, which is called the internal sense. (Refs. to passages.)

J. 1. They who have not known the spiritual sense of the Word, have not understood that . . .

28². By these words is meant that the Lord, when it is the end of the Church, will open the spiritual sense of the Word, and thus Divine truth such as it is in itself; thus that this is the sign that the Last Judgment is at hand.

40. It treats everywhere in the spiritual sense of the Word of the Spiritual World, that is, of the state of the Church both in the Heavens and on the earth. Hence is the Word spiritual and Divine . . .

57². There was then given them the Word which is in Heaven, in which there is not the natural but the spiritual sense.

73^e. As spiritual freedom has been restored to man, the spiritual sense of the Word has now been disclosed, and thereby interior Divine truths have been revealed; for in his previous state man would not have understood these; and he who would have understood them would have profaned them.

W. H. 1. The Word as to its spiritual sense, or internal sense, is described in the account of the 'white horse' (Rev. xix. 11-16).

L. 16⁶. That the Jews had dispersed all the truths of the Word, but not its spiritual sense. Sig. The Lord's 'vesture' = this of the Word.

S. 5. That in the Word there is a spiritual sense, hitherto unknown. Gen. art. T. 193.

— . What the spiritual sense is. The spiritual sense is not that sense which shines forth from the sense of the letter when anyone scrutinizes and explicates the Word to confirm some dogma of the Church. This sense is the literal sense of the Word. But the spiritual sense does not appear in the sense of the letter: it is within it, as the soul is in the body, as thought is in the eyes, and affection in the face, which act as a one, as do cause and effect. This sense especially causes the Word to be spiritual, not only for men, but also for the Angels; and therefore the Word, through this sense, communicates with the Heavens.

9. That the spiritual sense is in each and all things of the Word. Examps.

—^e. That the spiritual sense is to be opened at the end of the Church, is signified not only by the things said of the 'white horse' and him that sat on him, but also by 'the great supper . . .'

13⁴. It is to be known that in the spiritual sense all things cohere in a continuous connection . . . and therefore if a syllable is taken away, the connection is broken . . .

18. That it is from the spiritual sense that the Word is Divinely inspired, and is holy in every word. Ex. T. 200.

— . As the holiness of the Word does not appear from the letter alone . . . it has now pleased the Lord to reveal the spiritual sense . . .

20. That the spiritual sense of the Word has been hitherto unknown. Ex. T.201.

25. The reason the spiritual sense of the Word has been at this day disclosed by the Lord, is that the doctrine of genuine truth has now been revealed; and this doctrine accords with the spiritual sense of the Word, and no other. This sense is also signified by the 'appearing of the Lord in the clouds of heaven with glory and power' (Matt.xxiv.30,31), in which chapter it treats of the consummation of the age . . . The opening of the Word as to its spiritual sense has also been promised in the Apocalypse; and it is there meant by 'the white horse,' and by 'the great supper,' to which all are invited.

—². That the spiritual sense will not be acknowledged for a long time; and that this will be solely owing to those who are in falsities of doctrine, especially concerning the Lord, and who therefore do not admit truths, is meant by 'the beast,' and by 'the kings of the earth,' who would 'make war with him that sat on the white horse.' By 'the beast' are meant the Papists; and by 'the kings of the earth,' the Reformed who are in falsities of doctrine.

26. That the spiritual sense of the Word will not henceforth be given to anyone except to him who is in genuine truths from the Lord. Ex. T.208.

— . The reason is that no one can see the spiritual sense except from the Lord alone, and unless he is in genuine truths from Him; for the spiritual sense of the Word treats of the Lord alone and of His Kingdom; and this sense is that in which are His Angels in Heaven; for it is His Divine truth there. A man can violate this if he is in the knowledge of correspondences, and through it wants to explore the spiritual sense of the Word from his Own intelligence; for, from some correspondences known to him, he can pervert its sense, and draw it into the confirmation of what is false, and this would be to do violence to Divine truth, and also to Heaven; and therefore if anyone wants to open this sense from himself, and not from the Lord, Heaven is closed, and then the man either sees nothing, or is spiritually insane. Ex. 56.

—². Lest, therefore, anyone should enter into the spiritual sense of the Word, or should pervert the genuine truth which is of this sense, guards have been placed by the Lord, which are meant by 'the cherubs.' (Represented to me by purses of silver lying open, but guarded.)

39. The spiritual sense is 'the spirit' of the Word; and the celestial sense is its 'life.'

— . The spiritual sense and the celestial sense are not the Word without the natural sense, which is the sense of the letter; for they are then like spirit and life without a body; and like a palace without a foundation.

40. The naked truths themselves . . . are in the spiritual sense of the Word; and the naked goods are in its celestial sense.

41². For the light of Heaven, in which is the spiritual sense of the Word, inflows into the natural light in which is the sense of the letter, and illuminates the Intellectual of the man . . . and causes him to see and acknowledge Divine truths, where they stand forth, and where they lie hidden. These Divine truths, together with the light of Heaven, inflow with some; sometimes even when they are unaware of it.

42. See CELESTIAL SENSE, here. 63. 64. So, and all the rest of the extracts.

56. It may be believed that the doctrine of genuine truth can be procured through the spiritual sense of the Word, which is given through the knowledge of correspondences; but doctrine is not procured thereby, but is only illustrated and corroborated; for no one comes into the spiritual sense of the Word through correspondences unless he is previously in genuine truths from doctrine . . .

—². Besides, the spiritual sense is not given to anyone except by the Lord alone, and it is guarded by Him, as He guards Heaven; for Heaven is in it.

58. The reason the Word shines and is translucent with these, is that in each thing of the Word there is a spiritual and celestial sense; and these senses are in the light of Heaven; and therefore the Lord, through these senses, and through the light of them, inflows into the natural sense . . .

63. The Angels of the Spiritual Kingdom are in the spiritual sense . . . 64. 67.

So. The things in the spiritual sense relate chiefly to the Church . . . and to the Divine truth . . .

112. Therefore it has now pleased the Lord to reveal the spiritual sense of the Word; and to manifest that the Word, in this sense, and, from it, in the natural sense, treats of the Lord and the Church, and of these alone.

P. 264. (Why the spiritual sense has been hitherto unknown.) Gen.art.

—². That if the spiritual sense had been revealed previously, the Church would have profaned it, and thereby the holiness itself of the Word. Ex.

—⁴. That neither were genuine truths, in which is the spiritual sense of the Word, revealed by the Lord until after the Last Judgment . . . and the New Church was about to be instaurated. Ex.

—⁵. (Thus) the spiritual sense of the Word was to be revealed for the New Church . . .

—⁶. (Thus) it is of the Divine Providence that the spiritual sense has been hidden from the world until the present age, and meanwhile has been reserved in Heaven with the Angels, who derive their wisdom from it. This sense was known among the Ancients, and was carefully studied. But because their descendants turned the correspondences . . . into idolatry, and magic, it was closed; first with the sons of Israel, and afterwards with Christians . . . and it is now opened for the Lord's New Church.

R. 1. What the spiritual sense is, has been hitherto unknown. It is in every thing of the Word; and, without it, the Word in many places cannot be understood. This sense does not appear in the sense of the letter; for it is in it as the soul is in the body. Ex.

—². But as the Spiritual does not appear in the sense of the letter . . . the spiritual sense has been hitherto unknown. Nor could it be made known until genuine truths had been revealed by the Lord; for in these is this sense.

[R]. 24. That the Lord would open the spiritual sense at the end of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'The glory,' in which they should see Him, = the Word in the spiritual sense.

26. 'Blood and water' (John xix. 14) = Divine truth spiritual and natural: thus the Word in the spiritual sense and natural sense.

96^e. As the spiritual sense is abstracted from persons.

231². All precious stones in Heaven derive their origin from the ultimates of the Word; and their transparency from the spiritual sense of the ultimates.

246. The Divine wisdom in the Word in the natural sense from its spiritual sense and celestial sense. Sig. and Ex.

256. (The 'Book written within' = the spiritual sense.)

414. Divine truth in the spiritual sense of the Word is like the light of the sun in the daytime; and Divine truth in the natural sense is like the light of the moon and stars at night. Moreover, the spiritual sense inflows into the natural sense as the sun with its light inflows into the moon, and presents the light of the sun mediately. So also does the spiritual sense enlighten men—even those who do not know anything about this sense—while they are reading the Word in the natural sense; a spiritual man, as the light of the sun does his eye; and a natural man, as the light from the moon and stars does his eye. Everyone is enlightened according to the spiritual affection of truth and good, and at the same time according to the genuine truths, through which he has opened his Rational.

658. But 'anger,' etc. are not attributed to God in the spiritual sense; for in this sense there is not appearance and correspondence; but Truth in its light.

768³. They wanted to know whether there is this spiritual sense in these words (about Peter and the keys): whereupon the Word which is in Heaven was given them, in which there is not the natural sense, but the spiritual sense . . . and, when they read it, they saw that 'Peter' was not mentioned there; but instead 'Truth from good which is from the Lord.'

803, Pref. The opening of the Word as to the spiritual sense for the New Church (is treated of in Rev. xix. 11-16).

804³. This (obstruction of the Lord's influx by the Babylonians and Reformed in the World of Spirits) is likewise the cause, that not until after the Last Judgment was the spiritual sense of the Word revealed . . . 825. E. 1094.

820. 'I saw heaven opened, and, behold, a white horse' = the spiritual sense of the Word revealed by the Lord, and, through this, the interior understanding of the Word disclosed, which is the Advent of the Lord.

— . That this is the advent of the Lord, is because through this sense it manifestly appears that the Lord is the Word; and that the Word treats of Him alone; and that He is the God of Heaven and earth; and that the New Church comes forth from Him alone.

824. That the quality of the Word in its spiritual sense and celestial sense no one sees except the Lord, and he to whom He reveals it. Sig. and Ex.

897. 'Having the glory of God . . . ' = that in the New Church will be the Word understood, because translucent from its spiritual sense.

— . With these, the Word as it were shines when read: it shines from the Lord by means of the spiritual sense; because the Lord is the Word; and the spiritual sense is in the light of Heaven which proceeds from the Lord as a Sun . . . 911.

932. 'A pure river of the water of life . . . ' = the Apocalypse now open and explicated as to its spiritual sense, wherein Divine truths in abundance have been revealed by the Lord for those who will be in His New Church. Ex.

M. 532. The Lord has revealed arcana . . . I. That in the Word, in each and all things of it, there is a spiritual sense corresponding to the natural sense, and that through this sense there is conjunction of the men of the Church with the Lord, and consociation with the Angels; and that the holiness of the Word resides in it.

T. 85². Hence there is in the Word a spiritual sense in which Divine truth is in light; and a natural sense in which Divine truth is in shade.

192. Every man who is unaware that there is a certain spiritual sense in the Word, as the soul is in the body, cannot judge about the Word except from the sense of the letter: when yet this is like a case which contains precious things, which are its spiritual sense. Ex.

193. The Word in its bosom is spiritual, because it has descended from Jehovah the Lord, and has passed through the angelic Heavens; and the Divine—which in itself is ineffable and imperceptible—was in the descent adapted to the perception of the Angels, and finally to that of men. Hence is the spiritual sense, which is within the natural sense, as the soul is in man, the thought of the understanding in speech, and the affection of the will in action. (Other more external comparisons used.)

206. The reason the knowledge of correspondences—through which is given the spiritual sense of the Word—has not been disclosed since those Ancient times, is that the Christians in the primitive Church were very simple men . . . And after their times, darkness spread over all the Christian world . . . and as all things of the Word have been applied to confirm this erroneous faith, the spiritual sense could not be disclosed; for, if it had been, they would have applied this sense also to that faith, and thereby would have profaned the holiness itself of the Word, and thus would have completely closed Heaven against themselves, and would have removed the Lord from the Church.

207. The reason the knowledge of correspondences—through which is given the spiritual sense of the Word—has been revealed at this day, is that now the Divine truths of the Church are coming forth into the light, and of these the spiritual sense of the Word consists; and, while these are in a man, the sense of the letter cannot be perverted.

209. Wonderful (phenomena seen in the Spiritual World) from the spiritual sense. Des. and Ex.

244. But the things in the spiritual sense lie hidden, and do not appear except to those who love truths because they are truths, and do goods because they are goods. Before these is manifested the treasure which is covered and guarded by the literal sense; and these are the things which essentially make the Church.

258. For the spiritual sense is opened while passing from man to Heaven; and all things of the spiritual sense are genuine truths; and therefore when a man is in falsities, and applies the sense of the letter to them, (it causes) truths to be dissipated.

294. (The spiritual sense of the commandments given; as distinguished from the celestial sense of them.) 298. 302, etc.

667. That without Knowledge of the spiritual sense of the Word, no one can know what the two Sacraments involve and effect. Ex. 669.

668. The spiritual sense has been revealed at this day, because the Christian Church, such as it is in itself, is now first commencing . . . 700.

669. The spiritual sense has been disclosed at this day for the New Church, for the sake of its use in the worship of the Lord.

698. Therefore he who knows correspondences can know the spiritual sense.

780. In order that the Lord may be constantly present, He has disclosed to me the spiritual sense of His Word, in which Divine truth is in its light, and in this light He is continually present. For His presence in the Word is solely through the spiritual sense. Through the light of this, He passes into the shade in which is the sense of the letter . . .

Ad. 23. The spiritual sense mentioned. 27. 289, Ex. 505, Ex.

D. 5964. Many Societies in Heaven have the Word written as to many things according to the spiritual sense; where, instead of the names of persons, kingdoms, and places, there are words which only their wiser ones understand. Ex.

E. 16. If (our Word) were written according to the spiritual sense, it would not be understood by the Angels; for they perceive all things of the Word according to correspondences.

117². The spiritual sense itself does not inflow from Heaven with man; but it inflows into his affection; and, through this, into the Knowledges which are with him; and thus enkindles his desire; and then, in proportion as he can see from the literal sense, in the same proportion he receives the genuine truths of the Church.

195⁴. All things in the Word are Divine through their having in them a spiritual sense, and through this sense communicating with Heaven . . .

283⁸. 'To walk upon the wings of the wind' = the spiritual sense which is in the literal.

294. Ends are what are meant in the spiritual sense.

376³. Why the spiritual sense has not been disclosed to Christians. Ex.

VOL. V.

— . Henceforth no one will be admitted into the spiritual sense, unless he is in genuine truths from good; and no one is in (these) unless at heart he acknowledges the Lord alone as the God of Heaven and earth.

— . Why the spiritual sense is now published with safety. Ex.

543^e. The spiritual sense of the Book of Job. Ex.

697. That which the Angels think, is the spiritual sense of the Word; for the spiritual sense is for the Angels, and also for men who are spiritual.

653¹⁰. The abstract sense is the genuine spiritual sense. 768¹. 1077.

778³. 'The Holy Spirit' = . . . the Word such as it is in the spiritual sense; for this is the Divine truth in Heaven.

—⁴. In the spiritual sense are genuine goods and genuine truths . . .

790⁸. Truths elevated into the spiritual mind are not in a natural form, but in a spiritual one. Truths in a spiritual form are such as are in the spiritual sense of the Word . . .

831^e. The spiritual Angels know nothing of the sense of the letter, but its spiritual sense, in which sense is the Word which is read by everyone there . . .

916². Truth in the spiritual sense as compared with that in the letter.

950². The reasons why the spiritual sense has now been disclosed are, 1. That the Churches have falsified all the sense of the letter . . . whereby Heaven has been closed; and, in order that Heaven may be opened, it has pleased the Lord to reveal the spiritual sense, in which sense is Divine truth such as there is in Heaven . . . 2. That the falsities which have inundated the Church . . . cannot be dispelled except through genuine truth opened in the Word . . . 3. That the New Church is conjoined with Heaven through the Divine truths of the Word which are in its spiritual sense.

De Verbo 5. On the spiritual sense of the Word. Gen.art. 7, Gen.art.

—^e. The doctrine of the Church is not to be confirmed by the purely spiritual sense; for by this sense there is no conjunction with Heaven and through Heaven with the Lord; but by the sense of the letter; for the Divine influx of the Lord through the Word is from primes through ultimates.

7². The spiritual or internal sense is nothing else than the sense of the letter evolved according to correspondences . . .

—⁷. For to interpret the Word as to its spiritual sense, from falsities of doctrine, closes Heaven . . . But to interpret the spiritual sense from truths of doctrine opens Heaven; because this sense is that in which are the Angels; and therefore a man through this sense thinks together with the Angels; and thus conjoins them with himself in his intellectual mind. Whereas if a man is in falsities of doctrine, and wants to explore the spiritual sense from some knowledge of correspondences, he falsifies it. It is otherwise if a man is previously in genuine truths: this sense accords with truths, and appears from truths, because this sense is in the light of Heaven . . . The spiritual sense of the Word is meant by the Lord's 'vesture,' which was without seam, and which the soldiers were not allowed to divide . . .

[De Verbo]8². As there is a marriage in the Word, there are in it a spiritual sense, and a celestial sense; a spiritual sense for those in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, who constitute all the lower Heavens; and a celestial sense for those in the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, who constitute all the higher Heavens. The Angels of the Spiritual Kingdom are in the truths of the Word; and the Angels of the Celestial Kingdom are in its goods; and therefore when a man is reading the Word holily, the spiritual Angels, according to the correspondences, perceive the truths therein, and the celestial Angels the goods; but the celestial Angels do not perceive the goods therein immediately from the man, but mediately through the spiritual Angels. Ex.

— . The marriage of the Lord with the Church also comes forth in the Heavens through the Word; for, in the spiritual sense, the Word treats of the Church, and in the celestial sense of the Lord; and therefore the spiritual Angels apply all things to the Church, and the celestial Angels to the Lord . . .

18³. The spiritual sense without the natural sense accompanying it does not communicate with Heaven. The reason is that the Lord inflows from primes through ultimates; thus from Himself into the natural sense of the Word, and thence calls forth or evolves its spiritual and celestial sense; and thus illustrating them He teaches and leads the Angels; and therefore the Lord is called 'the First and the Last.'

19. On the quality of the natural sense without the spiritual and celestial sense; and conversely.

20². In the spiritual sense without the sense of the letter there is no power; but in the sense of the letter in which is the spiritual sense; and therefore when Spirits bring anything forth from the sense of the letter, it effects manifest communication with Heaven; but not if they bring anything forth from the spiritual sense without the sense of the letter.

21. No one can see the spiritual sense except from the doctrine of genuine truth. From this the spiritual sense can be seen when there is some knowledge of correspondences. He who is in the doctrine of what is false cannot see anything of the spiritual sense: he draws the correspondences which he sees to the falsities of his doctrine; and therefore he is able still further to falsify the Word. And therefore the truly spiritual sense of the Word is from the Lord alone. This is why no one in the natural or the Spiritual World is allowed to investigate the spiritual sense of the Word from the sense of its letter unless he is entirely in the doctrine of Divine truth, and in illustration from the Lord. And therefore the spiritual sense can be seen from the doctrine of Divine truth confirmed from the sense of the letter; but doctrine can never be first seen from the spiritual sense. He thinks falsities who says to himself, I know many correspondences, I am able to know the true doctrine of the Divine Word; the spiritual sense will teach it me. This cannot be done; But let him say to himself, I know the doctrine of Divine truth; I now can see the spiritual sense, provided I know correspondences; but even he must be in illustration from the Lord, because the spiritual sense is the Divine truth itself in its light, and is meant by 'glory.'

Coro. li. In place of miracles there has been revealed the spiritual sense of the Word . . .

Inv. vii. The New Church has not been instaurated and established by miracles, but by the revelation of the spiritual sense, and also by . . .

44. The spiritual sense of the Word has been disclosed by the Lord through me, which was never revealed before since the Word was written with the sons of Israel; and this is the very Sanctuary of the Word: the Lord Himself is in it with His Divine; and He is in the natural sense with His Human. Of this, not one jot can be opened except by the Lord alone. This surpasses all the revelations which have existed hitherto since the creation of the world. Through this revelation there is an open communication of men with the Angels of Heaven; and a conjunction of the two worlds has been effected; for, when man is in the natural sense, the Angels are in the spiritual sense.

Docu. 238. The rulers of the Church who flock into that World after death, are first taught concerning the Sacred Scripture, that it contains a spiritual sense, which in the world was unknown to them; and they also told, that the Angels of Heaven are in that sense, while man is in the sense of the letter; and further, that a translation or change of the latter sense into the former is effected with man, while he reads the Word in a state of holiness: that there is then a kind of unfolding or unswathing, like the breaking of the shell enclosing an almond; whereupon the shell is dispersed, and the naked almond passes into Heaven, and is received by the Angels . . .

Spiritual Truth. Verum spirituale.

A. 425. 'Silver' = spiritual truth.

9028. Something of elevation is involved, here, of spiritual truth to accordance with scientific truth.

9029. It here treats of those who, from some spiritual truth—which is the truth of the doctrine of faith of the Church from the Word—regard some scientific truth—which is truth from the sense of the letter of the Word—and, because no accordance appears, therefore the spiritual truth is weakened and for some time separated; but is not denied or exterminated. 9032, Examp. 9033.

9030. The indemnification of the spiritual truth which has been weakened through scientific truth. Sig.

— . That truth is called spiritual truth, which, together with good, makes the life of the internal man . . . This truth is from the internal sense of the Word; thus also from the genuine doctrine of faith of the Church.

9031. That the restoration of spiritual truth is effected by a right interpretation of scientific truth, or of the literal sense of the Word. Sig.

9033. It now treats of the weakening of scientific truth, which is that of the literal sense, by spiritual truth, which is that of the doctrine of faith.

9034³. How the truth of the literal sense serves for the formation of spiritual truths. Ex. —⁴.

— . The truths which are thus conjoined (with good) in the internal man are called spiritual truths; and the good with which the truths have been conjoined is called spiritual good. This good, formed through the truths, is what makes the spiritual life of man. The truths themselves there, are called truths of faith; and the good, the good of charity. The good into which truths have been thus implanted is the Church with man.

9053. If they should have injured or extinguished anything of the power of spiritual truth. Sig. and Ex.

Spiritual World. Mundus Spiritualis.

See under ANGEL, EVIL SPIRIT, HEAVEN, HELL, SPIRIT, SUN, and WORLD OF SPIRITS.

A. 299S. Man does not believe that he has any connection with the Spiritual World . . .

3908. All causes in the natural world come forth from a cause in the Spiritual World . . .

3913³. The spiritual man regards himself and the world only in so far as conduces to promote uses in the Spiritual World.

4053. The internal man is in the Spiritual World ; and the external in the natural.

4321. (What must be) the arcana which come forth in the sphere which is above nature, that is, in the Spiritual World.

4524. As all things in the world exist and subsist from things prior to themselves, it follows that they come forth and subsist from a World which is above nature, which is called the Spiritual World ; and, as there must be a continual connection with that World, in order that they may subsist, it follows that the more pure or interior things in nature, consequently in man, are thence.

—^e. (Thus) all things in the Spiritual World correspond to the Lord ; and consequently so do all things in man ; for he is a little Spiritual World . . .

4570². Thus the Natural communicates . . . with the Rational through things analogical and analytical ; thus with those things which are of the Spiritual World.

— . There is also an intermediate, which communicates with both . . . through the external, with the things in the natural world ; and through the internal, with those in the Spiritual World. (Rep. by Jacob.)

4901^e. The Church is the Spiritual World or Kingdom of the Lord on the Earth.

4946. They thereby shut out from themselves innumerable things which might have inflowed from the Spiritual World, if they had acknowledged interior things . . .

5060. The influx of the Societies is not perceived, except by those who have their interiors opened, and thence have received a perceptible communication with the Spiritual World.

5084³. Everything unconnected with what is prior to itself falls to nothing ; (thus) all things subsist, as they had [originally] come forth, through influx from the Spiritual World ; that is, through the Spiritual World from the Divine.

5116². That such things come forth in the vegetable kingdom, is from the influx of the Spiritual World . . .

—⁴. If those who attribute all things to nature . . .

would consider these things, they might also acknowledge, that each and all things in nature represent such things as are in the Spiritual World, consequently, such as are in the Lord's Kingdom, where the Divine of the Lord is proximately represented. Hence it has been said that there is an influx from the Spiritual World ; but it is meant that there is an influx through the Spiritual World from the Divine of the Lord.

5173². That the purifications of the blood, etc. correspond to such things in the Spiritual World, must appear strange . . . Yet the fact is that in each and all things in nature . . . the intrinsic agent is from the Spiritual World ; (otherwise) nothing whatever in the natural world would act as cause and effect, consequently, nothing would produce anything. That which is from the Spiritual World in natural things, is called a force implanted from the first creation ; but it is an endeavour-conatus, on the ceasing of which action or motion ceases. Hence it is that the universal visible world is a theatre representative of the Spiritual World.

5216. In the Spiritual World, and consequently in the spiritual sense, there is no notion of time.

5223^e. Magic was a perversion . . . of such things as are of order in the Spiritual World.

5225. In the Spiritual World, or in Heaven, not persons, but Things, come under the mental view . . . 5253², Ex.

5253². For in the Spiritual World there is neither time, nor space.

5373³. Hence it is that the Spiritual World is terminated in the Natural of man ; in which the things of the Spiritual World are representatively presented.

5711. On the correspondence of diseases with the Spiritual World. Gen.art.

— . All things with man have a correspondence with the Spiritual World ; for whatever in universal nature has no correspondence with the Spiritual World, does not come into existence, for it has no cause by virtue of which it may come forth, consequently from which it may subsist. The things in nature are nothing but effects ; their causes are in the Spiritual World ; and in the interior Heaven are the causes of these causes, which are ends. Ex. 7112².

5712. By the Spiritual World, in the universal sense, is meant both Heaven and Hell ; for, when man dies, he passes from the natural world into the Spiritual World.

5800. For in the Spiritual World, or in Heaven, no one has need to ask another what he thinks about such things as belong to his affection ; because the one perceives the thought of the other . . .

5945². For the Spiritual World has its feet and soles in the natural one.

6055. The internal man is in the Spiritual World, and the external in the natural.

6057³. (Thus) in man is the Spiritual World conjoined with the natural world ; consequently, with him the Spiritual World inflows into the natural world so vividly that he apperceives it provided he attends to it . . .

[A.] 6063². For the Natural of man to live there must be an influx from the Lord, not only immediately from Him, but also mediately through the Spiritual World; consequently with man in his internal; for this is in the Spiritual World.

6232. For all things in the Spiritual World . . . can be multiplied and increased indefinitely.

—³. This variety is still more unlimited in the things true and good which are of the Spiritual World; because one thing in the natural world corresponds to thousands and thousands in the Spiritual World . . .

6307. See INFLUX, here. 6319^e.

6319^e. For the spirit of man is in the Spiritual World, and his body in the natural world.

6494². Thus that which is attributed to fortune, even in games, is from the Spiritual World.

6516³. Writings in the Spiritual World.

6574^e. In the universal Spiritual World there reigns an end which proceeds from the Lord, which is that nothing whatever shall come into existence except that good may come out of it.

7089². And the things of the Spiritual World transcend those of the natural world as non-material things do those which are material.

7290. For correspondences, representatives, and significatives conjoin the natural world with the Spiritual World. Hence so many miracles were performed with that nation.

—⁴. Still less would miracles effect at this day, when it is not acknowledged that anything is from the Spiritual World . . .

7381³. For the natural world is distinguished from the Spiritual World by time and space. The reason there are time and space in the natural world, and, instead of them, states, in the Spiritual World, is that in the natural world, the sun, by its apparent revolutions, appears to make days and years . . . Whereas in the Spiritual World, the Sun of Heaven . . . makes no revolutions . . .

8211². From these states in Heaven, there come forth states of light and heat, and also of heat and cold, on earth . . . for whatever comes into existence in the natural world derives its origin and cause from the things which come into existence in the Spiritual World . . . The proximate natural causes of these things have been created according to those things in the Spiritual World, so as by their prior causes [to become] the efficient causes of the posterior causes which come forth in the natural world; for nothing is ever possible in the natural world—which is in order—which does not derive its cause and origin from the Spiritual World; that is, through the Spiritual World from the Divine.

8364³. For everything belonging to the life of man is from the Spiritual World; and therefore if his spiritual life is sick, the evil is derived thence into his natural life, which, there, becomes disease.

10185. For the natural world comes into existence and subsists from the Spiritual World. When the Spiritual World is mentioned, there is meant the Divine of the Lord which is there.

—⁴. Hence all things in nature relate to such things as are in the Spiritual World.

10199². There is no influx from the natural world into the Spiritual World; but from the Spiritual World into the natural one. The interiors of man, which belong to his understanding and will, are in the Spiritual World; and his externals, which belong to the senses of his body, are in the natural world.

H. 76. The eye is so gross that it cannot see the smaller things of nature . . . still less those which are above the sphere of nature, as are all things in the Spiritual World. Yet these things are seen by man when he is withdrawn from the sight of the body, and the sight of his spirit is opened . . .

88. Without a perception of what correspondence is, nothing can be known in the light about the Spiritual World; nor about its influx into the natural one.

89. The whole natural world corresponds to the Spiritual World; not only the natural world in general, but also in all its particulars; and therefore whatever in the natural world comes into existence from the Spiritual World, is called a correspondent. It is to be known that the natural world comes into existence and subsists from the Spiritual World, exactly as an effect does from its efficient cause. All that extense is called the natural world which is under the sun, and receives heat and light from it; and to this world belong all things which subsist thence. But the Spiritual World is Heaven, and to that World belong all things which are in the Heavens. 106. 303².

90. As man is a Heaven and a world in the least form, there are with him a Spiritual World, and a natural world. The interior things which are of his mind, and which relate to the understanding and will, make his Spiritual World; and the exterior things which are of his body, and which relate to its senses and actions, make his natural world . . .

108⁴. These [instincts] are from the Spiritual World.

112². Man is that through which the natural world is conjoined with the Spiritual World. Ex.

247. For there is such a conjunction between the Spiritual and the natural World with man, that they are as it were a one.

249². For religious things, when a man inheres in them (alone) . . . enter the Spiritual World, and move the Spirits who are there.

461³. As the natural objects which are in the memory cannot be reproduced in the Spiritual World, they are quiescent . . .

462. But still the difference between the life of man in the Spiritual World, and his life in the natural world, is great . . . Those who are in Heaven sensate much more exquisitely. Ex.

567². Natural heat (merely) disposes their bodies to receive the heat which inflows with them from the Spiritual World. For the Spiritual World inflows into the natural one, as a cause into an effect.

—³. He who believes that anything comes forth in the natural world without the influx of the Spiritual World, is mistaken. Ex.

571^e. All things which appear in the Spiritual World, appear according to correspondences.

582. In the Spiritual World—that is, in the World where are Spirits and Angels—like things appear to those in the natural world—or that where men are—so like them that as to their external face there is no difference. There appear there plains, mountains, hills, and rocks, with valleys between them; and also waters, and many other things which are on Earth. But all those things are from a spiritual origin, and therefore they appear before the eyes of Spirits and Angels, and not before the eyes of men. Ex.

—². That the Spiritual World is such, cannot be comprehended by a natural man . . .

— . As there is such a likeness between the Spiritual World and the natural world, man after death scarcely knows otherwise than that he is in the world where he was born; for which reason they call death a mere translation from one world into another like one.

N. 36. Man has been so created that he may be in the Spiritual World and in the natural world at the same time. The Spiritual World is where Angels are; and the natural world is where men are. (Therefore) man has been given an internal, by which he is in the Spiritual World; and an external, by which he is in the natural world. Fully ex.

47. That there exists with man a descent from the Spiritual World into the natural one. Refs.

J. 9³. There is such a connection from primes to ultimates, that, regarded together, they constitute a one, in which the prior cannot be separated from the posterior, exactly as the cause cannot be separated from its effect, thus not the Spiritual World from the natural world; nor the latter from the former . . .

27. As all who will be born henceforth will also come into the Spiritual World, that World is so great and of such a character, that the natural world, in which are men on earth, cannot be compared to it. Gen.art.

—². Therefore, when man passes into the Spiritual World, it is like passing from a village into a great City.

—³. Not only do all things exist there which exist in the natural world, but innumerable things besides which are never seen in the natural world, nor can be presented to the sight; for there spiritual things are effigied in all their characteristic quality in an appearance as it were natural, each one with an infinite variety; for what is spiritual so far surpasses what is natural, that there are few things which can be produced to natural sense; for the natural sense does not apprehend one thing out of thousands which the spiritual mind apprehends; and all things which are of the spiritual mind are also presented in forms before their sight. Hence it is that the Spiritual World cannot be described in regard to its magnificent and its astounding features.

56⁷. For, in the Spiritual World, equally as in the natural world, there are precious things; and in the former far more.

C. J. 23^e. For all the visible things of the Spiritual World are correspondences of the affections of the Spirits and Angels.

32. On the Spiritual World. Title.

34. When the eyes of the spirit are opened, the things in the Spiritual World appear equally as clearly as do those in the natural world.

36. The difference between a man in the natural world and a man in the Spiritual World, is that the latter is clothed with a spiritual body, but the former with a natural body; and a spiritual man sees a spiritual man equally as clearly as a natural man sees a natural man. (Continued under SEE.)

37. In the Spiritual World there are lands equally as in the natural world; there are hills and mountains, and plains and valleys; also springs and rivers, and lakes and seas. There are paradises and gardens, and groves and woods. There are palaces and houses; and writings and books. There are employments and tradings; and there are precious stones, gold, and silver. In a word, there are each and all things which there are in the natural world; and, in the Heavens, infinitely more perfect. F.63. T.794.

38. But the difference, in general, is this: that all things which are in the Spiritual World are spiritual, from their origin, and hence are spiritual as to their essence, being from a Sun there which is pure love; and that all things which are in the natural world are natural from their origin, and hence are natural as to their essence, being from a sun there which is pure fire. F.63.

82. The Jews less than others know that they are in the Spiritual World . . .

L. 62^e. By the Spiritual World is meant the World where Angels and Spirits dwell; and by the natural world is meant the world where men dwell.

F. 63². All things which appear in the Spiritual World are correspondences. This is why those in the affection of good and truth . . . dwell in magnificent palaces, around which are paradises full of trees, which correspond; and, around these, fields, and plains, in which lie flocks, which are appearances.

W. 7³. Therefore, in the Spiritual World, where Spirits and Angels are, there appear spaces like those on earth; but still they are not spaces, but appearances. (Continued under SPACE.)

52². In the Spiritual World are all things which exist in the natural world in its three kingdoms; and they are correspondences of the affections and thoughts . . . and also of the ultimates of life, of those who are there . . . 63.

66. The degrees in the Spiritual World. See DEGREE, here. 67. 185. 202.

73². In the Spiritual World the progressions of life in like manner appear in time; for they live with one another as men do . . . but time is not distinguished there into times and seasons; for their Sun is constantly in the east . . .

74. In progressions through spaces in the Spiritual World, distances make one with the progressions of time. . . Thus the ways there are actually shortened in accordance with the desires . . . and are also lengthened.

[W.] 83. That the Divine love and the Divine wisdom appear in the Spiritual World as a sun. Gen.art.

— . There are two worlds, the spiritual, and the natural ; and the Spiritual World does not derive anything from the natural world, nor the natural world from the Spiritual World : they are perfectly distinct, and communicate only through correspondences. Examp.

84. As these two worlds are so distinct, it may be seen very clearly, that the Spiritual World is under a different Sun from the natural world. For in the Spiritual World there are heat and light equally as in the natural world ; but the heat and light there are spiritual : and spiritual heat is the good of charity, and spiritual light is the truth of faith.

85. As the Spiritual World has been so deeply hidden . . . it has pleased the Lord to open the sight of my spirit, in order that I might see the things in that World just as they see those in the natural world, and then describe that World, which has been done in the work on Heaven and Hell.

88. As there is such a difference between the Spiritual and the Natural, therefore not a whit from the sun of the natural world can pass into the Spiritual World ; that is, not a whit of its light and heat, nor of any object on the Earth ; the light of the natural world is thick darkness there, and its heat is death.

90^o. When a man dies he passes completely out of the world of nature . . . and enters into a World in which there is nothing of nature ; and in that World he lives so separated from nature that there is not any communication by continuity, that is, as between purer and grosser ; but as between prior and posterior ; between which no communication is possible except through correspondences.

91. As there is such a difference between the heat and light of the (Spiritual and of the natural World), it is evident whence it is that those who are in the one world cannot see those in the other.

92. Hence many have imagined the abodes of Spirits and Angels in the ether ; and some in the stars ; thus within nature . . . when yet Angels and Spirits are entirely above or beyond nature, and are in their own World, which is under another Sun. And as, in that World, spaces are appearances, it cannot be said that they are in the ether, or in the stars ; for they are together with man, conjoined with the affection and thought of his spirit . . . And therefore the Spiritual World is where man is, and is by no means remote from him. In a word, every man, as to the interiors of his mind, is in that World, in the midst of the Spirits and Angels there ; and he thinks from the light of it, and loves from the heat of it.

100. See SPIRITUAL, here.

101. It is the same (as to the relative preponderance of heat and light) in the Spiritual World ; but the Earth there does not revolve and rotate ; but the Angels turn themselves to the Lord more, or less . . .

119^o. This is why the Spiritual World is here treated of first ; for all causes are there. 134^o. 154^o.

153. The Spiritual World is above the natural sun, and the natural world below it.

163. The universe in general is distinguished into two worlds, the spiritual, and the natural. In the Spiritual World are Angels and Spirits ; in the natural world are men. As to their outward aspect, these two worlds are exactly alike, so much alike that they cannot be distinguished ; but as to their internal aspect they are altogether unlike. The men themselves in the Spiritual World . . . are spiritual, and (therefore) they think and speak spiritually ; whereas the men in the natural world are natural, and therefore think and speak naturally ; and spiritual thought and speech have nothing in common with natural thought and speech. From this it is evident that these two worlds are entirely distinct from each other, inasmuch that in no way can they be together. 173.

173. That in the Spiritual World there are atmospheres, waters, and lands, just as in the natural world ; but that the former are spiritual, and the latter natural. Gen.art.

201. See DEGREE, here. 202.

251. The natural man, as to his understanding and will, is like the natural world . . . and the spiritual man . . . is like the Spiritual World, and may also be called that World, or Heaven.

315. The heat, light, and atmospheres of the natural world contribute nothing to this image of creation (in plants) ; but only those of the Sun of the Spiritual World. Ex.

321. In external appearance, the Spiritual World is exactly like the natural world. There appear there lands, mountains, hills, valleys, plains, fields, lakes, rivers, springs, as in the natural world ; thus all things which are of the mineral kingdom. There also appear paradises, gardens, groves, forests, in which there are trees and shrubs of every kind, with fruits and seeds ; and also plants, flowers, herbs, and grasses ; thus all things which are of the vegetable kingdom. There appear animals, birds, and fishes of every kind ; thus all things which are of the animal kingdom. (Thus) the universal Spiritual World is exactly like the universal natural world, with the sole difference, that the things which are there are not fixed and stated as are those in the natural world ; because there is not anything natural there ; but everything is spiritual.

322. That the universe of that World relates in an image to man, may be evident from the fact that all the things just mentioned appear and come into existence around an Angel, and around the angelic Societies, just as if they were produced or created from them ; for they remain around them, and do not go away ; (yet) when the Angel goes away, or when the Society passes to somewhere else, they no longer appear ; and also when other Angels come into their place, the aspect of all things around them is changed. Des. and Ex.

339. Nothing whatever comes forth in the natural world which does not derive its cause and derivative origin from the Spiritual World.

— . By the Spiritual World are meant both Heaven and Hell.

340. That there is a continual influx from the Spiritual World into the natural one. Ex.

— . He who does not know that there is a Spiritual World, and that it is distinct from the natural world as are the prior and the posterior, or as the cause and the thing caused, cannot know anything about this influx ; which is the reason why (such) have derived the origin of plants and animals from nature . . .

—². As it is known that there is a Spiritual World, and that the Spiritual is from the Sun where the Lord is . . . and that it drives nature to act, as a living thing drives a dead one ; and also that there are like things in that World to those which are in the natural world, it can be seen that plants and animals have come into existence from no other source than through that World from the Lord, and that they perpetually come into existence through that World ; and thus that there is a continual influx from the Spiritual World into the natural one. See 344.

343^e. For the Spiritual World is not in space ; but is where there is a correspondent affection.

349. That the Divine, from itself, and through the Spiritual World, produces all things. Gen.art.

P. 29. All conjunction in the Spiritual World is effected by means of looking-inspectionem.

74^e. That (beasts) are so carried along is not from the natural world, but from the Spiritual one ; for there is not possible anything in the natural world which is disconnected from the Spiritual World ; every cause which performs an effect is thence.

101³. In the Spiritual World . . . it is not asked, What has your belief been ? but, What has your life been ? For it is known that such as is the life of anyone, such is his doctrine.

251⁴. For all things which take place in the natural world (such as wars) correspond to spiritual things in the Spiritual World ; and all spiritual things concern the Church.

326. In the Spiritual World there is no distance, but only an appearance of it.

R. 36⁵. When the sight of a man's spirit is opened, the things in the Spiritual World appear as clearly as do those in the natural world before the sight of the body.

659. The last boundary of the Spiritual World, where were collected those in whom there was religion and the derivative worship, but not the good of life. Sig. and Ex.

937². Know, that in the Spiritual World, Knowledge and acknowledgement effect all presence ; and the affection of love all conjunction. For spaces there are nothing but appearances according to the similarity of minds. And therefore when anyone knows another, either by reputation, or (in any other way) and thinks of him from the idea of that Knowledge, he becomes present with him . . . and if one loves another he dwells with him in the same Society ; and, if intimately, in the same house. This is the state of all in the whole Spiritual World. Ex.

M. 26. The scenery and objects of the Spiritual World as described in the Word. Ill.

52. For with those who are in the Spiritual World the third principle, which is the Natural, is lacking.

207⁵. (The astonishment of the new-comers on seeing books in the Spiritual World.) There is a fulness of all things there. All things there are substantial, and not material . . . Hence all things which are in the natural world exist there in their perfection. . . The new-comers were then taken to the homes of the scribes, who were writing the copies . . . and were afterwards taken to the museums, schools, and colleges . . . They were afterwards led about the city to see the directors, administrators, and their officials ; and by these were taken to see the wonderful works which are done by the artificers in a spiritual manner.

328². For the Spiritual World is not in space and time, as is the natural world, but is in the appearance of these two things.

380¹¹. The expanse of the centre of life is called the Spiritual World, which subsists from its own Sun ; and the expanse of nature is called the natural world, which subsists from its own sun. . . (The former) is not an extense ; but still is in the extense of the natural sun ; and is with the living subjects there according to the receptions ; and the receptions are according to the forms. T.35¹¹.

430². The reason the delights of loves are turned into (objects and odours) is that all things which come forth in the Spiritual World are correspondences. Into these are turned the internals of their minds when they pass out and become external before their senses.

477³. Such as is the mind, so does a man in the Spiritual World see the objects. (Quoted under SEE, here.)

I. 3². By (this opening of the sight of my spirit) it has become evident to me that there are two worlds, and these distinct from each other ; one, in which all things are spiritual, and which is thence called the Spiritual World ; and another in which all things are natural, and which is thence called the natural world ; and that Spirits and Angels live in their own World, and men in theirs ; and also that by death every man migrates from his own world into the other one, and lives therein to eternity. T.360.

—^e. The Spiritual World inflows into the natural world, and actuates it in every single thing which belongs to it ; both with men and with beasts ; and also effects vegetation in trees and plants.

4. That the Spiritual World has come into existence and subsists from its own Sun ; and the natural world from its. Ex.

8⁵. The human soul . . . receives influx immediately from God ; but the human mind, being a lower spiritual substance, receives influx from God mediately through the Spiritual World ; and the body . . . through the natural world.

16. That there are three degrees in the Spiritual World, and three degrees in the natural world . . . according to which all influx is effected. Gen.art.

B. 85. In the Spiritual World appear all things which appear in the natural world. Enum. E.417.

T. 4. The twelve apostles sent out into the universal Spiritual World. 108^e. 791.

29. In the Spiritual World there are no spaces and times actually, but there are apparently.⁴

— . But in the Spiritual World there are no material spaces, or times which correspond with them; but still there are appearances of them, which appearances are according to the differences of the states in which are the minds of the Spirits and Angels there . . . But these appearances are real, because constant according to their states.

—². If there were no spaces and times there, that whole World could be drawn through the eye of a needle, or concentrated on the point of a hair. This would be possible if there were no substantial extense there; but, as there is one there, the Angels dwell as discretely and distinctly from each other as men do, and even more so. But the times there are not distinguished into days, weeks, months, and years, because the Sun . . . remains stationary in the east . . .

31^e. The two monstrous statues which appear at one extremity of the Spiritual World.

56. In the Spiritual World no one can do anything contrary to his own will . . .

66. All things which proceed from the Sun of the Spiritual World . . . relate to a man; and hence all things which come forth in that World conspire to the human form, and in their inmosts present it; whence all the objects which are presented to the eyes there, are representatives of man. There appear there animals of every kind; and these are likenesses of the affections of love and of the derivative thoughts of the Angels. In like manner the groves, flower-gardens, and lawns there . . . and, when their inmost sight is opened, they recognize their own image in these things. Ex.

71². God created man's rational mind according to the order of the whole Spiritual World; and his body according to the order of the whole natural world . . .

79⁷. The priest said, You do not know that . . . you are in another world, which is called the Spiritual World. Ex. 80⁴. 160⁷.

91. See MIRACLE, here.

118. Without this Redemption . . . man could not have been saved; because the Spiritual World has such a connection with the natural world that they cannot be separated. (The nature of this connection ex.)

137⁸. For the Spiritual World enters into the natural world, and perceives the thoughts of the men there; but not the converse.

185. In the Spiritual World there are climates and zones equally as in the natural world: there is nothing in the latter which there is not in the former; but they differ in their origin. Ex.

209. In the Spiritual World wonderful things appear from the Word, because all things there are spiritual. Des.

—⁵. In the Spiritual World there are like things to those on earth, but everything there is from a spiritual origin; and so there are gold and silver, and precious stones of every kind; and the spiritual origin of these is the sense of the letter of the Word.

238^e. Such a correspondence is from creation, to the end that . . . in general, the Spiritual World and the natural world may make a one; and that the Lord may conjoin Himself with both at once.

335⁶. Through (the brains of all animals) the Spiritual World inflows into the senses of their bodies immediately, and, through them, determines their actions . . . This influx from the Spiritual World is what is called instinct . . .

360². This is effected in the degree in which man advances from the natural world into the Spiritual World; and he does this in proportion as he believes in the Lord.

475². The Spiritual World consists of Heaven and Hell. Heaven is over head; and Hell is beneath the feet there, (that is to say) beneath the lands of that World, which are from a spiritual origin, and are therefore not in an extense, but in the appearance of an extense. Between Heaven and Hell there is a great interspace, which to those who are there appears like a complete world. (Continued under WORLD OF SPIRITS.)

678. By baptism all are inserted among Christians in the Spiritual World; because all peoples and nations in that World are distinct from each other according to their religious things: Christians are in the middle; Mohammedans around them; the idolaters of various kinds are beyond these; and the Jews are at the sides.

—². In the Spiritual World—by which we mean both Heaven and Hell—all things are most distinctly ordained in general and in every part . . . On the distinct ordination there, depends the conservation of the whole universe . . .

695⁵. The wonders which come forth from the influx of the Spiritual World into the natural; as that caterpillars become butterflies, etc.

—⁶. This they opine merely because they are ignorant that there is any Spiritual World; and that this, from within, operates and actuates each and all things which come forth and are formed in the world of nature; and that it operates as the human mind does in the senses and movements of the body; and that all the things of nature are like coats, sheaths, and body clothes—indusia—which engird spiritual things, and proximately produce the effects which correspond to the end of the Creator.

794². But the difference (between the objects in the Spiritual World and those in the natural) is that all things which are seen in the Spiritual World are created by the Lord in a moment—such as the houses, paradises, food, and all other things—and that they are created according to the correspondence with the interiors of the Angels and Spirits . . . whereas all things which are seen in the natural world come forth and grow from seed.

798. At first, Calvin did not know that he was in the Spiritual World. Ex.

D. 4437. (The reality of the Spiritual World shown and described in a dream.)

4585. For nothing ever comes forth with man except from a cause from the Spiritual World. 4586.

4602. An influx from the Spiritual World into the natural world from which the latter subsists, as it [originally] came into existence.

4603. Man has been created a type of both worlds; his interiors a type of the Spiritual World, and his exteriors a type of the natural world, to the end that in him they might be conjoined. Hence it is that his natural world, or microcosm, does not live at all except through influx from the Spiritual World; and that there is a continual endeavour—conatus—with everyone that both these worlds may be conjoined in him.

4607. On this account it has been so provided that the Divine should pass through man from the Spiritual World into the natural world, and should be terminated in the ultimate of nature, namely, in the Corporeal; and that thus through man there should be a connection of the Spiritual World with the natural world; so that thus through man universal nature should attribute the glory to the Lord the Creator.

5956. On their skill in calculating in the Spiritual World.—They have business there, and servants, who render an account, and in these they enter the things they sell and buy, in books as (here); and, when they look into them, they reckon them up and examine them so skilfully, that what men would do in days or weeks, they do in a quarter of an hour. They at once see where there is an error, a deception, or an omission . . .

5940. That all things from the Spiritual World are affections which are of love.

5999. On libraries in the Spiritual World. (See LIBRARY, here.)

6063. On writings and speech in the Spiritual World. (See under WRITE, and SPEAK.)

6088. On food in the Spiritual World. (See FOOD—cibus, here.)

6108. A remarkable change in the Spiritual World. Des.

E. 304². For it is in the Spiritual World exactly as it is in the natural world; namely, as to the lands, hills, and mountains; and in appearance the likeness is so great that there is no difference whatever; and therefore men after death scarcely know that they are still living on earth; and, when an opportunity is afforded them to look into our Earth, they see nothing dissimilar. 342⁴.

395. For all things which come forth in the Spiritual World, and appear before their eyes, come forth from the light and heat which proceed from the Lord as a Sun. From this origin have been created and formed not only all things in the Spiritual World, but also all things in the natural world; for the natural world comes into existence and subsists through the Spiritual World from the Lord.

417. By 'the four corners of the earth' is signified the universal Spiritual World; for there are lands there equally as in our Earth; (with) mountains, hills, rocks, plains, valleys, and many other things.

— . As the aspect of a land in the Spiritual World is exactly like the aspect of the Church with the spirits and Angels there, the aspect is the most beautiful where the Angels of the higher Heavens dwell; it is beautiful also where the Angels of the lower Heavens dwell; and is unbeautiful where evil Spirits dwell. Des.

—². By 'the four Angels standing in the four corners' is signified the Divine proceeding from the Lord into the universal Spiritual World; for that universal World is made up of the four quarters, east, west, south, and north; for so is that World divided. Ex. 422⁷.

420. 'Upon the earth, the sea, and every tree' = everywhere in the Spiritual World even to its ultimates . . . 'The earth' = the universal Spiritual World, consequently all the Angels and Spirits there . . . for in the Spiritual World there are equally lands, mountains, hills, plains, valleys, and also seas.

575³. All the things which appear really in the Spiritual World are correspondences . . .

— . But in the Spiritual World there are also appearances which are not correspondences, and which are produced from Spirits by phantasies. Des.

—⁴. (Such) cannot apprehend that anything exists in the Spiritual World like the objects in the natural world; namely that there can appear there paradises, ornamental groves, lawns, palaces, houses. They call these things phantasies, although they know that similar things were seen by the prophets . . . The reason they do not believe such things to exist in the Spiritual World is that they suppose everything which they do not see with their eyes, or perceive with some bodily sense, to be nothing.

—^e. When yet the fact is that the Divine continually inflows through the Spiritual World into the natural; and produces such things; and that nature has been created in order to serve for the clothing of those things which proceed and inflow from the Spiritual World. 726⁴.

682². For there is such a connection of the higher and lower things in the Spiritual World, that, in proportion as the lower things are in order, the higher ones are so . . .

726². As God has created the natural worlds, so also has He created the Spiritual Worlds above them, and perpetually infills the latter with Angels and Spirits . . .

731². For the spaces, places, and distances in the Spiritual World are, in their origin, states of life. They indeed appear exactly as in this world; but differ in this: that the quality of everyone is known from the place where he dwells . . .

757². This is done first in the Spiritual World, and afterwards in the natural; for in such things as are of Heaven and the Church the two worlds act as a one; for a man who is living in the natural world cannot think differently about spiritual things from the Angels and Spirits who are with him. Ex.

759³. As to his thoughts and affections, consequently as to his spirit, every man is in the Spiritual World . . .

1092⁵. In a word, man has his head in the Spiritual World, as he has his body in the natural world. By his head is meant his mind . . . and by his body, his senses . . .

[E.] 1094². The reason man becomes an inhabitant there, is that in the Spiritual World is his very dwelling place, and, so to speak, his country; for there he will live to eternity, after he has lived a few years in the natural world.

1206³. For there is a Spiritual World: that world is prior, interior, and superior to the natural world; and therefore everything of the Spiritual World is a cause, and everything of the natural world is an effect. One thing does indeed come progressively into existence from another in the natural world also; but this through causes from the Spiritual World; for, where there is the cause of an effect, there also is the cause of an efficient effect . . .

1207. For the Spiritual World, in which are the Heavens and the Hells, cannot be separated from the natural world: thus Angels and Spirits cannot be separated from men; for they are consociated and conjoined; for as to the thoughts of his understanding and the affections of his will, every man is in the Spiritual World, in the Societies there; thus is together with the Angels of Heaven on the one side, and with the Spirits of Hell on the other.

—⁴. That nature has been created in order that the Spiritual may be terminated in it, follows from (the fact) that the things in the Spiritual World are causes, and those in the natural effects. Ex.

1212^e. Time and space do not exist in the Spiritual World as things proper to it; for they are the appearances there of the state of their lives; and hence it is that from the earths there—which are from a spiritual origin—plants are born in a moment, and also disappear in a moment, which, however, happens only when the Angels depart; for, when they do not depart, they are permanent.

1218². That in the natural world there are spaces and times; and that in the Spiritual World there are appearances. Ex.

— . Pure love, from which all things in the Spiritual World come into existence immediately, is immaterial; whereas pure fire, through which all things in the natural world come mediately into existence, is material; and hence it is that all things which come into existence in the Spiritual World are spiritual from their origin; and all things which come into existence in the natural world are material from their secondary origin; and material things are in themselves fixed, stated, and measurable. Ex. . . Whereas in the Spiritual World all things are as it were fixed, as it were stated, and as it were measurable; but still, in themselves, are not so; for they come into existence according to the states of the Angels, and are permanent according thereto, so that the states themselves and these things make a one; and therefore the things are varied just as their states are varied. But this takes place more especially in the World of Spirits . . . and not so much in Heaven or Hell . . .

—³. Hence a man after death does not at all know . . . that he has migrated from the world of his body into the World of his spirit. I have heard many saying that they have not died, and that they cannot understand how anything of their body had been rejected in the grave; and this for the reason that all things there are similar. They do not know that the things they see and feel there are not material, but substantial from a spiritual origin; and that nevertheless they are real, being from the same origin as all things of the world, with the sole difference, that something accessory, like a clothing, has been given the things in the natural world from the sun of that world, causing them to be material, fixed, stated, and measurable. But still I can asseverate that the things in the Spiritual World are more real than those in the natural world; for the deadness which accedes to the Spiritual in nature does not make reality, but lessens it.

1220³. A naturalist, after death, calls all things natural which he sees in the Spiritual World, because they are alike.

Ath. 191. The proceeding Divine is what is extended in the universe . . . and hence is the inmost of the Spiritual World . . .

J. (Post.) 236^e. Such are carried to the boundaries of the Spiritual World of our Earth, where there appears a lake fuming with fire . . .

313. See ATMOSPHERE, here. 314.

322, 323. In a word, there are in the Spiritual World not only things like those in the natural world, but also innumerable more, and each with an infinity and in a harmony from which there breathes forth delight. Enum. But all the things here enumerated are . . . spiritual; and yet Spirits know no otherwise than that they are material; for when a spiritual man touches what is spiritual, or tastes what is spiritual, it is exactly as when what is material touches or tastes what is material. . . I have shown this (to Spirits who believed that the things they saw there were material) by the houses, in that they are formed in a moment, and dissipated in a moment; by the garments, in that they are put on, new ones given, and the garments changed, in a moment; by the dinners and suppers, in that the tables, with the food on them, come into existence in a moment, and are afterwards dissipated in a moment; and by the fact that the Spirits themselves can be carried into the houses through the walls. . . There was a certain person, known to me, with whom I spoke while his body was being buried, (which) I told him. He replied that he did not know what of him was being buried, because he had everything with him: a like body as before, and all other things alike. For he, like others, knew no otherwise than that he was material, when yet he was spiritual.

D. Love xix². In the Spiritual World, the interior act of the will appears; for there all act according to their loves . . .

D. Wis. ii⁴. In the Spiritual World, there is what is substantial in place of what is natural.

vii. 5². For, in the Spiritual World, the objects are exactly like those in the natural world: there are lands, fields, gardens, and forests; houses, and chambers in them, which contain all things of use; there are, besides, garments for women and for men, such as there are in the world; there are tables, foods, drinks, such as there are in the world; there are animals also, both tame and hurtful; consequently there are spaces and times; and numbers, and measures. All these things are so like those in the world that the difference cannot at all be seen with the eyes; and yet all those things are appearances, of the wisdom, those which are of the understanding; and of the perception of loves, those which are of the will, of the Angels; for they are created in a moment by the Lord, and are also dissipated in a moment: they are permanent, or not permanent, according to the constancy or inconstancy in them of those whose appearances they are . . .

xii.3⁴. For the mind of man is his Spiritual World; and his body is his natural world.

5 M.4. (The first experiences of men in the Spiritual World. (Quoted in full under NOVITIATE.)

10. The Angels rejoined, You are now in the Spiritual World, and as yet you know not but that you are in the natural world. Here, Heaven, where the Angels are, is above your head, and Hell, where devils and satans are, is beneath your feet. Is not the ground on which you and we are standing land? Beat it with your feet, and know.

4947. Those who have loved to live splendidly . . .

5165³. If love to the Lord and charity towards the neighbour had formed their interiors, there is a derivative resplendence in their faces.

5248. Spirits appear in garments devoid of resplendence; but Angels in garments which have resplendence, and which are as if formed from resplendence; for the resplendence itself around them appears as a garment . . . The resplendence in their garments is from the good of love and of charity; for this good by its shining through confers resplendence.

5319. Truth from the Divine is represented by garments of such bright whiteness=caudor-and resplendence; because the brightness and resplendence of Heaven are from the light which is from the Lord, which is Divine truth. Ill.

5954². Those appear in bright resplendent garments who are in truths of faith which are from good; for the good shines through the truth; whence is the resplendence.

7711². 'To wait for brightnesses' (Is.lix.9)=the good of truth; for the resplendence of light is from good. E.526¹¹.

8906³. No longer to have light from faith and love is 'to withdraw their shining' (Joel ii.10).

8988³. The Angels appear . . . in beauty and resplendence according to the quality of the good from truths.

9263⁵. 'To shine as the stars' (Dan.xii.3)=to be in the intelligence of truth and the wisdom of good, and thence in eternal happiness.

[A.] 9406⁵. That at the Lord's presence the internal sense appears, such as it is in Heaven, in its glory, is signified by, 'at the brightness before Him His clouds passed away' (Ps. xviii. 12). E. 594⁶.

9434. Divine truth in Heaven itself resplendent from the good of love. Sig. and Ex.

9930. That 'the plate' = illustration, was from its resplendence; for it shone from the gold upon Aaron's forehead; and all resplendence = illustration (or enlightenment) such as there is in the Heavens from the Lord as a Sun.

10330^e. Fatuous humen shines before their eyes from things confirmatory and persuasive: whether it is false, or true, it shines. But this resplendence becomes mere thick darkness when light from Heaven inflows.

10536. These appear clothed in white resplendent garments.

—². The resplendence is from the Divine good.

10574⁷. 'The brightness of her glory' (Is. lxvi. 11) = the love of truth from the Lord. (= Divine truth from which is doctrine. E. 365³⁹.)

H. 178. See GARMENT, here. ISI.

347. Those in this love are in heavenly intelligence, and in Heaven 'shine as with the brightness of the expanse' (Dan. xii. 3). 356³. 518, Ex.

352. Falsities, when confirmed, may shine = splendescere; but not in the light of Heaven.

359. Man may dwell and live splendidly according to his condition . . .

411. All resplendent as with gold, etc.

518. It is Divine truth which shines in Heaven . . . and use turns the rays of this light into various resplendences.

S. 40³. 'He lived splendidly every day' (Luke xvi. 19) = because they had and read the Word.

W. 221^e. After His advent the Sun appeared in greater resplendence.

P. 5². Divine fire and Divine resplendence in the Sun; and from the Sun spiritual heat and light.

233¹¹. The surface of the love of self makes a certain resplendence of light . . .

R. 782. 'Fat and splendid things' (Rev. xviii. 14) = celestial and spiritual affections of good and truth . . . Affections of truth are called 'splendid,' because they come forth from the light of Heaven, and its resplendence in minds . . .

S14. 'Fine linen clean and bright' (Rev. xix. 8) = brilliant from good, and pure from truth. (It is called 'bright' from spiritual good. E. 1222.)

3563^e. Like a sponge which absorbs water both clear and foul. 9382².

H. 354. They (there) imbibe falsity as a sponge does water. P. 17. E. 118².

479⁵. Love is like spongy and porous wood . . .

I. 12³. Like noble wine in a clean sponge.

T. 364. Man would (then) be, as to his flesh, a mere sponge.

D. 6072. Idleness is like a sponge . . .

D. Min. 4739. The exercises on trees, which are like a sponge or other mouldiness.

E. 627^e. They placed the filled sponge on a reed (Matt.xxvii.48). Ex.

695²². As a sponge imbibes water and oil.

Coro. 28². Man's mind would then be like a sponge, which imbibes water largely, but cannot evacuate it.

Sponsors. Patrini.

R. 224¹¹. When adult, he does the things the sponsors promised for him, which are repentance and faith in God; for they promise, first, that he shall renounce the devil and all his works; and, secondly, that he shall believe in God. All infants in Heaven are initiated into these two things. T. 530².

T. 685^e. The priest afterwards turns to the sponsors, and asks whether they renounce the devil and all his works, and whether they receive the faith; to which the sponsors reply, in the infant's stead, Yes. (These two things) accomplish regeneration.

Spontaneous. Spontaneus.

Spontaneously. Sponte.

A. 1947. Without this freedom, or spontaneity, or voluntariness, man cannot be reformed.

4029. Things which were spontaneous. Sig. and Ex.

Vernal. Vernalis, Vernus.

Verdant, To be. Vernare.

A. 34². Faith from love is like the light of the sun in the time of spring . . . 2231³. 2388². F.32^e.

553. Those in mutual love, in Heaven, continually advance to the spring-time of their youth. H.414.

1577². As in the time of spring, when all things vegetate . . .

1622. All things (there) appear in their most beautiful spring and flower.

1726. See PEACE, here. 5052. 5662².

1773. A vernal heat from the Word.

1837². The first age of the Church is compared to the spring, when all things bloom.

3643. In proportion as the Angels are in love, charity, and the derivative faith, they are in an aura of vernal light and heat.

3696². After temptations, the state is like one of spring, which succeeds one of winter.

4301². As the eye is affected with the flowers in gardens and meadows in the time of spring.

5482². The sun then inflows with heat (also), as happens in the time of spring and summer . . .

5725². This is the morning, or spring, of Spirits.

7056². The light in Heaven is like the vernal light, to which heat is united . . .

9213. To these states correspond the spring-vern-times and summer times on earth.

10834. (In the Sixth Earth) there is perpetual spring-time and summer-time, because the year is so short . . . whence the ground is verdant-vern-continuously.

H. 166. Spring and morning are turned into the idea of a state of love and wisdom such as exists in the Angels' first state.

289. See DAWN, here.

489². (Such) live there in a vernal-vern-temperateness.

W. 73. ('Spring' = the first time of the Church.)

102. When the heat and light in the Heavens make a one, it is like spring-time with the Angels.

104^e. Hence the Angels have perpetual spring. 105². I.4².

R. 926³. There then breathed a vernal heat from Heaven. M.137.

M. 137¹. The reason why, when we approached, there breathed on thee as it were a vernal heat, is that in our Heaven conjugal love and that heat act as a one. . . In Heaven, where there is vernal heat, there is love truly conjugal; for no where else is there what is vernal than where heat and light are united in equal proportions.

—⁵. Our Sun remains at a middle altitude; and hence it is that the heat and light which proceed from it make perpetual spring; and that a perpetual Vernal breathes into those with whom love is united with wisdom in equal proportions. . . Hence, also, are the germinations on your Earth, and the pairing of your birds and animals in the times of spring; for the vernal heat opens their interiors even to their inmosts, which are called their souls, and affects them, and implants its Conjugal in them. . . But with men there is a perpetual influx of vernal heat from the Lord, and therefore they can be delighted in marriage at all times, even in the middle of winter; for males have been created receptions of wisdom. . . and females of love of the male's wisdom; and hence it is that as we approached there breathed on thee a vernal heat attended with a sweet odour, like that from the first growths in gardens and fields.

147^e. These things are from the vernal temperateness of (natural) light and heat; but those are from the vernal temperateness of (spiritual) light and heat.

355^e. Love truly conjugal is exactly like the vernal heat, from the influx of which all things aspire to germinations and fructifications; nor is there any other heat in that Heaven.

T. 687². Regeneration is represented by the flowering of all things in the time of spring.

D. 5627. In the other life they do not know what spring, summer, autumn, and winter are.

E. 691². Occurs. 701^e.

942^e. It is the time of spring for man when he enters Heaven, which takes place when his Internal is opened: previous to this it is the winter time with him.

1171⁵. Then the man is like a garden in the time of spring, when heat is united to light . . .

Spring up. Oboriri. T.209³. 644. 665¹. De Verbo 7⁷.
